W.L. Matthews Jr. Dies

Professor and former Dean W. L. Matthews, Jr. (left) greets Charles E. English '60, Vice-President of the Kentucky Bar Association and William M. Deep '52, new Lafferty Society Fellow, at the 1984 law alumni banquet.

UK law alumni, students and faculty were saddened to learn of the September 2 passing of Professor and former Dean W. L. Matthews, Jr., a leader in College affairs for almost 40 years. His death came at age 66, after a short illness.

Born in Livermore (McLean County), Kentucky, he graduated from College High in Bowling Green, the town he always considered “home”. He graduated from Western Kentucky State College (now WKU) and the UK College of Law. He received an L.L.M. and an S.J.D. from the University of Michigan School of Law, where he was a Cook Fellow for Graduate Study and Research.

Professor Matthews joined the UK law faculty in 1947, after serving as a major in the Army Air Force in Europe during World War II and practicing for one year with the Bowling Green law firm of Finn and Orendorf. He was promoted to full professor in 1949 and served twice as acting dean (1951-52 and 1956-57) before being formally appointed in 1957. He held that position until 1971.

W. L. Matthews became a nationally known figure in legal education. During the 60s he was a consultant to the University of Mississippi College of Law, and a visiting professor at New York University School of Law (on three occasions), the University of Michigan Law School and the University of North Carolina School of Law. He was an elected member of the American Law Institute.

During his tenure as dean, the College of Law experienced unprecedented growth in size and reputation. A new building, designed and constructed during his deanship, was dedicated in 1965 in ceremonies presided over by then Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Dean Robert G. Lawson, a former student of Matthews’, said about his impact on the school: “Under his leadership the school broadened its horizons and its mission. He will be remembered in the law school as one of its most distinguished graduates and leaders. He gave us almost 40 years of dedicated service.”
Many changes are occurring within the Law School and every effort is being made to report on these changes. There are, however, a great many other developments, both within and without the Law School, that are of interest to alumni, friends, faculty and students. Readers are therefore encouraged to submit items of general interest, of either news or commentary value, for publication.
Dean's Message

Within a few months after becoming Dean, I discovered that my two immediate predecessors had done the College some enormous favors. In 1983, when developing our continuing legal education program, Dean George Hardy had the foresight and good judgment to employ John Hickey as the Director. A couple of years later George observed the good qualities of a student who was ready to graduate from the College and offered him the job of assistant dean. The end result was the employment of Paul Van Booven by the College. Not too long thereafter, Dean Tom Lewis began to look for a second assistant dean to work with the students of the College on placement and with the alumni on a wide variety of matters important to the school. He found Carroll Stevens and made him the third member of a truly outstanding administrative staff.

I can say without qualification that I have never worked with individuals who equal John, Paul, and Carroll in ability, dedication, and professionalism. They give more of themselves to the institution than anyone could ever reasonably expect. They strive for excellence in everything they do and rarely fall short of their goals. I am sure that other law schools have individuals in important administrative positions who are as good as John, Paul, and Carroll. But I am sure that none have any who are better.

Because the work that is done in the classrooms of the College is most critical to its success and because the work of these individuals is done elsewhere for the most part, I am sorry to say that they rarely receive the kind of praise and recognition that is deserved. Although their contributions are many and varied and made on a regular basis, there is one special contribution made by one of the three during this past year to which I would like to direct attention.

Carroll Stevens has just concluded a year of service as president of the National Association for Law Placement (NALP). He was elected to this position by representatives of the more than 700 organizations—mostly law schools and law firms—which make up the association. It was a distinct honor to be so elected, and Carroll has distinguished himself and the College even more than anyone could have expected through a year of outstanding service to the organization.

Under Carroll's leadership, NALP has had a very productive year. A number of important projects have been undertaken and completed in areas of research, equal employment, policy-making, and the application of technology to the lawyer personnel process. With Carroll as principal drafter, the organization has developed an entirely new statement of good practices for students, law schools and employers. The Principles and Standards for Law Placement and Recruitment Activities establish the "rules of the road" nationally for all those who engage in placement and hiring. The American Bar Association, the primary law school accreditation authority, draws heavily from these Principles in the guidelines it issues to persons who conduct accreditation inspections.

The accomplishments of NALP under Carroll's direction have not gone without notice. Observers in the world of legal education and in the legal profession, as well as the national legal media, have been uniformly complimentary of them.

During his year as President of NALP, Carroll acquired a unique and extremely valuable understanding of the job market for lawyers, one which will enable him to better serve our students in the years ahead. Through his dedication to quality work, he did a great deal to enhance the reputation of the College among employers and other law schools. All of us can take pride in his accomplishments as leader of this important national law school organization.

W.L. Matthews Jr. Dies (Continued from page 1)

service. The College has lost an outstanding teacher and those of us who are closely connected with it have lost a true friend."

Carroll M. Redford, Jr. '59, Glasgow, president of the Law Alumni Association, said in reminiscing about Matthews: "Dean Matthews always had time for students. One never sensed with him that 'dean's business' superseded the personal needs of individuals. He was a wonderful person."

Matthews, appointed UK Alumni Professor by President Otis A. Singleton in 1974, was named in 1978 by the UK Alumni Association as one of six Great Teachers. He was for several years the UK faculty representative to the Southeastern Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association and for the last nine years was a member of the NCAA infractions committee. He also served on the UK Athletics Association board, in the positions of faculty chairman and secretary.

"W. L. was a truly outstanding leader who loved the University and he was the type of individual who is impossible to replace and who will be sorely missed," said Dr. Singleterry. "His contributions as teacher, dean and faculty representative on the UK athletics board, the SEC and the NCAA were tremendous."

He was a member of Omicron Delta Kappa; Phi Alpha Delta; the Fayette, Kentucky and American Bar Associations; the Order of the Coif; the American Law Institute; and the American Association of University Professors. He was also active in the Lexington community, serving as president of the UK AAUP chapter, the Lexington Optimist Club, the Lexington Community Chest and Blue Chip Investments. He belonged to the Maxwell Street Presbyterian Church and the Lexington Country Club.

Professor Matthews is survived by his wife, Carol Torrence Matthews, one daughter, Camille Torrence Schwert, of Rochester, NY, and one granddaughter.
ALUMNI NEWS

Norman E. Harned '65, a member of the Bowling Green firm of Cole, Harned and Broderick, is the author of Kentucky Workers' Compensation, published by the Lawyers Co-Operative Publishing Co. A comprehensive practitioner's guide, it is a part of the Practice Systems Library.

Richard E. Fitzpatrick '70 has become a member of the Lexington firm of Gess Mattingly Saunier & Atchison. Rebecca Kathryn Jude '73 and William A. Rees '78 have recently become associated with the firm.

Sheryl G. Snyder '71, a partner in Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs, Louisville, has been named president-elect of the Louisville Bar Association. Rebecca Westerfield '76 is vice-president.

David L. Holmes '73 has been named a partner in Vimont & Wills, Lexington. Anne Adams Chesnut '80 recently joined the firm as an associate.

William G. Francis '73 is president of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association. Judge Julia K. Tackett '71 is president-elect.

Andrea Riddle Hilliard

Andrea Riddle Hilliard '75 has been appointed executive assistant to the American Gas Association's vice president for government relations, Michael Baly, Ill.

In her new position, Hilliard will assist in administering and coordinating the activities of the Association's government relation group. A.G.A. is a trade association representing more than 300 natural gas pipeline and distribution companies. Prior to her promotion, Hilliard served as manager and counsel for A.G.A.'s legislative and regulatory affairs division. Earlier in her career she worked for Ashland Oil, Inc. as an attorney with primary responsibility for Ashland's marketing affairs.

Damon R. Talley '75 has joined in forming the firm of Talley & Bond in Hodgenville, Kentucky. He previously practiced in Munfordville.

Carolyn A. Dye '76 has been named to partnership in the Los Angeles, California firm of Troy, Malin, Pottinger & Casden.

Sheryl G. Snyder '71, a partner in Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs, Louisville, has been named president-elect of the Louisville Bar Association. Rebecca Westerfield '76 is vice-president.

1983-84 Fund Chairman's Message

When I was approached 16 months ago to head the 1983 College of Law Annual Fund, I reacted with a great deal of trepidation. I worried aloud to my good friend and classmate, Dean Bob Lawson, that topping the '82 drive would be a nearly impossible task for anybody. Bill Robinson, the chairman for that year, had set a very high standard.

I was reassured by Bob and Associate Dean Carroll Stevens that a veritable legion of alumni volunteers would rally round to support our efforts, and that the generous spirit of law school alumni and friends had only begun to be tapped. And so, filled with anxiety, but committed to advancing an important cause, I signed on. Thanks to their good work and yours, I now have the privilege of reporting on what was the most exciting, productive fund-raising period in the College's history.

We all owe my fellow Louisvillian, Wendell Cherry, a great debt of gratitude for what he helped us accomplish over the past few months. He gave generously of his own resources. The "Cherry Challenge", beginning as it did in the final months of the '83 annual fund, proved to be an enormously attractive opportunity for other donors, and it was in large measure responsible for our record-breaking receipts.

Many individuals, companies, and law firms joined in this campaign, all in a very meaningful way. We recorded the largest number of gifts ever, the largest annual fund total ever, the largest average gift ever, and the most successful special project campaign ever. The particulars are described elsewhere in this report. I encourage you to review them.

The creation of the three new endowed professorships, the extension of the alumni professorship concept, the establishment of the new special purpose endowments, and the other advances which have been made possible this year by Fund proceeds have advanced our school considerably. We are now one of the South's leading public law schools in fund-raising, and we are comfortably above the national private giving average for all law schools. Those are remarkable achievements for an alumni body of our size and type, and ones which should cause us all to be proud.

Thank you for your most generous help and support, and congratulations on what it has achieved.

Charles S. Cassis '63, Chairman, 1983-84 College of Law Fund, addressing the law alumni banquet May 9.
John G. Heyburn II '76, Louisville, has become a partner in the firm of Brown, Todd & Heyburn. Kathryn P. Ross '83 and Rudy A. Bisciotti '83 have recently become associated with the firm.

Gary W. Callahan '77 has been appointed general counsel and secretary of Inspiration Coal Inc., Knoxville, Tennessee.

Ron Morgan '77 practices in Albuquerque, New Mexico. His emphasis is in plaintiffs' personal injury trial work. His victory on his clients' behalf in the New Mexico's Supreme Court case of Ramirez, et al v. Armstrong resulted in that court changing New Mexico law to permit actions for negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Betsy Browning '78 is vice-president of the graphics group of Ogilvy & Mather, a large national public relations firm. Her office is in Houston, Texas.

Richard P. Caton '79 has joined the Seminole, Florida firm of Fisher & Sauls.

William W. Cotting, Jr. '79 in May, 1983 was awarded a Master of Laws degree in Taxation from the Boston University School of Law. He is a partner in the Northborough, Massachusetts firm of Leland & Cotting, P.C.

James G. Harralson '79 has joined the Legal Department of South Central Bell Telephone Company as an attorney in its Headquarters Office in Louisville. He was formerly associated with the firm of Holbrook, Gary, Wible & Sullivan, P.S.C. in Owensboro.

Leona Power '79 of Lexington worked in her first political campaign in 1968. Richard M. Nixon was running for president, and she was 13.

Now, with a law degree from the University of Kentucky and experience in a long string of Kentucky Republican campaigns, she is still getting jobs at an early age. At 28, she just became a deputy assistant secretary in the Department of the Interior.

Deputy assistant secretaries — Interior alone has eight of them — are among the top federal appointees who do not need Senate approval.

They are the worker bees of the Washington bureaucracy. They do the bidding of the assistant secretaries, the high-visibility folks who have gone through the confirmation process.

How did she get there so quickly? "I do work hard," the 1972 graduate of Tates Creek High School in Lexington said in her new office, where a picture of Ronald Reagan in his ranch clothes is one of the few personal mementos she's had time to put up.

"And so far I've just been real fortunate to be at the right place at the right time."

Power's boss is Garrey Carruthers, the assistant secretary in charge of federal lands and minerals. He was in the news a great deal last year because his bailiwick includes the coal-leasing program so controversial under former Interior Secretary James G. Watt.

Under a reorganization plan initiated by William P. Clark, Watt's successor, one of Carruthers' two deputies lost his job. It was a lucky break for Power, though, who for the last year had been in charge of reviewing and coordinating legislation for the Department. Carruthers chose her as the replacement.

"She is — one — loyal," Carruthers said yesterday in explaining his choice. "And two, she is a producer." As for Power's age, the agricultural economist from New Mexico said that's something he doesn't ever grant much attention.

Clark, of course, had the final say, but Power's 20-minute meeting with him was relaxed and uneventful; the next day she moved into her new job.

One of her main duties is to help Carruthers look after the U.S. Office of Surface Mining. Under Clark's reorganization, the agency that is supposed to keep Kentucky and all the other coal states honest about reclamation is now in Carruthers' domain.

When Gov. Martha Layne Collins came to Washington for experience and eventually intends to return to Lexington to work as a (Continued on page 6)
The Cherry Challenge “On the Road Again”–

by Carroll Stevens

The main office of Humana Corporation was our destination one day last fall—Charles English ('60), Bob Lawson, and I. Charlie had arranged for us to have lunch with his close friend and law school contemporary, Wendell Cherry, indicating in advance that we wanted to talk about the law school. Larry Leatherman ('53), one of our most active (and generous) supporters, and perhaps others, had talked with Mr. Cherry earlier about the possibility of some special help for the college. So, he knew in advance that we were not coming just to buy him lunch.

We had a very pleasant visit, exchanged some stories about our law school experiences, and talked about the character of the College of Law “then” and “now”. Bob and I highlighted some of the school’s accomplishments in recent years, identified some of its problems and needs, and told of our aspirations for the future. That Mr. Cherry was interested in these things presented no surprise. He and organizations with which he has been affiliated have long recognized the value in and responsibility for helping to develop their communities culturally and educationally. Consequently, when the conversation turned to the reason for our visit we encountered a most receptive altitude, an understanding of the needs of higher education, and a genuine interest in the welfare of the College.

Toward the end of lunch we talked about some specific ways in which he could help the school. He showed interest but made no commitment, asked us to write a letter containing a proposal, and true to his style covered the lunch we had promised to buy. A couple of days later the Dean mailed a letter requesting a gift of $100,000 to fund the College’s first endowed professorship, a breakthrough on a front long needed by the institution.

We had been told that Mr. Cherry would not be long in getting to the bottom line. Still, Bob Lawson was a little surprised to answer his phone a day after his letter was mailed only to find Mr. Cherry on the line. The conversation was brief and to the point: “I want to help the College. I believe that others who have benefitted from it should also want to help. I will give you $100,000 to fund a professorship, but only if you raise an additional $100,000 in “new gifts” to fund a second professorship. I will make my gift on July 1, 1984, if you have the matching money in hand by that time.”

Once Bob recovered from the jolt caused by the suddenness of this development, he took me next door for a soft drink and told me of good news and bad news: “Mr. Cherry is going to give us $100,000, the good news, and you and I are going to match it.” After recovering from my own shock I asked, “Where are you going to get your $99,900?”

The challenge was made.

ALUMNI NEWS

(Continued from page 5)

private attorney—and no doubt behind the scenes in politics.

“This position is what I came to do,” she said. “Two-and-a-half years ago, I couldn’t have written a better scenario.”

(c)1984, The Courier Journal, with permission.

John Warren Cline II ’80 has been appointed project manager, Stonewall Jackson Lake Real Estate Project Office, Weston, West Virginia. He was formerly an attorney-advisor in that office.

Phillip J. Shepherd ’80 has opened an office for the general practice of law at 307A West Main St., Frankfort, KY.

Michael H. Sims ’81 has joined the Legal Department of Capital Holding Corporation, which has its headquarters in Louisville.

Cherry Owens Callihan ’83, Barbourville, has opened a law office at 114A North Main St.

Elizabeth LeVan Riley ’83 is associated with the Jackson, Mississippi-
“The Response”

by
Robert G. Lawson

None of us in the College had ever had the opportunity to work on a challenge gift before. In fact, in all respects we were novices at finding private resources for improvement of the school. Our Annual Fund was still an “infant”, only six years old, and we had been able to raise more than $100,000 in total gifts for a full year only one time. And that one time had to serve as our base year. Now suddenly we were obligated to raise $100,000 in “additional” money and had but eight months to meet our goal. As we embarked, I was sure that we were in for a mad scramble right to the end. Carroll Stevens was more confident. He knew better than I the cards we had to play—the Law Alumni Board, the Visiting Committee, and a host of die-hard supporters.

Word about the “Cherry Challenge” spread from the halls of the law school to the offices and workplaces of graduates all across the state and beyond. And once people like Jim Stephenson, Charley Cassis, Jennifer Coffman, Barbara Edelman, Bob Busse, Pete Gullett, Tom Handy, Bill Stevens, David Taylor, Bill Baird, Bill Robinson, Bill Francis, Rick Siegel, David Sparks, Bill Garmer, Sheryl Snyder and others, got wind of the project, the ballgame was over—an early rout of substantial magnitude. All of these people and many more dug deeper than usual into their own pockets, prevailed on their friends to do the same, and provided Carroll and me with a long list of prospects to see.

And with that list we hit the road. During the next six months we visited more than twenty cities and towns in Kentucky both east and west, and talked with literally hundreds of alumni of the College. We could not possibly have been more graciously and hospitably received than we were, and the response to our request for help was overwhelming, as shown by the numbers and names which appear elsewhere in this issue of the Review.

Though the work was hard, the travels time-consuming, and the whole process difficult to manage at times, the whole experience was unqualifiedly satisfying and pleasant. Our journeys took us on a grand tour of what I call the “legal sights” of Kentucky—the county courthouses, corporate headquarters, beautiful law offices, and other places where our graduates serve the public with their work. We visited people not seen by us since their student days, saw classmates not seen since graduation, met some of the College’s oldest graduates, and made a host of new friends for ourselves and for the school.

We brought back to the College a lot more than gifts for the Cherry Challenge. Our experiences out in the state gave us a better sense of what our profession is like these days. We know our alumni and their communities a little better and have a much greater appreciation of their great contributions to the common good, not only as lawyers but also as business leaders, bankers, political leaders, officeholders, farmers, and the like. I have long believed that our College is one of the Commonwealth’s most important institutions. My encounters on the road have greatly reinforced that belief.

This experience has taught us something else of great importance: The loyalty of our alumni, and their interest in the welfare of the College and the University, will sustain the institution and make it a better place in good times and bad. The overwhelming success of this project was, as you might imagine, a gigantic boost to faculty morale. We were able to create three funded professorships instead of the one we had hoped for when we first visited Mr. Cherry. We are now in a position to retain our very best faculty members and, when the time comes, to attract better professors than might otherwise have been available to us. Unquestionably, a better future for the College has been assured through the generosity of Mr. Cherry and the hundreds of people who took up the challenge.

I have penned lots of letters of personal thanks to those who have helped with this undertaking, as have Carroll Stevens and others. But I want to repeat our expression of appreciation once more. Your efforts and gifts have meant a great deal to the school and they will continue to serve our students and our profession well into the future. All of us here are genuinely grateful for such generous support of our work.

ALUMNI NEWS

(Continued)

Susan Spector Miller ’83 has joined her husband Jack L. Miller ’62 in the general practice of law. The firm will be known as Miller & Miller. The couple resides and practices in Lexington.

In appointments made in early 1984 to fill District and Circuit Court vacancies, Governor Martha Layne Collins selected several UK College of Law graduates. They are:

Julia Hylton Adama ‘78, Winchester, 25th District, Clark and Madison counties.
Joyce Marie Albro ’78, Franklin, 48th District, Franklin County.
Robert B. Overstreet ’73, Versailles, 14th District, Woodford, Scott and Bourbon counties.
William T. Cain ‘58, Somerset, 28th District, Pulaski and Rockcastle counties.
Roderick Messer ’76, London, 27th District, Knox and Laurel counties.
Jeff D. Choate ’81, Ashby, 40th District, Clinton, Russell and Wayne counties.
John R. “Bobby” Morgan ’61, Hindman, 36th District, Knott and Magoffin counties.

John William Graves ’63, Paducah, 2nd District McCracken County.
Grady Roll ’58, Hopkinsville, 3rd District, Christian County.
Stanley M. Billingsley ’71, Carrollton, 19th District, Carroll, Grant and Owen counties.
Roger Neil Lewis ’72, Ft. Thomas, 17th District, Campbell County.
Jeffrey B. Dean ’81, Falmouth, 18th District, Harrison, Pendleton, Robertson and Nicholas counties.
Lewis Dunn Nichols ’55, Greenup, 19th District, Greenup and Lewis counties.
Edward A. Maye, Jr. ’51, Mount Sterling, 21st District, Bath, Menifee, Montgomery and Rowan counties.

Professor Bratt, named an Alumni Professor of Law in June, 1984, is a member of the Kentucky Governor’s Commission on Full Equality. She was recently reappointed to a new four-year term on the Kentucky Commission on Women. On April 26 she delivered a lecture at the Berea College annual convocation honoring outstanding women entitled “Women’s Rights: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow”. She also spoke on “Gender Discrimination in Higher Education” at the University of Louisville March 10.

William H. Fortune has published “Criminal Procedure Survey” in 72 Ky. L.J. 381 (1984). He has addressed a number of Continuing Legal Education programs in recent months, including one for Kentucky Circuit Judges (on Computer Evidence) in January, one sponsored by the Fayette County Bar Association in March, one for Kentucky appellate judges in May (in which he did a mock oral argument), and one on Conflicts in Criminal Cases, for the College of Law Continuing Legal Education Seminar held in June. In late summer, he lectured at different locations in the state on Criminal Discovery (for the College of Law’s District Bar seminars), Developments in Evidence Law (for the KBA Basic Skills program), and on trial techniques (for the Kentucky District Judges). Professor Fortune was recently appointed to the Ethics Committee of the Kentucky Bar Association and to the Public Advocacy Commission.

Kenneth B. Germain testified as an expert witness before the United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary, Subcommittee on Patents, Copyrights and Trademarks. The subject of the hearing was “The Trademark Clarification Act of 1983 (S. 1990, Feb. 1, 1984)”. He addressed the 106th Annual Meeting of the United States Trademark Association in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, May 14, on the subject “Review of Current Developments in U.S. Trademark/Unfair Competition Law in the Courts of General Jurisdiction: Lots of Action”. In June, he was on the faculty of the Bureau of National Affairs Seminar on Recent Developments in Trademark and Unfair Competition Law held in Hilton Head, South Carolina. That presentation was entitled “Overview of Developments in Trademark and Unfair Competition Law During the June 1982-May 1984 Biennium: Much Movement”.

Eugene R. Gaetke, also appointed in June, 1984 as an Alumni Professor of Law, attended the AALS Conference on Teaching Professional Responsibility, held in New Orleans, Louisiana in March. His article “Reframing the Classic Property Clause Theory” is currently being considered for publication by a number of leading law journals.

Professor Goldman has been elected vice-president of the Cincinnati Chapter of the Industrial Relations Research Association, and is in addition serving as an elected member of both the Executive Committee of the U.S. Branch of the International Society for Labor Law and the Editorial Advisory Committee of the Labor Law Group Trust. He serves on the Program Planning Committee and the Overseas Correspondence Committee of the National Academy of Arbitrators.

Willbut D. Ham has authored the Corporations article in the 1983-84 Kentucky Law Survey, 72 Ky. L.J. 263-311. It describes recent developments in corporation law at both the state and federal levels. He participated on a panel at the UK College of Law
CLE Seminar on Securities Law, the subject of which was "Recent Developments Concerning the Scope of the Duty of Disclosure." The program was held February 17-18.

Thomas P. Lewis, professor and former dean, was named by President Singletary as an Alumni Professor of Law, effective with the 1984-85 academic year. He has published a Book Review/Essay in 1 Constitutional Commentary 2, (Summer, 1984), a new journal published by the University of Minnesota School of Law. He is editor of and a contributing writer to the Mineral Law Handbook being published by the UK College of Law’s Mineral Law Center.

Professor Emeritus Paul Oberst was reappointed by Governor John Y. Brown ’61 on his last day in office to a fifth three-year term on the Kentucky Human Rights Commission. Professor Oberst had been previously appointed to the Commission by Governor Bert Combs ’37, Governor Ned Breathitt ’50 and Governor Wendell Ford, a fellow native of Daviess County. He has served as chairman of the Commission for six years.

Professor Oberst also has served since 1979 as a member of the Kentucky Advisory Committee to the United States Civil Rights Commission, which he will chair through 1985.

About the Human Rights Commission, Professor Oberst said, “It is an administrative agency, created by the Legislature to advance constitutional law. It now affords, among other things, a tort-like remedy for discrimination in employment, national origin, sex or age. It pretty well involves my principal interests as a law teacher”.

“The U.S. Civil Rights Commission, which was established to advise the Congress and the President, this year was involved in a 180 degree turnaround when President Reagan became dissatisfied with the advice it was giving him. The new Commission has advanced its opposition to busing and affirmative action in a series of 6-2 votes and the end is not in sight.”

Carroll D. Stevens, associate dean, completed his term as president of the National Association for Law Placement (NALP) on May 2, 1984, when he was honored at a banquet in Minneapolis at which Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, senior vice-president and general counsel for IBM, Corp. spoke.

During his presidential year, Stevens delivered several lectures at various meetings around the country. The list includes: “Legal and Business Trends in the Southeast” and “Use of Technology in Law School Administration”, NALP Southeast Regional Meeting, Atlanta, GA, February 16, 1984; “Seminar for Job Changers”, ABA Young Lawyers Division, ABA Midyear Meeting, Las Vegas, NV, February 8, 1984; “Ethical Issues in Lawyer Placement and Hiring”, NALP Regional Conferences, Warren, VT, January 24, 1984, Phoenix, AZ, February 1, 1984, with him have appeared in the Dallas Morning News, the Memphis Commercial Appeal, the Atlanta Constitution, Barrister magazine, Student Lawyer magazine and the Lexington Herald-Leader.

His summer, 1984 activities included chairing a discussion group on computerization of the lawyer selection and hiring process at the ABA Annual Meeting in Chicago and a scheduled address to the Annual Meeting of the Louisville Bar Association on career path trends for experienced attorneys. He and Professor Bill Fortune are presently working on a proposal for a new clinical offering for UK law students at the Federal Correctional Institute-Lexington, funding for which will come from the U.S. Department of Justice's Bureau of Prisons.

(Continued on page 10)

Richard H. Underwood has an article on “Legal Ethics and Class Actions: Problems, Tactics and Judicial Responses”, which appears in 71 Ky. L.J. 787 (1983). He was a member of the faculty for the 1984 Nine-day Intensive Course in Trial Advocacy sponsored by the UK College of Law Office of Continuing Legal Education, held in June. He also served as Chairman-Moderator for the June 1984 Seminar on Legal Ethics and Law Office Management.

Professor Underwood was named the 1983 recipient of the Sanford D. Levy Memorial Award, given by the New York State Bar Association. The Bar Association’s Committee on Professional Ethics voted Professor Underwood the award for his article entitled: “Curbing Litigation Abuses: Judicial Control of Adversary Ethics—The Model Rules of Professional Conduct and Proposed Amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure.”

Underwood’s article, which appeared in St. John’s Law Review, Vol. 56 “provides insight and a valuable examination into a topic of deep concern to the legal profession,” Committee Chairman Craig B. Bright of New York City said in announcing the award. The award is given to an individual who has contributed to understanding and advancement in the field of professional ethics by publication of an article or commentary in a legal periodical published in New York State. It pays tribute to the late Sanford D. Levy, a long-standing member of the Committee and Committee Vice-Chairman, in recognition of his outstanding contributions over a period of many years to the development and maintenance of standards of ethics for the legal profession.

Professor Underwood was named Chairman of the Ethics Committee of the Kentucky Bar Association on July 1, 1984. He was conferred the Robert M. and Joanne K. Duncan Faculty Improvement Award by Dean Robert G. Lawson, in recognition of his many achievements in scholarship and teaching.

Harold R. Weinberg, whose biography has been included in Who’s Who in American Law (3rd ed. 1983), will have an article on “Pleading and Practice in Commercial Paper Cases: Burdens of Proof”, appearing in an upcoming issue of the Kentucky Law Journal. (Ed. note: In the Summer, 1984 edition of the Kentucky Bench and Bar, it was reported that Professor Weinberg had accepted a position at Wayne State University and would be leaving the UK faculty. That report was premature; he chose instead to remain, to the delight of his students and colleagues.)

Fred W. Whiteside, Professor Emeritus of Law, has prepared an update of the Kentucky Supplement to “Drafting Wills and Trust Agreements: A Systems Approach”, by Robert P. Wilkins (October, 1983). His article “Taxation” appears in the survey issue of the Kentucky Law Journal, Vol. 71, pages 479-507 (1983). He is Chairman (1984-85) of the Kentucky Bar Association Special Committee on Legal Concerns of Elderly Clients, which is working toward publication of a handbook for senior citizens on legal rights and programs. He has authored in conjunction with Carol Davis Hendricks ‘78 a set of training materials for the Kentucky Cabinet of Human Resources entitled “Legal Problems of the Elderly.”

New Faculty Member Appointed

Thomas J. Stipanowich, an associate in the Atlanta, Georgia law firm of Smith, Currie & Hancock, has joined the faculty as an assistant professor of law. An experienced litigator in construction and contract disputes, Professor Stipanowich is a graduate of the University of Illinois College of Law, where he was elected to the Order of the Coif. He holds Master of Architecture and Bachelor of Science in Architecture degrees from that same institution.

Professor Stipanowich practiced architecture in a number of different settings from summer, 1973 through August, 1978, when he entered law school. He is author (with Thomas E. Abernathy and Thomas Kelleher) of Government Construction Contracts, which was published in 1982 by Georgia State University Press. He is a member of the Georgia and Illinois Bar Associations, the American Trial Lawyers Association, and the American Bar Association, in which he has just been appointed to the Architect/Engineer and Professional Services Committee of the Section of Public Contract Law.

Professor Stipanowich is married to Celia Marks Stipanowich, daughter of the late James Marks ’51, and has two children, Laura and Tom. He will teach in the commercial law area.

Walker J. Blakey, Professor of Law at the University of North Carolina, has been a visiting member of the UK faculty for the past two summers, teaching litigation skills. A graduate of the Ohio State University Law School and former Columbus, Ohio practitioner, he is considered a national authority in Evidence, Clinical Teaching and Client Counseling.
New Association Officers, Directors Elected at May Meeting

At the May 10 annual meeting of the College of Law Alumni Association, held in Louisville at the Kentucky Center for the Arts, 16 officers and directors were elected for the 1984-85 membership year. Approximately 300 persons attended the reception and dinner in the elegant new riverfront facility.

Elected to preside over the Association was Carroll M. Redford, Jr. '59, Glasgow, Commonwealth's Attorney for the 43rd Judicial District. Jennifer B. Coffman '78, a partner in the Lexington firm of Brooks, Coffman & Fitzpatrick, was elected vice-president. Barbara B. Edelman '77, Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky, was elected treasurer and Carroll D. Stevens '76, Associate Dean at the College of Law, was re-elected secretary.

Serving new two-year terms on the Board of Directors are:

- Ruth Baxter '77, Carrollton
- G. Wayne Bridges '57, Covington
- Charles S. Cassis '63, Louisville
- Jennifer B. Coffman '78, Lexington
- Judge William S. Cooper '70, Elizabethtown
- John A. Fulton '42, Louisville
- John S. Hoffman '64, Henderson
- D. Drew King '73, Stearns
- George E. Long, II '72, Benton
- Wm. T. Robinson III '71, Covington
- Joshua E. Santana '76, Middlesboro
- James G. Stephenson '67, Ashland
- Judge Julia K. Tackett '71, Lexington

The terms of an additional 12 board members carried over from the year just past.

Featured at the 1984 annual meeting was an address by Byron Fullerton, Dean of the Texas Tech University School of Law, Lubbock, Texas, a frequent after-dinner speaker at bar and legal education events around the country. Present to receive a Special Recognition of Merit Award was H. Wendell Cherry '59, President of Humana Corporation, whose gift was the basis for the recently completed Cherry Challenge campaign. Also recognized was Judy B. Dailey, President of the Ashland Oil Foundation, for the Foundation’s generous and regular support of various College needs.

Outgoing President James G. Stephenson '67, Associate General Counsel of Ashland Oil, Inc., addressing attendees at the 1984 annual Alumni Association banquet.

In Memoriam

Ira M. Nickell '15, former president and chairman of the board of directors of Ashland Federal Savings & Loan Association, and former president of the Boyd County Bar Association. Nickell had practiced in Hazard, where he became associated with Federal Gas, Oil & Coal Co. and Kyocera Land Co. He later moved to Huntington, WV to work in the legal office of the two companies.

In 1926, he became a partner in the Ashland, Kentucky firm of Woods, Stewart & Nickell, later practicing with Nickell, Fanning & Rose.

James M. Nieding '15, passed away December 11, 1983 in Clearwater, FL.

Stanley G. Courtney '28, chairman of Courtney Enterprises, Inc., a Fort Myers real estate holding company. In his career as a successful Lexington businessman, Courtney owned and managed Courtney Oil Co., Power Oil Co. (a Shell Oil distributorship), and Clipper Transport Co.

He served in the Army Air Corps during World War II.

John Coleman Covington '25, retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Air Force.

William L. Matthews, Jr. '41, Professor and former Dean, University of Kentucky College of Law, September 3, 1984. (See story elsewhere in this issue.)

Charles A. Sither '48, director of corporate security for Occidental Petroleum Corp. and former FBI agent and White House assistant. Armand Hammer, Occidental's chairman and chief executive officer, said about Sither: "It's hard to imagine anyone so full of integrity and ability as Charlie Sither. We will all miss him very much. He had a long and very distinguished career and touched the lives of many, many people—both personally and professionally." Sither since 1972 had had overall responsibility for Occidental's security in countries around the world.

He had also held several positions with the Office of Special Investigations of the Air Force, including the post of assistant director (1953-72).

A retired colonel in the Air Force Reserve, he was from the mid-1960s to 1972 a presidential assistant at the White House.

Arthur J. Bowling '76, Commonwealth's Attorney for the 32nd Judicial District.

Errata

In the last issue, Carl Howell, Jr. '66 of Hodgenville was mistakenly identified as deceased. That entry should have read Carl Howell, Sr. '36.
In the last few years, the number of black students enrolled at the College has increased, owing to better recruitment efforts and improving financial aid resources available to the school. For this issue, we followed up with five recent graduates to find out about their career experiences and what they thought about legal education at UK. Here is what we learned.

Ask anybody in the Exxon Co. USA legal department about how Joe Owmby’s doing and you’ll hear words of praise. Joe, a native of Bowling Green and a 1982 graduate of the College of Law, moved with Exxon to Corpus Christi, Texas immediately after graduation, where he took a position as attorney for the South Texas Division of the company. Though Joe’s roots in Kentucky are deep, as are his family’s, he is married with two children, a boy, 4, and a girl, 13, he reports to have taken well to his newly-adopted state.

A former captain in the U.S. Army, he is a graduate of Western Kentucky University, where he was active in Omega Psi Phi and other campus organizations. In law school, he was a member of the Kentucky Law Journal staff and the Moot Court Board.

About in-house corporate work, Joe said: “Contrary to popular perceptions, one really is exposed to a great deal of client contact. And, you are more than just a lawyer for the company—you’re a part of the management team, which I like a great deal.” Eventually, he says, he hopes to come back to Kentucky to use his expertise in a private law firm, a smaller business or in the classroom, as a teacher.

In his present position, which involves working with over 300 other lawyers for the company, Joe has had the opportunity to compare his legal training with that of others from literally all around the nation. His findings: “I’m glad I chose UK. The professors impressed me, not only with what they taught but with their integrity and dedication. They caused me to feel that it was my school.”

Sarah Howard Jenkins ’83, overcame a number of adversities to complete—and master—law school. A single parent with child care responsibilities and limited financial resources, she was determined nevertheless to tackle legal education and succeed.

Sarah was named one of the original Fellows in the College’s Graduate and Professional Opportunities Fellowship (GPOP) Program, which is funded by the U.S. Department of Education. She began her studies in the fall of 1979, following several years as a professional educator.

A graduate of Hanover (IN) College and a native of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, she completed a Master’s degree in theatre at UK, taught theatre arts and freshman composition at Kentucky State University, and was a UK assistant dean of students before applying to law school. She also worked for a time as an adult educator for the Fayette County school system.

With all her ties to the Upper South, one might suspect that Sarah would be practicing law in the area. Not so. These days she can be found in the desert of the great American Southwest, with one of the best-known law firms west of the Pecos, Lewis & Roca of Phoenix, AZ.

Sarah joined the firm in March, 1983, after summer stints while in law school with Step-toe & Johnson in Washington, D.C. and Greenbaum, Doll & McDonald in Louisville. She reports having an excellent experience with the 84-lawyer firm, which she characterizes as “remarkably diverse and tolerant in character, where all the lawyers are quite unique individuals, but at the same time quite united in their desire to do good work. The quality of training and supervision here is excellent,” she said, with obvious satisfaction.

Her comment about legal education is that writing skills aren’t taught and otherwise emphasized enough. “Writing in law school just isn’t like writing in practice. Though I came to law school well-grounded in literary writing skills, I found I had a lot to learn. My advice to students is to engage in all the practical writing exercises they can; my advice to the school is give practical legal writing a high priority.”

In her home state of Arkansas, the surname Howard, Sarah’s birth name, is well known among lawyers. Her father, George Howard, has served appointments on both the Arkansas Court of Appeals and the Arkansas Supreme Court. These days he resides in Little Rock as a U. S. District Court Judge.

Joe Owmby

A former captain in the U.S. Army, he is a graduate of Western Kentucky University, where he was active in Omega Psi Phi and other campus organizations. In law school, he was a member of the Kentucky Law Journal staff and the Moot Court Board.

About in-house corporate work, Joe said: “Contrary to popular perceptions, one really is exposed to a great deal of client contact. And, you are more than just a lawyer for the company—you’re a part of the management team, which I like a great deal.” Eventually, he says, he hopes to come back to Kentucky to use his expertise in a private law firm, a smaller business or in the classroom, as a teacher.

In his present position, which involves working with over 300 other lawyers for the company, Joe has had the opportunity to compare his legal training with that of others from literally all around the nation. His findings: “I’m glad I chose UK. The professors impressed me, not only with what they taught but with their integrity and dedication. They caused me to feel that it was my school.”

Sarah Howard Jenkins ’83, overcame a number of adversities to complete—and master—law school. A single parent with child care responsibilities and limited financial resources, she was determined nevertheless to tackle legal education and succeed.

Sarah was named one of the original Fellows in the College’s Graduate and Professional Opportunities Fellowship (GPOP) Program, which is funded by the U.S. Department of Education. She began her studies in the fall of 1979, following several years as a professional educator.

A graduate of Hanover (IN) College and a native of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, she completed a Master’s degree in theatre at UK, taught theatre arts and freshman composition at Kentucky State University, and was a UK assistant dean of students before applying to law school. She also worked for a time as an adult educator for the Fayette County school system.

With all her ties to the Upper South, one might suspect that Sarah would be practicing law in the area. Not so. These days she can be found in the desert of the great American Southwest, with one of the best-known law firms west of the Pecos, Lewis & Roca of Phoenix, AZ.

Sarah joined the firm in March, 1983, after summer stints while in law school with Stee-toe & Johnson in Washington, D.C. and Greenbaum, Doll & McDonald in Louisville. She reports having an excellent experience with the 84-lawyer firm, which she characterizes as “remarkably diverse and tolerant in character, where all the lawyers are quite unique individuals, but at the same time quite united in their desire to do good work. The quality of training and supervision here is excellent,” she said, with obvious satisfaction.

Her comment about legal education is that writing skills aren’t taught and otherwise emphasized enough. “Writing in law school just isn’t like writing in practice. Though I came to law school well-grounded in literary writing skills, I found I had a lot to learn. My advice to students is to engage in all the practical writing exercises they can; my advice to the school is give practical legal writing a high priority.”

In her home state of Arkansas, the surname Howard, Sarah’s birth name, is well known among lawyers. Her father, George Howard, has served appointments on both the Arkansas Court of Appeals and the Arkansas Supreme Court. These days he resides in Little Rock as a U. S. District Court Judge.

V. Jeffrey Alston and John W. Stewart

One of the newest small firms in Louisville is Alston & Stewart. Formed in January, 1984 by UK graduates John W. Stewart ’76 and V. Jeffrey Alston ’83, it is, because of the past accomplishments of its founders, a good bet to succeed.

You name it, John Stewart has done it: community service, business, government service, politics, private practice. His resume reads like a litany of lawyer career options.

Those accomplishments began at Western Kentucky University, from which he graduated in the early ’70s. He played football there and was active in fraternity life and student government. In addition, he was named a Martin Luther King Jr. scholar.

After graduation from law school, John joined Attorney General Bob Stephens’ staff as an assistant, where he worked in the General Legal Services section. In 1978, David Armstrong wooed him away to become an Assistant Commonwealth Attorney in Louisville, his home. Once there, John rose to become Division Chief of the Plea Bargain Reduction Unit, one of the most sensitive positions in that office. As a
Karen J. Greenwell '85 was named recipient of the W. L. Matthews, Jr. Scholarship for 1984-85, which is sponsored by the Fayette County Bar Association. Ronald A. Newcomer '70, president of the Association, presented a check for the scholarship at a recent ceremony in Dean Lawson's office.

Newcomer is a partner in the Lexington firm of Shuffett, Mooney, McCoy, Leathers & Newcomer.

David C. Short, Director of the Mineral Law Center and faculty sponsor of the Journal of Mineral Law and Policy has announced the following appointments to the Journal: Joel Morgan '85, Executive Editor; Karen Greenwell '85, Managing Editor; Michael Tucker '85, Notes & Comments Editor; Allen Montgomery '85, Articles Editor. Staff members are: Edison G. Banks '85, Sam Burchett '85, Jim Childress '85, Jan Clark '85, Robin Gwinn '85, and Sharon K. Morris '85.

The College will undergo ABA reinspection in March, 1985, and in preparation for that exercise Dean Lawson has appointed a faculty Self Study Committee. William H. Fortune chairs the committee, which is composed of Richard C. Ausness, Eugene R. Gaetke, Kenneth B. Germain, M. Louise Graham, Thomas P. Lewis and Martin J. McMahon. A part of the Committee's activity will involve solicitation of comments from alumni on various subjects concerning the school's performance. Working through the Alumni Association Board, a procedure for doing so will be developed and implemented, probably in the fall, 1984.

Law Week 1984 included two events featuring UK law alumni. A. Mitchell McConnel, Jr. '66, Judge-Executive of Jefferson County, spoke at a midday Forum about the Kentucky Task Force on Exploited and Missing Children, which he chairs. Later that week, Joe F. Childers '81, attorney for the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, engaged in a debate with a representative of the Kentucky Coal Association on the subject of the proposed Unmined Minerals Tax.

The 1984-85 Moot Court National Team has been selected. Members are Mike Goforth, James Childress, James Earhart and Steven Hawke, all of whom are members of the class of 1985. Alternate team members are Kris Brower and James Brannon, also 1985 graduates.

The Kentucky Law Journal Editorial Board selections have been made. Theodore J. Cowen is Editor-in-Chief, Susan Alley, Managing Editor, Barbara Pryor, Executive Editor, Charles Hazen and Mike White, Articles Editors, Wade Hendricks, Survey Editor, David Regan, Comments Editor, and Ken Betts, Notes Editor.

At Stanford, Jeff was selected for the Kaiser Foundation's prestigious Journey for Perspective Fellowship Program, which involved study around the world. Upon completing his M.B.A., he became an assistant vice president of North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance. Later, he became a financial planner for Xerox.

Then he got bitten by the law school bug. Named a Presidential Scholar at UK, it was back to school once more, and yet another major move for his family, this time from Rochester, New York to Lexington.

Like his younger predecessor and partner, Jeff became active in the law school community. Both served terms as president of the Black Law Students Association.

Upon graduating in May, 1983, he served as a campaign aide to Governor Martha Layne Collins. After the election he shifted his professional focus to Louisville, where he joined with John in forming the firm. He was soon called back on a part-time basis to Frankfort, however, where he resides with his wife Ethel, a lawyer with the Legislative Research Commission, to serve as a part-time hearing officer with the Cabinet for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

Jeff served his country as a captain in the U.S. Army, and was stationed in Korea in the DMZ. The discipline he learned from that experience early in life shaped him into a man who uses time well and knows how to get things done. Once when he was in law school, it appeared that an important student scholarship program funded by the University was in danger of going under. Not one to give up easily, Jeff discreetly made an appointment with President Singletary to plead the cause. Within twenty-four hours, the word came back: the program would be saved.

If good business sense, good lawyering, and good personal relations are indeed the secrets to a successful law firm, Alston & Stewart undoubtedly has good prospects for it.

To round out our profiles in this issue, we look at Betty J. Morton, a 1984 graduate and a native of Lexington. Like Jeff Alston, Betty left Kentucky for her first years of academic training. She attended Hood College in Maryland, where she was a Hood Scholar. After graduation she remained at the school to pursue graduate study in Human Sciences.

She was so well-regarded at her alma mater that she was asked to join the administrative staff as an admissions counselor. She was promoted to the post of assistant director of admissions, serving later as academic counselor and reading specialist in the Learning Assessment and Resource Center.

While in law school, Betty managed the student internship program at the Federal (Continued on page 14)
Success Story Ends in Tragedy

At first, it seems to be a success story. Chapter one begins: "Dick Shilling started in business for himself before World War II as a small ice cream vendor. After the war, he ran an in-house cafeteria for a large northern Kentucky corporation which he left after several years, and bought his first nightclub while still a young man. Subsequently, he built and operated a sizeable restaurant on a major highway, developed an industrial catering business and built and operated a motel. In the 1960s he sold them all and bought an established restaurant and night spot called the Lookout House. . . . In late 1969 he discovered that the doors of the "old" Beverly Hills Supper Club had been closed for lack of business."

Shilling saw the chance of a lifetime. He bought the supper club in Southgate, a municipality on the Kentucky side of the Ohio River across from Cincinnati, as the 4-R Corp. The 4 R's were Shilling and his sons Richard Jr., Ronald and Raymond. Richard and Ronald were in college then. Raymond was 13. Shilling would later testify, "I intended to purchase it, redecorate it and turn it over to my sons. It was my intention to be there with them for awhile and see if they could run it."

This was the first good intention on a pathway of good intentions leading to tragedy.

Robert G. Lawson, member of the Kentucky Public Advocacy Commission, a dean of the College of Law of the University of Kentucky, a consultant to the special prosecutor on the Beverly Hills fire, traces each small step on the pathway with meticulous dispassion. His writing technique marches monotonously; the effect on the reader, however, is riveting.

Reading "Beverly Hills" is almost like watching an Alfred Hitchcock movie. You know the terrible thing that is going to happen, and you keep finding yourself silently screaming to the people in the book, "Read the list of fire hazards! Don't leave the open stairwell out of your report! For God's sake, don't let that building open!" But, of course, you are powerless, no one listens, and, full of danger, the Beverly Hills Supper Club reopens.

There were hazards aplenty lurking in the remodeling and massive enlargement of the Beverly Hills—hazards that would create the second worst nightclub fire in the history of this nation, leaving 165 people dead.

There's a pregnant woman who had gone to the restroom and thus was separated from her husband when the blaze caught up to her, the 13-year-old boys from the bar mitzvah, a cocktail waitress and her sister, Davidson, a band in a soundproof backstage room, hundreds of stories bursting to agonized life in quotes from after-the-fact testimony:

"There was a woman we couldn't get out because others were on her legs. . . . Then there was this man on top, a heavy guy reaching his arms up. . . . I had him reach his arms around my neck and I pushed against the door as hard as I could. I moved him about two feet, and by this time, he was out of it. He didn't have strength to help me, and I didn't have the strength to lift him. He just looked at me and shook his head. There was nothing I could do. And then there was a young girl. . . . not screaming or anything but in fine shape. . . . I don't know how the table got there, but her leg was wrapped around it and she couldn't pull it loose. I can't tell you the ones I left there."

Young Black Graduates Spotlighted

(Continued from page 13)

Correctional Institute-Lexington. She was responsible for training and supervising students who counseled inmates at the facility. During the summer of 1983 she took a leave from that post to work for Western Kentucky Legal Services in Madisonville, where she was exposed to a host of legal problems arising from the program's representation of indigent persons.

Betty, a GPOP Fellow, came to law school with the thought in mind that she might someday work in higher education again. But it was another side of public interest work which ultimately captured her attention. After taking the Summer, 1984 Kentucky Bar Examination, she joined the staff of the Kentucky Human Rights Commission in Louisville to work in the civil rights and liberties areas, which are, as she puts it "her first love".
The overlapping 1983 College of Law Annual Fund and the special Cherry Challenge appeal generated several major gifts which helped significantly to bring about successful results in both campaigns. The more than 800 donors included, in addition to alumni and non-alumni individuals, several major law firms and corporations. The 24% rate of alumni participation was the highest of any annual fund to date.

By July 1, the aggregate value of gifts and pledges from Lafferty Society Fellows had surpassed the $1.5 million mark. Forty-four new individuals qualified for Society recognition during the period March 1, 1983-July 1, 1984, bringing the total to 102. The inductees, who were recognized at a special reception October 26 are:

Leslie D. Aberson '60
Marie J. Alagia '79
Robert J. Busse '78
John C. '68 and Charlene Carter
James K. Caudill 74
Gary J. Celestino '72
H. Wendell Cherry '59
Jacob P. Cline III '74
Jennifer Burcham Coffman '78
Joseph W. Craft III '76
William M. Deep '52
Robert M. '74 and Joanne K. '74 Duncan
HeLEN Cole Eblen
Mervin K. Eblen '21
William F. Emrick '72
E. Lambert Farmer, Jr. '72
F. Preston Farmer '62
William R. Garmer '75
John Richard '49 and Marcia A. Gillespie
Tom Hackney
W. Stokes Harris Jr. '71
F.B. Kieckhefer Jr. '85
Joyce M. Kieckhefer
Darrell D. King '73
Holly Adrienne King
Kathy King
Skila Dean King
Trevor Austin King
Phillip Bruce Leslie '73
Arthur C. II '68 and Marcia V. Litton
John R. McGinnis '68
Everett H. Metcalf, Jr. '49
Thomas L. Osborne '72
Gregory John and Leslie '78 Patterson
G. Chad Perry III '51
Lon B. Rogers '32
Thomas B. Russell '70
James W. Shepherd Jr. '61
David Sparks '72

(Continued on page 16)
Honor Roll of Donors

Asterisks denote gifts qualifying for the Cherry Challenge. To qualify, gifts must have been made between October 24, 1983 and July 1, 1984, in excess of the amount given by the donor in Fund Year 1982.

Leadership Gifts

$5,000 and more

- Ashland Oil Foundation
- Blackberry Creek Coal Company
- Duncan, Robert M. ’74 & Joanne K. ’74
- Eblen, Mervin K. ’21
- Gillespie, John R. ’49
- Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Foundation, Incorporated
- Howard, Judge Harris S. ’54
- Howard, J. Woodford, Jr.
- King, Darrell D. ’73
- Leland, Roger B. ’54
- Marrowbone Development Company
- Martin County Coal Corporation
- Metcalfe, Everett H., Jr. ’49
- Pike County Coal Corporation
- Stites and Harbison
- Stoll, Kennon and Park
- Saffer, Paul A. ’69
- Wolf Creek Collieries Company
- Wyatt, Tarrant and Combs

The Dean’s Council

$1,000 - $4,999

- Alagia, D. Paul, Jr.
- Alagia, Marie J. ’79
- Amax Foundation, Inc.
- Arnold & Porter

Special Gifts

Highlight 1983 Fund

(Continued from page 15)

- John H. Stites III ’74
- J. Michael Wilder ’78
- Robert L. Woolery II
- Rudy Y. ’49 and Jean Yessin
- E. Frederick Zopp ’65

Though a number of these commitments were for the Cherry Challenge professorships, several were designated for other important College needs. Roger B. Leland ’54 endowed a Moot Court support fund; Robert M. ’74 and Joanne K. ’74 Duncan added to an endowment established last year for faculty development; and Paul A. Saffer ’69 contributed to a scholarship fund honoring his parents, as did J. Woodford Howard, Jr., a member of the faculty at Johns Hopkins University, whose father graduated from the College in the late ’20s.

Major contributions to the new professorships were received from the law firms of Greenebaum, Doll & McDonald; Stoll, Keennon and Park; Wyatt, Tarrant and Combs; Barnett and Alagia; and Stites and Harbison. Individuals giving at the $5,000 level and above to the drive included Mervin K. Eblen ’21, Darrell D. King ’73, Judge Harris S. Howard ’54, John R. ’49 and Maria Gillespie and Everett H. Metcalfe. Jr. ’49.

The Mineral Law Center received a big boost from a $25,000 Ashland Oil Foundation grant, which will be renewed in April, 1985. Also making major gifts to the Center were the Blackberry Coal Company, the Marrowbone Development Company, the Martin County Coal Corporation, the Pike County Coal Corporation and the Wolf Creek Collieries Company, all companies within the Massey Group. These and other new private resources have enabled the Center to hire a full-time research assistant, undertake the publication of a practitioner’s handbook, and begin a student-run law review.

On page 15 is an accounting of the designations made by donors of their gifts to the 1983 College of Law Fund. Gifts made during the period October 24, 1983 - February 29, 1984, which met Cherry Challenge requirements, appear under the Dean’s Discretionary Fund. Total Cherry Challenge receipts (qualifying gifts made during the period October 24, 1983 - July 1, 1984) are shown as the last entry.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Year</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Day, Joseph M. '72</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Deep, William M. '52</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fayette County Bar Association</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ferguson, Jo M. '39</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gary, William E. III '63</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Harris, Ross '75</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hoffman, John Stanley '64</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Isaacs, Paul F. '69</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kinkead, Shelby C. '70</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leatherman, Laramie L. '53</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MacDonald, Mark T. '79</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>McCall, G. Emmett '69</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Morgan, Elmer E. '48</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Neely and Brien</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Powell, David G. '70</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Raines, Murray A. '76</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rosenberg, J. David '74</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Saad, Paul A. '58</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sheffer, Ronald G. '67</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Smith, Bruce E. '74</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spears, Richard W. '61</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wheeler, Robert E. '56</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Whitlow, Henry '37</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Williams, Harry D. '66</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Wilson, Herbert, Garmon &amp; Goodman</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

University Sponsors

Hundred Club

$100 - $249

- Aberson, Leslie D. '60
- Adams, B. W. '82
- Adams, Eldred E., Jr. '73
- Adams, Lester '79
- Adams, Richard W. '68
- Alexander, Robert M. '65
- Arness, Mark G. '72
- Ayer, William C., Jr. '68
- Bachmeyer, Fred S. '73
- Bagwell, John C. '32
- Baird, Stokes A. IV '68
- Baker, Robert R. '73
- Baker, Stephen C. '75
- Baldridge, H. Gene '67
- Banahan, J. E. '48
- Barr, William G. III '76
- Barr, Maxwell P., Jr. '74
- Barrickman, Uhel O. '47
- Bennett, Lynn C. '82
- Benzinger, Gerald E. '69
- Berge, Theodore J. '82 & Vanessa M. '82
- Billingsley, Stan. '71
- Bishop, Jennifer '82
- Brewer, Robert M. '68
- Brewster, J. Leland II '57
- Bright, Lloyd D. '79
- Brophy, Katie M. '77
- Brown, Carolyn M. '82
- Brown, Larry D. '82
- Brown, Richard A., Jr. '66
- Bryant, Mark P. '73
- Burbank, Virginia Collins '54
- Bussel, E. Andre '71
- Cashen, J. Larry '67
- Cawood, Stephen C. '68
- Cecil, Cynthia A. '79
- Cetrulo, Robert C. '57
- Chiappori, Armand '35
- Christopher, M. Ronald '67
- Clapp, Donald B. '66
- Clare, Michael J. '50
- Clarke, Anne Dooling '82
- Clay, Richard H. '77
- Clontz, C. R. '60
- Coleman, Reford H. '63
- Collins, Nancy Marksberry '78
- Collins, Thomas A. '56
- Collins, Foster A. '53
- Combs, Bradley '59
- Combs, C. Kilmer '46
- Combs, Paul C. '48
- Combs, Ronald G. '73
- Cooper, John Sherman
- Cooper, Richard D. '59
- Cooper, William S. '70
- Coots, Robert M. '69
- Cotting, William W. '79
- Courtney, Stanley G. '28
- Cox, William M., Jr. '62
- Coy, Charles R. '51
- Coy, John M. '65
- Crandall, Karl N. '67

(Continued on page 18)