The Probabilities of Sinking for Kerry Coons

Peter Neufeld
San Francisco State University

DOI: https://doi.org/10.13023/DISCLOSURE.08.06

Follow this and additional works at: https://uknowledge.uky.edu/disclosure

Part of the Poetry Commons

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License.

Recommended Citation
DOI: https://doi.org/10.13023/DISCLOSURE.08.06
Available at: https://uknowledge.uky.edu/disclosure/vol8/iss1/6

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Social Theory at UKnowledge. It has been accepted for inclusion in disClosure: A Journal of Social Theory by an authorized editor of UKnowledge. For more information, please contact UKnowledge@lsv.uky.edu.
Peter Neufeld

The Probabilities of Sinking for Kerry Coons

Altitudes often reach 30,000 feet or more the improbability of flying a nearly prenatal instinct to fear death by falling in human life

a lack of support or airspeed are inevitable

the process of travel by boat for example

rusted rail and leaning give way to watch island

appear then disappear turn head follow strict increments of

horizontal gradations of opaque to transparent mist

the brown of river
gives way imperceptibly to the blue green of sea

Hard to express yourself clearly and to be heard. Support promised to be given turning out to be merely a dream. If looking for a mate, watch out for a possible serious mistake. Legal case in your favor. Winning good company. Meeting relatives. No lucks.

Tendency towards an aim does not imply that the aim is attained.
The aim is attainable only in approximations.
sugar snow
beneath thick slabs of ice give way to the occasional science of the avalanche
as unpredictable as they are imprecise

the firebreather speaks a new language of heat and kerosene members of that profession are highly susceptible to consumption and chronic bronchial inflammation

The loss of the Miranda was still fresh on everyone’s mind. The main object of the departure was to study Greenland’s glacier system, the inland ice cap and icebergs; and to map the hitherto unknown portions of Melville Bay. Sketch the human, animal, and vegetable. Name life of the arctic region. Visit Peary’s camp and bring back news of him in advance of his return. Return to Philadelphia. Drift into journalism. Engineer the mountains of Pennsylvania. He has since time traveled extensively. Hunted in the vicinity of Equator. Shot reindeer feeding on lichen in the Arctic Tundra.

little shrines
the house beautiful
in other time, other season cousin Anthony and I inspired little rivers
through suffering
little journeys
we found black pebbles
and cool to the touch five sins of an architect tick-tock treasures

the nursery
the infants magazine
the vanishing pictures
of yellow beauty
white wings and similar things zigzag journeys around the world

Lisa Stein and Amy Wright (Re)-Defining Scottish Nationalism after Devolution disclosure interviews Cairns Craig (4 April 1998)

Cairns Craig is the Chair of the English Department at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, the general editor of the Determinations series on Scottish culture and politics (Edinburgh UP) and general editor of a four-volume series entitled The History of Scottish Literature (also Edinburgh UP). He is the author of Yeats, Eliot, Pound and the Politics of Poetry: Richest to the Richest (1982), Out of History: Narrative Paradigms in Scottish and English Culture (1996) and of many articles on Scottish literature, nationalism, regionalism, and cultural identity. His most recent publication is “I.A. Richards, T.S. Eliot and Empiricism’s Art of Memory” (Revue de Morale et de Metaphysique, forthcoming) and he is currently writing a book on the twentieth-century Scottish novel.

With Scottish devolution having occurred in September of 1997, Dr. Craig’s participation in the University of Kentucky Committee for Social Theory Distinguished