CONTRIBUTORS' NOTES

Terry L. Birdwhistell directs the University of Kentucky Library Oral History Program and has published on such subjects as Happy Chandler and the history of WHAS radio.

Robert M. Ireland is Professor of American Constitutional and Legal History at the University of Kentucky. His books and articles on Kentucky's counties and its criminal justice system include Little Kingdoms: The Counties of Kentucky, 1850-1891 (University Press of Kentucky, 1977).

Joseph Katz of the University of South Carolina is at work on a biography of Stephen Crane. Among his many books and articles is The Late Charles Brockden Brown (coedited with Robert Hemenway, 1976), the first publication of Paul Allen's "lost" 1811 life of America's first professional novelist.

Donald Livingston is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Northern Illinois University and a founder of the Hume Society. He edited Hume: A Re-Evaluation (Fordham University Press, 1976) and is the author of Hume's Philosophy of Common Life (University of Chicago Press, forthcoming).

Judith H. McDowell teaches English at the University of Texas at Arlington and publishes in the field of comparative literature. Her edition of Rousseau's La nouvelle Héloïse (Pennsylvania State University Press, 1968) is in her own translation.

Stephen M. Parrish is Professor of English at Cornell University and general editor of the Cornell Wordsworth and the Cornell Concordances. The edition of Poems in Two Volumes referred to in his essay has just been published by Cornell University Press.

J.P. Telotte is in the Department of English at Georgia Tech. His articles have appeared in Genre, Modern Fiction Studies, South Atlantic Bulletin, Southern Quarterly, and Film Criticism.

The Kentucky Review gratefully acknowledges the permission of New Directions to reprint the poem "E.P. Ode pour l'élection de son sepulcre" from Personae, copyright 1926 by Ezra Pound. The poem appeared in an essay on Pound in the Autumn 1979 issue of this journal.
