Editor’s Preface and Acknowledgments

Richard Parmer
University of Kentucky

DOI: https://doi.org/10.13023/disclosure.22.01
Advisory Board

Benjamin Agger, Sociology
University of Texas at Arlington

James Boon, Anthropology
Princeton University

Matthew Edney, Geography
University of Southern Maine

Nancy Fraser, Political Science
The New School for Social Research

Cynthia Freeland, Philosophy
University of Houston

Sander L. Gilman
Graduate Institute of the Liberal Arts
Emory University

Derek Gregory, Geography
University of British Columbia

Peter-Uwe Hohendahl, German
Cornell University

Anton Kaes, German
University of California Berkeley

Douglas Kellner, Philosophy of Education
University of California Los Angeles

Dominick LaCapra, History
Cornell University

Maggie McFadden, Interdisciplinary Studies
Appalachian State University

Marjorie Perloff, English
Stanford University

Barney Warf, Geography
University of Kansas

Samuel Weber, German
Northwestern University

James A. Winders, History
Appalachian State University

Irving Zeitlin, Sociology
University of Toronto

disClosure 22

Editorial Collective

Richard Parmer, Editor

Lee Bullodk
Jason Grant
Rachael Hoy
Malene Jacobsen
Vanessa Marquez
Travis Martin
Mary Beth Schmid
Lain Tutalar
Christina Williams

Marion Rust, Faculty Advisor

Art Editing
Richard Parmer

Cover Art
Peggy Coots

Printing
Copy Express

__disClosure is a refereed journal produced in conjunction with the Committee on Social Theory at the University of Kentucky. Funding for this issue was provided by the Office of the Vice President for Research, the College of Arts and Sciences, the Graduate School, and the Student Government Association. Artists may retain copyright over contributions. No part of this work may be reproduced or reprinted without written consent of disClosure or where the artist retains copyright, the artist.

2013, ISSN __

disClosure, editors
213 Patterson Office Tower
University of Kentucky
Lexington, KY 40506-0027
disclosurejournal@gmail.com

http://www.as.uky.edu/socialtheory disClosure: a journal of social theory

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No. 22</th>
<th>Security</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Table of Contents:

Editor’s Preface and Acknowledgments
– Richard Parmer

Reduced, Reused, Recycled
Rethink, Remove, Refuse
– Bryan Reinholdt

Checked Bags: A Litany of Potentially Explosive Things
– Sherrin Frances

Some Breaks Remain
While we’re on the subject of the quatrain
– Andrew Calis

The Abandonment of Modernity: Bare Life and the Camp in Homo Sacer and Hotel Rwanda
– Carolyn Ownbey

Actual as opposed to possible
– Peggy Coots

Security of the Nation: Why Do We Need ‘Mothers of Martyrs’ in Turkey?
– Esra Gedik

for this earth too long hauled later valorization
– Bob Mulligan

The Embodiment of Collective Exclusion: Transcending the Borders of Social Segregation in Harry Potter
– Alyssa Hunziker

XX Chromosome (1)
– Peggy Coots

Exploring Security: Discussions with Jane Guyer, Stuart Eklen, Russ Castronovo, and Michael Hardt
Contributors:

Andrew Calis is currently teaching at West Virginia University (where he got his MA) as well as Alderson-Broaddus College. He is enrolled in the English PhD program at Catholic University of America and will begin in the fall semester.

Peggy Coots is currently a first year MFA candidate at the University of Kentucky and plans to graduate in the spring of 2015. Her work challenges views on the expectations and capabilities of the female body through abstract mark making. She is interested in views of (female) biology micro- and macroscopically.

Sherrin Frances worked as a TSA Security Officer while she completed her Ph.D. at the European Graduate School in Saas-Fe, Switzerland. She is now an Assistant Professor of English at Saginaw Valley State University, where she teaches composition and writing courses. Her research revolves around an exploration of the various notions of security that are embedded within systems, structures, and taxonomies.

Esra Gedik received her M.A. at Middle East Technical University in Political Science and Public Administration with a thesis called “Ideological Ambivalence of Motherhood in case of ‘Mothers of Martyrs’ in Turkey.” She has started a Ph.D. at the same university in the department of Sociology. Esra studies militarism, nationalism, conscientious objections of women, women’s labor, and LGBTT and gender issues in Turkey.

Alyssa Hunziker is a graduate student at the University of Florida. Her interests include twentieth century literature, empire studies, and postcolonial literature.

Bob Mulligan is a career special educator currently lecturing part time in two NJ universities. His professional interests in the areas of disability, labeling, and stigma are balanced by abiding love for family, friends, and all the birds of North America.

Carolyn Ownbey has a BA in English from UC Davis (2008), a MA in English from Boston College (2011), and will be attending McGill University in the fall to begin doctoral work. She focuses primarily on 20th century post-traumatic texts and poststructuralist theory, exploring theories of justice, ethics, and mourning in cinematic and literary narratives.

Bryan Reinholdt is an artist and teacher. Anti-war veteran. Citizen. Son. He is currently the executive director of the Center for Creative Art Teaching and finishing his Art Education Masters this summer. He will soon pursue a doctorate degree. His final project is a website on self-directed learning in art education at www.choicearted.com.
Editor’s Preface
-Richard Parmer

Security is a topic that can, at first, seem so every-day that it may appear too banal a theme for an entire team-taught course on social theory—or a full issue of a social theory journal. However, as the spring 2012 Social Theory 600 course here at the University of Kentucky and this journal reveal, the ubiquity of this concept is exactly why it is such a rich area of academic inquiry. Indeed, recent events make this idea quite timely, some of which include several recent government elections around the world, rebellions in Egypt and Syria, world-wide financial instability, and, most recently in the United States, the explosions of two bombs during the 2013 Boston Marathon. Security, and the lack there of, connects to such topics as nationalism, boundaries, empire, citizenship and migration, technology, violence and terror, networks, governance, subjectivity, economics, geopolitics, public(s), virtual life, and natural resources. These themes and many others were taken up by the Collective of this issue of disClosure, our contributors, and a wide range of visiting scholars, including Dr. Michael Hardt, Dr. Jane Guyer, Dr. Stuart Elden, and Dr. Russ Castronovo. This issue of disClosure explores the concept of (in)security through a variety of disciplines, media, and theoretical perspectives.

I would also like to take this opportunity to announce that this will be the final printed issue of disClosure. Throughout this year, we have completed the groundwork for moving our journal online. Moving to a digital publication that is hosted through UKnowledge will provide new opportunities for our journal. It will expand the genres of work that we can publish and provide easy, free access to every issue, starting with our first in 1992. We look forward to these exciting new prospects for the journal. I hope that our readers will share our enthusiasm for the new digital home of disClosure.

Acknowledgments

Compiling and completing this issue of disClosure would not have been possible without the assistance of Timothy Vatovec and Eir-Anne Edgar, the editors of last year’s issue. I would like to thank Dr. Marion Rust for her support as our faculty advisor, as well as for her guidance as the current head of the Committee on Social Theory at UK. As with each issue, this year’s edition is an extension of the team-taught, interdisciplinary course offered each spring by the Committee, which is centered on providing different perspectives on a common theme. Last year’s course, entitled “Security,” co-taught by Dr. Andy Doolen (English), Dr. Susan Roberts (Geography), Dr. Lisa Cliggett (Anthropology), and Dr. Masamichi Inoue (Modern & Classical Languages); was the guiding theme for this issue. I thank Kari Burchfield for all of her work on behalf of the Committee on Social Theory and disClosure. Finally, I would like to thank the members of this year’s Collective, all of whom had to make time during their own studies to collaborate on our CFP and review our submissions. I wish co-editors Rachael Hoy and Christina Williams luck in compiling our first digital issue, which will explore the theme of Mapping.
Collective Members

Richard Parmer earned his BA in English and History at Presbyterian College and his MA at East Tennessee State University. He is currently a Ph.D. student at the University of Kentucky. His work utilizes ecocriticism, gender, and sexuality as critical lenses for interpreting early American and Appalachian literatures.

Lee Bullock is a graduate student in the English Department at the University of Kentucky. He currently works with actor network theory as a technique for reading literature. He is looking forward to upcoming research that examines mental health and incarceration.

Jason C Grant received his MA in French and Francophone Studies and his BAs in English and Linguistics from the University of Kentucky. His research focuses on the intersection of narratology and urban theory.

Rachael Hoy is a Ph.D. student in the English Department at the University of Kentucky. Her research examines late 19th and early 20th century American literature spatially and materially, considering the forces shaping identity and the power mechanisms at work in the changing landscape. She will serve as co-editor of the forthcoming issue of disClosure on Mapping (with Christina Williams), expected spring 2014.

Malene H. Jacobsen is a second year M.A. student at the Department of Geography. Malene's research is concerned with issues of space, migrant, refugee, border, security, and citizenship. The research is situated within feminist geopolitical literature and social theory.

Vanessa Marquez is an MA student in the Department of Geography. She studies Latino immigration in Lexington, Kentucky.

Travis Martin researches trauma and war in nineteenth and twentieth century war literature. He is also the managing editor of The Journal of Military Experience and founder of Military Experience and the Arts, a group that provides one-on-one writing mentorship to the military community.

Mary Elizabeth Schmid is currently a doctoral student in cultural anthropology at the University of Kentucky. Her dissertation research focuses on transnationalism, rurality, livelihoods and kinship in Mexico and Appalachia. She received her Bachelors of Science degree in Spanish and Anthropology from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 2008 and worked as a bilingual migrant education outreach worker in western North Carolina before returning to graduate school in 2011.

Lacin Tutalar is a PhD Student in Geography at the University of Kentucky. Her research focuses on youth, urban art spaces (particularly music) and the politics of space. She has been involved with disClosure through her interest in political and emotional geographies and theories of space.
Christina Williams is a Ph.D. student in the English Department at the University of Kentucky. Her research interests include 19th century American literature and the intersections of law and literature. She will serve as co-editor of the forthcoming issue of disClosure on Mapping.