Leatherman to Endow Professorship

Laramie L. Leatherman '53 has provided $75,000 to the College of Law to endow a professorship. The Laramie L. Leatherman Professorship will be the College's seventh endowed professorship.

$100,000 Gift Endows Gayle A. Mohney Law Scholarships

Mrs. Ruth Mohney, the widow of Gayle A. Mohney '31, endowed a $100,000 scholarship fund in his name for the College of Law before her death early this year. This is the largest single gift the College has received for student scholarships. The Gayle A. Mohney Law Scholarships are to be awarded to those students whose academic and personal achievements show promise for successful legal careers.

Gayle Mohney was for many years a senior partner in the Lexington law firm of Stoll, Keenon & Park. His clients included a majority of the larger thoroughbred interests in Kentucky, such as Keeneland, Claiborne Farm and King Ranch. He is credited with having developed the thoroughbred syndication agreement that is still a standard in equine law. College of Law Dean Rutheford B "Biff" Campbell, in dedicating his 1982 article, "Stallion Syndicates as Securities" (70 K LJ 1131) in memory of Mr. Mohney, said, "He was a decent and generous man whose contributions to the horse industry were enormous."

Gayle Mohney's influence in the Lexington community extended far beyond the thoroughbred industry. After an outstanding student career at UK, where he was a star on the football team, he continued to give of his time over the years to the University administration, working closely with former UK Presidents Oswald and Singletary. Mr. Mohney also worked as counsel to the Lexington Herald-Leader. He died in 1980, at the age of 70, while on a fishing trip to Iceland.

Dean Campbell, in announcing the Mohney gift, said, "Gayle Mohney's life was truly remarkable. He was an athlete, a scholar, a respected lawyer and a business advisor to the powerful. He was mentor to many of us. Through it all however, he retained a sense of decency and honor that endeared him to everyone who knew him. I am proud to have been his friend and law partner."

Gayle A. Mohney '31

A law school can be no better than its faculty, and Larry Leatherman understands that," said Dean Rutheford B Campbell in announcing the endowment. "This exceedingly generous and well-timed gift will help us attract and retain an outstanding faculty, and reflects Larry Leatherman's deep and continuing commitment to high quality legal education in Kentucky."

Leatherman is a partner in the Louisville office of Greenebaum Doll & McContinued on page 4

IN THIS ISSUE
Scalia Delivers Swinford Lecture
Prof. Rogers' Year in China
Bright Wins Durfee Award
State of the Law School

So, what is the state of the law school? It is very good, although we face some difficult problems. Our student body is very good; our teaching is very good; our research is very good; our alumni support is even better than very good — it is truly outstanding. But, we suffer a serious fragility that is caused by inadequate resources. If our salaries continue to remain uncompetitive over time, we will lose our best and brightest faculty, and that will literally gut the place; if our presently inadequate annual funding for our library continues, it will destroy our ability to engage in serious research and teaching and will cause us to fail in our obligation to provide support for the Kentucky bar.

But the good news is that this is entirely a soluble problem. The amount of additional funding we need to consolidate our gains and continue our progress is figuratively, at least, nickels and dimes in the context of our law school budget and certainly in the context of the University’s budget.

We very much need your support in solving this problem. Obviously, we need your continued financial support, but, as a first year law student might say, that is not even an issue. You all have been exceedingly generous in that regard, and there is no doubt of continued support on this level.

Now, however, we need another type of support from you. We need our alumni to exercise some political muscle.

No place in this University is there a group of alumni that are as influential, loyal and generous as the alumni of the College of Law. Think about that; it is not an overstatement. Our alumni, for example, have always permeated the power structure of this state; they generally are intensely loyal to the law school and appreciate what the institution has done for them. They have expressed this loyalty by donating time and money generously to the College. The influence of our alumni is, I believe, an untapped resource for the College of Law.

So, flex your political muscle on behalf of the law school. But we want you to start slowly, however, because unused muscles can sometimes react in strange ways.

As a warm-up maneuver, we need to spread the word that our alumni insist on a first-rate law school, with resources sufficient to live up to the traditions of the College of Law and sufficient to consolidate our gains and continue our progress. When you see Dr. Roselle, our new University President, or any member of the University’s Board of Trustees, tell them what you think about the importance of the law school to the University and the state and our need for adequate funding. We want them to know that we have a politically potent, positive-spirited group of alumni who are willing to help the law school, both with their financial support and through the exercise of their influence. Tell the same thing to your state legislators or, for that matter, anyone else who will listen.

The law school is a special place. It is relatively economical to run, and it delivers a product that is unmatched anywhere in our University or in any other university in this state. Let’s make sure this is understood by everyone.

I’m not sure that Jane Fonda would approve of this modest warm-up exercise, but it is a start toward exerting positive influence for the benefit of the law school.

Back Roads and Old Friends

The one responsibility of the dean’s office that I was sure would be dreadful is development. “Development” is a generic term, but at the heart of the concept, no matter how we try to fancy-it-up, is the idea of driving around the state, asking people, principally alumni, for money for the law school. I knew (or at least told myself that I knew) how to do bank mergers and horse syndications, but I certainly had no idea how to raise money, thought it would be terribly distasteful (I kept remembering those calls at dinnertime, asking me to buy lightbulbs for some obscure and nearly nervous sounding organization that claimed to be a charity of some kind) and suspected that I might be a dismal failure at the task, which would be even more apparent to everyone, since I was succeeding the wizard, Bob Lawson.
Notwithstanding these initial fears, and although I certainly make no exagergated claims of success in the area of development, it has been one of the biggest and most pleasant surprises in the dean’s job.
Development has forced me to get out into areas of the state that I have not seen for years, and I must report to you that the natural beauty of the state is just overwhelming. I have driven down the Big Sandy, through the Red River Gorge and the bluegrass region and past some of our most beautiful lakes, including Cumberland, Barkley and Kentucky. If you haven’t had these experiences recently, you ought to try it. It will make you feel good about Kentucky.
The other great thing about development is getting to see old friends and classmates and getting to meet a lot of other nice people. I have visited with classmates that I had not seen since we graduated from law school 20 years ago.
I have reacquainted myself with other old friends and made new friends literally from Pikeville to Paducah. People have gone out of their way to welcome me into their communities and their homes.
They have hosted parties for alumni, arranged dinners, provided introductions to others who may be interested in supporting the law school and dipped deep into their own pockets to help provide the support that is essential for the continued success of the law school.
I dare not mention the name of even one alumni who has helped, because it would be impossible to list everyone.
But, the support has been gratifying, and it has made development the most enjoyable part of my job so far. I genuinely look forward to seeing more people and places in 1989.
So, thanks for everything.

Supreme Court
Justice Scalia
Delivers Biennial
Swinford Lecture

Justice Antonin Scalia of the Supreme Court of the United States delivered the sixth biennial Judge Mac
Swinford Lecture at the Otis Singletary
Center for the Arts.

A near-capacity crowd of around 1,000 lawyers, law students and others attended the lecture last fall.
Justice Scalia spoke on the U.S.
Constitution, and encouraged his audience to “discuss and venerate” the Constitution in order to keep intact the founding father’s original intent.
He talked about the drafting of the document and how the Constitution shaped the Bill of Rights that followed.
It should be recognized, he stated, that while the Bill of Rights are more fre-cently analyzed and discussed, they are “the fruit and not the roots of the tree.”
Justice Scalia told of his recent visit to Italy, and noted that while the United States is often spoken of as a young country, “we have been living under this Constitution for more than a century longer than when Italy was nothing more than a geographic reference.” With regard to government, he said, “We are the world’s experts.”

Justice Scalia is known for his exremely conservative opinions, and a group of protesters demonstrated outside the hall before the speech in opposition to his views. Following the lecture, Justice Scalia agreed to “receive” questions, and a lively question-and-answer period followed.
He was asked about his views on dis-version and by one protester about his support of big business against the individual, which he dismissed by as-kling for “a real question.”

Scalia refused to speculate on the issues likely to come before the Supreme Court in its next term, commenting that “it’s a risky business to predict what the big issues of the future will be.”

Justice Scalia graduated in 1960 from Harvard Law School, where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review.

Formerly a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals, D.C. Circuit, as well as a government attorney and a law professor, he was appointed to the Supreme Court by then President Reagan for the term beginning in 1986. He is known for the energy and wit he has brought to the high court, and for his outspoken passion in defense of his conservative views. He jogs with Justice
Anthony Kennedy, plays tennis with Justice Sandra Day O’Connor and plays poker with Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

The Swinford Lecture Series has been sponsored jointly by the College of Law and the Kentucky Bar Association since 1978.
The lecture series is named in honor of the late Judge Mac Swinford, who served as U.S. District Court Judge for the Eastern and Western Districts of Kentucky beginning in September, 1937. He died in Cynthiana in 1975, after practicing law there for a number of years.
The five previous Swinford Lectures were delivered by Archibald Cox
(1978), Judge Robert Keeton (1980),
Justice William Rehnquist (1982), Justitice Sandra Day O’Connor (1984) and former Attorney General Griffin Bell (1986).
During his visit to Kentucky, Justice Scalia met with bar leaders, UK law students and faculty. The day of the Swinford lecture, he spoke to over 100 Kentucky Bar Foundation Fellows and their guests at a luncheon held at the Lafayette Club in Lexington.

Justice Scalia spoke to a joint session of two Constitutional Law classes at the College that was open to other students also.

At lunch that day, he talked briefly to the staff of the Kentucky Law Journal about the importance of the skills learned in journal work to the practice of law.

That evening he had dinner with the College of Law faculty. Justice Scalia also found time during his visit for a tennis doubles match and a tour of Airdrie Stud horse farm.

Moot Court
Team Reaches Finals Three Consecutive Years

The UK team of Margaret Alfred and Kerry Smith defeated four other teams in a row to reach the final round of the National Moot Court Region IV Competition in Richmond, Virginia, in November. As one of the top two teams in the region, the team progressed along with final round winner William and Mary to the final competition in New York in January. This is the third year in a row that a UK team has been either winner or runner-up in regional competition.

"Success at the regionals three years in a row is an outstanding accomplishment, since Region IV is particularly tough," said Professor John Rogers, advisor to the UK Moot Court Program, adding, "Margaret and Kerry were terrific!" Rogers accompanied this year’s team, as well as the Region IV winners of two years ago, Gretchen Lewis and Terry Yewell. Professor Bill Fortune coached last year’s successful team of Robin Cornette and Andrew Self.

Region IV encompasses law schools in Virginia, North Carolina, West Virginia, and Kentucky. This year twelve law schools entered twenty-three teams in the Regional Competition. Teams defeated by the runner-up UK team were Wake Forest, Campbell, the University of Virginia, and Washington and Lee.

Over one hundred and fifty schools enter teams in the nationwide competition, which is sponsored by the Young Lawyers Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and the American College of Trial Lawyers. Reaching the regional final round entitled the UK team to participate in the national competition in New York, results of which are unavailable as we go to press. Twenty-eight teams participate in the national finals.

Margaret Alfred will practice in her home town of Lexington following graduation in May, 1989. She plans to concentrate in the area of medical malpractice law, building upon her prior career as an obstetrical registered nurse.

Kerry Smith also graduates in May; he is from Leitchfield, Kentucky. Prior to law school, he was a radio announcer on Radio Station WKHG in Leitchfield.

UK sends two teams to the regional competition each fall, following an extensive intraschool competition. UK’s other team this year consisted of Jane Grigsby, of Neenah, Wisconsin, and Elaine Roberts of Mt. Sterling, Kentucky.

The case for this year’s competition was Michele Davis v. The People of the State of New Columbia. The two main issues presented were (1) whether the prosecution’s exercise of its peremptory challenges to exclude women venirepersons solely because of their gender violated the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment; and (2) whether the prosecution’s peremptory challenges resulted in a denial of defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to a trial before a jury comprised of a fair cross-section of the community.

UK’s nationally competitive moot court team relaxes after completion of the regional competition in Richmond, Virginia. Standing left to right are Elaine Roberts of Mt. Sterling, Kerry Smith of Leitchfield, Professor Rogers, and Jane Grigsby of Neenah, Wisconsin. Seated is Margaret Alfred of Lexington.

Professorship ... Continued from page 1

Donald. He was instrumental in setting up the Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Awards for Academic Excellence, given each year to the students who place at the top of the first and second-year classes at the College of Law. He is a member of long standing in the College’s Lafferty Society and an emeritus member of the Visiting Committee.

In discussing his reasons for endowing a professorship, Leatherman said, "Given the conditions which prevail, even tax-supported institutions of higher education must increasingly rely upon private giving for that extra support which makes the difference between mediocrity and excellence.

"We cannot afford to lose our best and brightest scholars. They are the nucleus around which great institutions are built. I believe that my support will help the College of Law continue on its path toward excellence. I also hope that my gift will help other alumni and friends of the law school make a decision to fund professorships."
Boehl Stopher Graves & Deindoerfer Establishes Moot Court Scholarship

The law firm of Boehl Stopher Graves & Deindoerfer has created a scholarship program designed to reward outstanding performance in the College’s moot court program. The Boehl, Stopher, Graves & Deindoerfer Scholarship will be awarded annually to a second-year student who is selected to represent the College in the national moot court competition during the third year of law school. Each scholarship will be in the amount of the College’s Kentucky resident tuition.

Boehl Stopher, with its main office in Louisville and branch offices in Lexington, Paducah, Prestonsburg and New Albany, Indiana, is known for its litigation practice. The firm in establishing the scholarship announced its desire “to perpetuate the moot court program’s tradition of solid oral and written advocacy.” The College’s moot court team will be going to the national finals in New York City again this year, for the third year in a row.

“We now have four moot court scholarships, one for each member of the National Moot Court Team,” said Dean Rutheford B. “Biff” Campbell in announcing the new scholarship fund. “Rounding out our moot court scholarships has been a top priority here at the College. We are most grateful to Boehl Stopher Graves & Deindoerfer for contributing to the excellence of our moot court program in such an important way.”

The recipient of the first Boehl Stopher Graves & Deindoerfer Scholarship will be announced at the College of Law Awards Night ceremony in April 1989.

Lafferty Society Adds 20 Members

The College of Law sponsored a reception prior to the Fellows dinner for Lafferty Society members. Over 75 people attended the reception, which was held at the Gratz Park Inn in downtown Lexington last fall.

Twenty new members joined the Lafferty Society in 1988, which by the end of the year had grown to include 192 members. The Society is the backbone of the College of Law’s development program. Lafferty Society members have made possible scholarships, professorships, library support and administrative support in every area.

Lafferty Society members are UK Fellows who have designate their contribution to the University for the College of Law. To become a UK Fellow, one agrees to give the University at least $10,000, which can be given in lump sum or by installments of at least $1,000 each year for ten years. One can also join through a deferred gift of a larger size, made by will or insurance policy.

Those joining the Lafferty Society in 1988 are:

Kirtley B. Amos ’75, Lexington
Rutheford B. Campbell, Jr. ’69, Lexington

Student Book Awards Announced

In November of 1988 the College of Law Scholarship and Honors Committee announced the winners of the Book Awards for overall student performance for the 1987-88 academic year. The awards and their recipients are as follows:

Annual Corpus Juris Secundum Student Awards

The publishing company of Corpus Juris Secundum awards a CJS title of the student’s choice to the first, second and third-year law students who have made the most significant contributions toward overall legal scholarship. The awards are not based on a top grade for any particular class, and the winners are chosen by the Scholarship and Honors Committee. For the 1987-88 academic year the recipients are:

First-year student: Alfred L. Buchanan ’90
Second-year student: Thomas Morgan Ward, Jr., ’89
Third-year student: Brian West ’88

Annual Hornbook Student Awards

The West Publishing Company gives one of its legal publications to a first, second and third-year student who achieves the highest scholastic averages in his or her class for the year. For the 1987-88 academic year, the recipients are:

First-year student: Alfred L. Buchanan ’90
Second-year student: John T. Moore ’89
Third-year student: Arden Winter (Robertson) Huff ’88

Bureau of National Affairs Student Award

The Bureau of National Affairs awards a copy of its Trial Manual each year to the graduating student judged by the Scholarship and Honors Committee to have made the best scholastic progress in his or her final year. The Committee selected John L. Di Fiore ’88.
Durfee Names
Stephen B. Bright
as Winner

The Durfee Foundation of Los Angeles, California has named Stephen B. Bright '75 as one of eight winners of the prestigious Durfee Awards for 1988. Bright was selected for his work as the Director of the Southern Prisoners' Defense Committee based in Atlanta, Georgia. Each Durfee Award winner receives a $10,000 check along with the Award. Stephen Bright was nominated for the award by faculty members of the College of Law.

A native of Danville, Bright became Director of the Southern Prisoners' Defense Committee in 1982. Faced with severe financial difficulties and an almost nonexistent staff, he slowly built the Defense Committee to the level of eight full-time attorneys. He also started an innovative program to supplement the work of the staff with the involvement of law student fellows funded by various law schools around the country.

To best use scarce resources, Bright focused the work of the Defense Committee where the need was greatest, in Mississippi, Georgia and Florida. By developing an expertise in the law of those states, staff attorneys were able to help more people and build a volunteer network of local counsel. Bright also redirected the work of the Committee to the trials rather than just the appeals phase of the legal process, to assist defense counsel in preserving constitutional issues during trial.

The Durfee Foundation was created in 1960 by the late Dorothy Durfee Avery and her husband, R. Stanton Avery. The Foundation established the biennial Durfee Awards in 1982 "to acknowledge the achievements of those individuals who have applied their personal commitment and skill to the enhancement of human dignity through the law."

As Dean Rutheford B Campbell and Professor Robert G. Lawson said in nominating Bright for the Durfee Award, "His long and extraordinary commitment to justice for the indigent, particularly defendants in capital cases, the justice system's least palatable cause, is worthy of special recognition of the magnitude of the Durfee Awards."

---

Stephen Allen
Wins First Place in Competition and Scholarship for Legal Writing

The Eastern Mineral Law Foundation has awarded College of Law student Stephen G. Allen '89 first place in its legal writing competition. He received the $1,000 prize for his paper titled "Inverse Condemnation for Temporary Takings: A New Remedy for a Constitutional Tort? The Aftermath of First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. Court of Los Angeles."

Stephen Allen is from Hueysville in Floyd County and holds a Mining Engineering degree from UK. He is the managing editor of the College's Journal of Mineral Law & Policy, which recently published his article on "Emulsions: The Cutting Edge of Development in Blasting Agent Technology — A Method for Economic Comparison," co-authored by M.G. Ayat.

Allen also received a scholarship from the Eastern Mineral Law Foundation for the 1988-89 academic year. In announcing the scholarship, Sharon Daniels, Executive Director of the Foundation, praised the performance of UK law students, which she said is "a tribute to the efforts of Professor (David) Short and the faculty at the University of Kentucky who encourage the study of mineral law, and to the curriculum committee who have developed such an excellent program for law students in natural resources law."

The Eastern Mineral Law Foundation is based at the West Virginia University Law Center. Its governing members include a number of state bar associations and natural resources trade associations as well as law schools from seven states, including UK.

---

Livingston
Endows
Memorial Fund for Scholarship

Milton M. "Mike" Livingston '66 of Paducah has endowed a scholarship fund for the College of Law in honor of his parents. The principal of the Milton M. Livingston, Sr. and Alene F. Livingston Law Scholarship Fund is to grow to $25,000 over five years. The interest from that amount is to be used to "award scholarships on the basis of demonstrated academic merit, character and leadership qualities to students of the College of Law."

Mike Livingston is a name partner in the Paducah law firm of McMurray & Livingston. Besides his support for the College of Law, Livingston has been active in both the state and local bar associations, and in civic affairs. Upon setting up the scholarship fund, he remarked that, "It really makes one feel good to be able to help the College of Law."

In announcing the Milton M. Livingston, Sr. and Alene F. Livingston Scholarship Fund, Dean Rutheford B "Biff" Campbell said, "An endowed scholarship fund is a great help to the College because it will literally be there a hundred years from now. We are extremely grateful to Mike Livingston for stepping up to support the law school in such a lasting manner."
Whitt Becomes College of Law Faculty Member

The College of Law has a new faculty member who brings a unique perspective to the classroom. Dwight Reginald Whitt is not only a member of the Order of Dominican Friars but a former litigator. He also is familiar with Kentucky, having served as Chaplain of Spalding College in Louisville and with the Louisville-Jefferson County CETA program, both in the late 1970s.

Professor Whitt holds a B.A. degree from Loyola College in Baltimore, an S.T.B. degree, cum laude, from the Dominican House of Studies in Washington, D.C. and a J.D. degree from Duke Law School. Upon graduation from Duke he worked as a litigation associate with a Philadelphia law firm for three years, and was a special student at Yale Divinity School before coming to the College of Law in the summer of 1988.

During the 1988 fall semester, Professor Whitt taught Torts to one of the first year classes. This spring he is teaching Professional Responsibility and conducting a seminar on Government and Religion. Professor Whitt is interested also in the constitutional law area.

Recently Professor Whitt spoke with Associate Dean Bakert about his first semester at the College of Law.

Q: How did your experience as a litigator come into play in your Torts class?
A: I think practicing gives one a certain insight into the real reasons why the common law has developed in the directions it has. It helps one see also why certain trends in the law have been expanded while others have died, which we discussed in my torts class. I try to pass on to the students the sense that clever and aggressive lawyering is what keeps the law alive.

Q: How does teaching mesh with your service as a priest?
A: When I am not playing the role of the cynical litigator, I do consider cases from a position of conscience. I sometimes ask the students to consider the propriety of a certain claim, either because if successful it could gouge society unfairly, or because a kind of relief is sought that, while good for a particular plaintiff, is not good for society as a whole.

After all, tort law is the basis for how Americans live with each other, how we treat each other. Frankly, that area of the law involves many more public policy issues than I would have thought before teaching it.

Q: What did you most enjoy about your class last fall?
A: The arguments. After some initial timidity, the students participated frequently, and whenever there was an opportunity for prolonged questioning and discussion I tried to take advantage of it. I found the students often were much more eager to argue with each other than with me.

At the end of last semester, I spoke to the students about the value of classroom give and take, and how learning the law, like the practice of law, requires that we help each other, that we build on each other’s ideas. After all, we don’t learn alone and we don’t practice alone—we are all in this enterprise together.

Q: What is your overall view of your first semester teaching law?
A: I have enjoyed teaching immensely. I am impressed with the quality of the students, who are really quite fine. Considering that most of them are Kentuckians who will remain here to practice, I think the College is giving the Commonwealth a high quality of lawyer.
The Office of Continuing Legal Education has concluded its 15th year of operation. The 1987-88 fiscal year saw a record number of course registrations combine with a 90% increase in publication revenues to provide for the third successive year of record-breaking income levels. Thus, the program continues to operate as a self-supporting office of the College of Law. It is hoped that the successes of the past year can again be used to provide an increasing number and variety of services to the bar.

Highlights from our 1988 seminar offerings were: the annual "Legal Issues for Financial Institutions" seminar which experienced the largest enrollment since its first year in 1981; the June "Real Estate Law and Practice" seminar which recorded the largest attendance in UK/CLE history for any regularly priced seminar; a record which was broken again only five months later with a new record attendance at the "Workers' Compensation" seminar held in November, 1988.

Highlighting publication activities for 1988 was the establishment of the Assistant Director position in the CLE office with primary responsibilities in the planning, development and supervision of the UK/CLE practice handbook series. The first four "Practice Handbooks" are a reality. Federal Criminal Practice, Basic Personal Injury Anatomy, Drafting Wills and Trusts, and Kentucky Business Organizations. Kentucky Time Limitations, Civil Practice Before Trial, Real Estate Law and Practice, and several other titles are under way. We are extremely pleased with the response these handbooks have received from the members of the legal community.

Our second series of Fall Football Weekend Workshops was also well received. The three-hour, Saturday morning format has allowed us to focus seminars on thorough coverage of more defined topics in a small group "workshop" setting. Attendance for the 1988 series was over twice that of the 1987 series.

An enormous debt is owed to those who contribute their time, expertise and insight for the advance planning, instructional presentations, and written materials that make our CLE offerings possible. It is an added pleasure to enjoy the active participation of a large number of faculty and alumni from the College of Law in these programs. Faculty and alumni have been well represented in all seminars and publications presented in 1988:

Employment Law
January 1988

- Carl B. Boyd, Jr. '84 Henderson
- Marvin L. Coan '73 Louisville
- Michael W. Hawkins '72 Cincinnati
- Richard C. Stephenson '72 Lexington

Securities Law (7th Annual)
February 1988

- C. Craig Bradley '80 Louisville
- Rutheford B Campbell '69 Lexington
- Rhonda S. Paul '81 Frankfort
- Gary L. Stage '76 Lexington

Legal Issues for Financial Institutions
March 1988

- James M. Baker '72 Frankfort
- R. Michael Duncan '74 Inez
- Keith G. Hanley '79 Louisville
- R. David Lester '75 Lexington
- John T. McCarvey '73 Louisville
- Carl R. Page '74 Louisville

Prejudgement and Postjudgement Remedies
April 1988

- Guy R. Colson '74 Lexington
- William M. Reed '75 Lexington
- Elizabeth Lee Thompson '82 Lexington

Equine Law Seminar (3rd Annual)
May 1988

- William T. Bishop '69 Lexington
- Rutheford B Campbell '69 Lexington
- William S. Howard '69 Lexington
- James H. Newberry, Jr. '81 Lexington
- James Park, Jr. '58 Lexington
- William F. Rigby '80 Lexington
- John S. Sawyer '78 Lexington
- Phillip D. Scott '67 Lexington
- Donald S. Sturgill '55 Lexington
- Richard E. Viment '60 Lexington

Nine-Day Intensive Course
In Trial Advocacy
May 1988

- Donna L. Boyce '78 Georgetown
- Paul E. Braden '67 Corbin
- Thomas M. Cooper '74 Lexington
- Samuel E. Davies '73 Barbourville
- Joseph L. Famularo '67 Lexington
- Hon. J. David Francis '47 Bowling Green
- Margaret H. Kamensohn '79 Lexington
- Hon. William F. Knapp, Jr. '69 Corinth
- David A. Marje '77 Lexington
- R. Burl McCoy '72 Lexington
- Ronald A. Newcomer '71 Lexington
- Stephen M. O'Brien '74 Lexington
- Thomas L. Osborne '72 Paducah
- W.R. Patterson, Jr. '63 Louisville
- Robert E. Rawlins '69 Lexington
- Pamela Todd Robinette '78 Pikeville
- E.P. Barlow Roop '66 Glasgow
- Hon. Robert M. Short '56 Owensboro
- Hon. Charles S. Sinnette '56 Catlettsburg
- Richard H. Underwood '77 Law Faculty, Lexington
- Leslie Petterson Vose '78 Lexington

Real Estate Law and Practice
June 1988

- Gary W. Barr '77 Lexington
- Alan O. Bryant, Jr. '70 Louisville
- David C. Farnin '74 Louisville
- Louis A. Kawaja '68 Lexington
- Laura D. Keller '78 Lexington
- Larry G. Kelley '69 Wickliffe
- Timothy W. Martin '72 Louisville
- Patrick D. Pace '75 Owensboro
- W. Patrick Stallard '74 Louisville
- J. Patrick Sullivan '74 Lexington
- James G. Wellerman '72 Covington

Estate Planning (15th Annual)
July 1988

- Glen S. Bagby '69 Lexington
- John T. Bondurant '60 Lexington

Evidence and Trial Practice
1988-89

- Jennifer B. Coffman '78 Lexington
- Hon. George E. Barker '49 Lexington
- Samuel E. Davies '73 Barbourville
- William H. Fortune '64 Lexington
- Jane E. Graham '76 Lexington
- Pierce W. Hamblin '77 Lexington
- John S. Hoffman '64 Henderson
- John C. Hustaker, III '67 Lexington
- Robert G. Lawson '63 Lexington
- Thomas L. Osborne '72 Paducah
Professor Martin J. McMahon examines one of the 500 tax law volumes given to him by Professor Boris Bittker of Yale Law School.

McMahon Receives “Taxable” Gift*

Martin J. McMahon, the College’s Dorothy Salmon Professor of Law, now has an unparalleled library of tax materials. The books were a gift from his friend Boris Bittker, the Sterling Professor of Law Emeritus at Yale Law School. Professor Bittker, with whom Professor McMahon wrote Federal Income Taxation of Individuals (Warren, Gorham & Lamont, 1988), has given Professor McMahon over 500 volumes of tax law sources.

“I now have a complete tax library of every single primary source from the courts and the I.R.S., along with a sizable volume of secondary materials,” said Professor McMahon in describing the gift. The primary source materials include the Internal Revenue Service Cumulative Bulletin from 1919 to the present and complete sets of the Board of Tax Appeals and Tax Court Reports and memorandum opinions, American Federal Tax Reports, American Federal Tax Reports 2d and a number of tax law treatises, along with innumerable government documents.

Professor McMahon plans to use the volumes, now housed in every previously vacant corner of his office and his secretary’s office, to supplement and revise the book he wrote with Professor Bittker.

Professor McMahon has written an opinion letter to himself that the books are a tax-free gift under Section 102 of the Internal Revenue Code.
Report on the Class of 1991

One hundred fifty graduates of fifty-nine different undergraduate institutions entered the College of Law in the fall of 1988. The College continues its tradition of educating law students from across the Commonwealth, and from other states, who have a diverse range of backgrounds.

The overall qualifications of the entering class are even higher than those for the Class of 1990. The median undergraduate grade point average is 3.3. The median LSAT score has moved up one point, to 35. This is the 71st percentile nationwide for those taking the test. Fifty-nine class members, or 39%, are female, a 3.5% increase over the entering class of 1987. However, the percentage of minority students in the entering class has decreased slightly from last year.

The entering class contains a number of returning students, although a majority received their undergraduate degrees in 1987 or 1988. The oldest member of the Class of 1991 is 59; the youngest is 20. While 33 class members were born before 1960, 47 were born in either 1966 or 1967.

The University of Kentucky continues to be the primary feeder school for the College of Law — 53 of 150 first-year students hold undergraduate degrees from UK. Fifteen other Kentucky colleges are represented, with Centre College, Transylvania University and Western Kentucky University continuing to be the other major sources for College of Law students. Other members of the Class of 1991 hold degrees from forty-one different out-of-state schools, including Cornell, the University of Colorado, Tulane, the University of Virginia, Princeton, Notre Dame, Middlebury and the University of Oregon.

The undergraduate majors traditional for law students continue to be popular — the Class of 1991 includes 21 political science majors, 13 history majors and eight English majors. The number of students with an economics, accounting, business or finance background is growing; there are 37 in this year's first-year class, as compared to 24 in the entering class of 1987. But the class includes a number of students with backgrounds not typical for the study of law, including biology, chemistry, electrical engineering, forestry, nursing and such foreign languages as Russian, German and Spanish.

The Kentuckians in the entering class hail from all parts of the Commonwealth. Fourteen are from the 1st Congressional District (the far western part of Kentucky), 16 from the 2nd District (not-so-far west), 18 from the 3rd District (Louisville), nine from the 4th District (northern Kentucky), 12 from the 5th District (southeastern Kentucky) and 11 from the 7th District (eastern Kentucky). The largest number, 56, come from the 6th Congressional District, which includes Lexington. This is in large part because so many UK graduates attend the College of Law.

The 13 out-of-state students are from Michigan, Tennessee, Hawaii, Massachusetts (two students), Georgia, California, West Virginia, Florida, Missouri, Texas, Ohio and Virginia.

---

Andrews & Shackelford establishes Scholarship

The law firm of Andrews & Shackelford has established a scholarship fund to help the College of Law attract outstanding students in need of financial assistance. The first Andrews & Shackelford Scholarship, in the amount of the Kentucky resident tuition to the College, will be awarded for the 1989-1990 academic year.

The firm's partners, David M. Andrews '80 and James C. Shackelford '83, have been actively involved with the College since their graduation. David Andrews currently serves as a member of the College's Development Council. The firm has offices in Lexington, Louisville and Frankfort.

"We are extremely grateful to this firm for their strong support," said Dean Rutheford B. Campbell in announcing the scholarship. "With the kind of very generous help alumni like these are giving the law school, we can continue to make real progress during the coming years."

---

CORRECTIONS

The Fall '88 issue of the Review included a listing of 1987 donations to the College of Law from alumni and friends that deleted, or misreported, gifts from several contributors. Following is a listing of those contributors and their correct gift categories. Our thanks to these and all other of our donors for 1987, and our apologies for the oversight.

DEAN'S COUNCIL
(Gifts of between $1,000 and $4,999)
Lawson, Mr. Robert G. '63 and Mrs. Rosemary
Saffer, Mr. Paul A. '69
Van Meter, Mr. John D. '78

UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATE
(Gifts of between $500 and $999)
The Johnson's Wax Fund, Incorporated

THE HUNDRED CLUB
(Gifts of between $100 and $249)
Michel, Mr. C. Randall '80
Additional Scholarships Awarded

A number of scholarships for College of Law students have been awarded since the Awards Night ceremony in April 1988, when twenty-seven scholarships to current and incoming law students were announced. The recipients of the scholarships announced at Awards Night were reported in the Fall '88 issue of the Review.

The College of Law Scholarship and Honors Committee announces the following additional scholarship grants from name scholarship funds:

John Todd Shelby Memorial Scholarships:
- Julie Lippert '91, a WKU graduate in medical technology from Paducah
- Raymond Mefford '91, a WKU graduate in finance from Bowling Green
- Clarence Miller '91, from Warren County, with a history degree from Centre

W.L. Matthews, Jr. Scholarship:
- Alfred L. Buchanan '90, of Lexington, a political science graduate of UK

Arnold & Porter Scholarships:
- Susan Beverly '90, a UK graduate from Lexington with a psychology degree
- Tim Coleman '90, of Bowling Green, with a management degree and background
- Paul Mattingly '90, from Lebanon, a UK graduate in telecommunications

Dorothy Salmon Memorial Scholarship & Virgil Kinnard Beasley Memorial Scholarship:
- Charles E. Jones '91, of Frankfort, with a history degree from Centre

Ross Harris, UK Fellows & Mary Dunne Memorial Scholarships:
- Debra Broz '91, a Bowling Green native with an English degree from WKU

William Edward Mills Memorial Scholarship:
- Thea Lawton '91, from Lexington, an Oberlin College graduate in philosophy

Lawrence & Catherine Saffer Scholarships:
- Russell Collins '91, a Carter County native and Kentucky Christian graduate
- Kelly Gleason '91, a WKU history graduate from Bowling Green

Fran Murray Scholarships:
- Janet Graham '91, of Bowling Green, with a degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University
- Johann Herklots '91, an EKU history graduate from Bellevue in Campbell Co.

W.L. Matthews, Jr. Scholarship:
- Elizabeth Hughes '91, of Lexington, with an English degree from Vanderbilt

Frank Murray Scholarship and Richard D. Gilliam, Jr. Scholarship:
- Franklin Jelsma '91, of Louisville, with a history degree from Centre

Thomas P. Bell Scholarship
- Geoffrey Marsh '91, of Paintsville, a history graduate from Transylvania University

Brown, Todd & Heyburn Scholarship
- Walter Halbleib '91, of Louisville, with a degree from Miami of Ohio

Peter D. Giachini Scholarship
- Brian Cromer '90, a Bellarmine graduate in business from Louisville

Roy Moreland Scholarship
- Morgan Ward '89, of Lexington, a graduate of Davidson College in N.C.

J. Woodford Howard & Florence Stephens Howard Scholarship
- Kelly Dinges '90, of Floyd County, with an English degree from UK

---

Professor Schwemm Recognized as Fair Housing Expert by Senate

Professor Robert G. Schwemm has been recognized on the floor of the United States Senate as the nation’s leading expert in the area of fair housing law. The occasion was President Reagan’s signing into law the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988. The speaker was Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Senator Kennedy addressed the Senate to clarify for the record that Congress did not intend, as the President stated, that the law be read “as requiring proof of discriminatory intent in order to establish a violation of the fair housing law.” To make his point Senator Kennedy relied on the testimony before the Senate Constitutional Subcommittee of “University of Kentucky law professor Robert Schwemm, the author of a leading treatise on the 1968 law,” that nine U.S. Courts of Appeals, all that have heard the issue, have ruled that a showing of a discriminatory effect may be used to establish a violation. He stated that Professor Schwemm’s testimony contained a “detailed analysis of the issue and the court decisions,” and that Congress accepted this interpretation in passing the Amendments.

Professor Schwemm, when asked his reaction to Senator Kennedy’s comments, said “I am proud to have played a small part in the legislative history of the Fair Housing Amendments Act, which many have called the most important civil rights law passed in the last twenty years.”

Professor Schwemm joined the faculty of the College of Law in 1975. He is a graduate of Amherst College and Harvard Law School. Schwemm currently teaches in the areas of civil procedure, constitutional law and trial practice. His writings include Housing Discrimination Law (BNA 1983) and Housing Discrimination Law—Supplement (BNA 1986), the treatises referred to by Senator Kennedy. Professor Schwemm recently signed a contract to write a new book on the amended Fair Housing Act.
When I was in the People's Republic of China for eleven months on sabbatical leave last year, the world's largest (and China's only) Kentucky Fried Chicken opened in Beijing. Now when Chinese people asked me where I was from, they could associate the name "Kentucky" with something. In fact the association between Kentucky and chicken is ready-made for China since the Chinese for “Kentucky” (Ken Ta Ji) is very similar to the Chinese for “gnaw on a big piece of chicken” (Ken Da Ji).

China has an ancient culture and history far different from ours, and its politics and society are currently in a remarkable state of change. It was a fascinating time to spend in China. No longer do people all dress alike in the way we might think from our glimpses of China during the Cultural Revolution. That brutal period of over ten years of Chinese history will remain unfathomable to non-Chinese, I think. Everything remarkable that one sees or hears of seems to be a result of, or a reaction to, the Cultural Revolution. For instance, during the Cultural Revolution, it was suspicious, if not dangerous, to speak in a foreign language (other than to say, "Long live Chairman Mao.") Now it seems everyone is trying to learn English. It's taught on the TV and radio, and strangers will ride up next to you while you are riding your bicycle and ask to accompany you so that they can practice their English.

As a Fulbright senior lecturer, I received a stipend from the USIA, along with airfare and an amount from which to buy books for the students in China. The host institution provided my housing, a comfortable hotel room in a large complex of hotels and apartments called the Friendship Hotel. I ate most of my meals in the "Dining Room for Foreign Experts" in the hotel complex. The food was consistently good when one stuck to the Chinese side of the menu, which I did. I also ate at local restaurants on occasion, and ate lunch in the student dining room at my school on class days.

I enjoyed eating in China, ate plenty of Peking Duck, shrimp, pork, chicken, vegetables (especially Chinese cabbage), and rice, went to numerous banquets, and lost 10 or 15 pounds without even trying. What a deal!

I taught public international law and American tort law, to graduate students at the Foreign Affairs College. The College is run by the Chinese Foreign Ministry, primarily as a source of diplomats. An Institute of International Law is part of the College. The Institute provides instruction in law to undergraduate and graduate students; it also serves as the administrative center of the Chinese Society of International Law. My classes were small: 10 or 12 graduate students plus one or two auditors. At first I thought my students would all become either teachers or foreign ministry bureaucrats, but not lawyers. But many of them will do what we would consider legal work at the foreign ministry, and several are taking the Chinese version of the bar exam (a post-Cultural Revolution phenomenon).

In numerous warnings at two orientations. I was told that Chinese students will simply not participate in class. This turned out to be untrue for me. At least in a small classroom where the students know each other, where 9 out of 10 students are fluent in English, and where the teacher demands class participation (my excuse is that it's the only way I know how to teach!), Chinese students will talk in class. I was enormously pleased to find that my students asked questions, disagreed with each other, disagreed with me, and generally participated fully as much in class as my students at UK.

Travel took up much of my free time. Two and a half years ago I took a three-week sightseeing tour of China; this was how I originally got interested in the country. Now there were many places to see that one could never get to in three weeks. New places to see included Chengde (emperor's mountain resort); Qufu (Confucius' birthplace); Datong (coal country and famous Buddhist grotoes); Xiamen (across from Quemoy and Matsu); Kunming (springtime all year long); and Chengdu (capital of Sichuan). During the February break between semesters I spent two weeks in Korea on Army Reserve duty, stopping in Tokyo for three days on the way. And in July just before coming home I took a tour of the "Silk Road" deep into Xinjiang Province in the far northwest. Oases in the desert, Moslem people who looked more Persian than Chinese, signs in Arabic script, Kazak horsemen racing by an Alpine lake below snowcapped mountains—it was a whole different scene. Although I traveled sometimes on my own, I usually went on tours arranged for "foreign experts." Individual tourists booking train or plane trips simply cannot book the return trip before arriving at the destination, so if you have to be back by a certain time, you almost have to take a tour.

Knowing that it is virtually impossible to understand a country without understanding the language, I tried to learn Chinese by taking evening classes. People who say that Chinese is a difficult language are correct. I made some progress, though, and enjoyed the class. People who say that Chinese is a difficult language are correct. I made some progress, though, and enjoyed the class. I also took lessons in taiqui or Chinese shadow boxing. These lessons decreased my awkwardness for a little bit every day. They also introduced me to a friend through whom I was asked to co-host a variety show on Chinese television: the English Service New Year's Eve Gala. Not only did I help introduce (in English) various Chinese song and dance acts, but I was also persuaded, against my better judgment, to sing some songs.

I balked at singing "Jingle Bells," which the Chinese seem to think is every American's favorite song. In addition to "Frere Jacques" in English, French, and then Chinese, I sang "My Old Kentucky Home." So for a few minutes, for a potential television audience of millions of Chinese, "Kentucky" was associated not with fried chicken, but rather with an off-key law professor in a borrowed tuxedo, singing about his home in the United States.

Back in Lexington since August, I'm pretty reaccustomed to life in the United States. I'll never forget my friends and my experiences in China, and I hope to return there in the future, if only for shorter periods. In a way that is hard to explain, though, the way that I look at things in America is affected by having lived for eleven months in a nation with a system, culture, history, and language so vastly different from ours.
The law firms of Gearhart, Vigor & Pitt, P.S.C. and Holbrook & Holbrook, Attorneys have merged under the firm name of Holbrook, Vigor & Pitt, P.S.C. The new firm has offices at 207 16th Street and 1500 Carter Avenue in Ashland. Members of the firm include Charles R. Holbrook, Jr., '34, Charles R. Holbrook III '70 and John C. Vigor, Jr. '68.

Members of the Classes of 1941 through 1948 met for a reunion over the weekend of November 18 and 19 at Shakertown. The group stayed at the Shakertown Inn and held meetings, and a reunion dinner, in the West Family House. Robert F. Houlihan '41 and Charles M. Landrum, Jr. '42 were the co-chairmen for the reunion, which was attended by eighteen former classmate.

Henry H. Dickinson '58 of Glasgow and J. Wendell Roberts '66 of Marion have been appointed as bankruptcy judges for the Western District of Kentucky. Judge Dickinson formerly was of counsel with the law firm of Richardson, Barrickman, Dickinson and Ropp. Judge Roberts was a member of the law firm of Westberry and Roberts.

U.S. District Judge Henry R. Wilhoit, Jr., '60 of Grayson recently was appointed to the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees by Governor Wallace Wilkinson.

Reford H. Coleman '63 has established new offices for the practice of law at 50 Public Square, Suite 8, Elizabeth-town.

W. R. (Pat) Patterson, Jr., '63 has joined Nicholas N. King in a partnership for the practice of law under the firm name of King & Patterson, with offices at 900 Cherokee Road in Louisville.

John David Cole '64 and John D. Minton, Jr. '77 are among the partners in the newly-formed law firm of Cole, Broderick, Minton, Moore & Thornton, with offices at 921 College Street in Bowling Green. Elizabeth Y. Downing '85 has become associated with the firm.

Savage, Garmer & Elliott, P.S.C. has moved its offices to 141 North Broadway, Lexington. The members of the firm are Joe C. Savage '64, William R. Garmer '75 and Robert L. Elliott '74.

The Washington D.C.-based law firm of Heron, Burchette, Ruckert & Rothwell, the name partners of which include Julian B. Heron, Jr. '65, has become known as the fastest-growing firm in Washington. The firm practices mainly in the areas of agriculture-oriented law and lobbying, and recently announced its acquisition of Nebraska’s Nelson & Harding, increasing the lawyers in the firm to 176 and making it D.C.’s tenth-largest firm. Other offices are located in Austin, Texas, Phoenix and Mesa, Arizona and Sacramento, California. The new acquisition adds offices in Omaha and Lincoln, Nebraska, Denver, Colorado and Rapid City, South Dakota.

Donald L. Stepner '66 recently was inducted as a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. He is a member of the law firm of Adams, Brooking, Stepner, Woltermann & Dusing with offices in Covington and Florence.

The Lexington law firm of Varellas, Pratt & Cooley has relocated to 1310 First National Building at 167 West Main Street. The members of the firm are James J. Varellas '66, Sandra M. Varellas '75, David F. Pratt '76 and Edward L. Cooley '81.

Joseph L. Famularo '67 has been appointed First Assistant County Attorney by Fayette County Attorney Norrie Wake '68. He was formerly Chief Deputy Attorney General with the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Ann T. Hunsaker '67 is now of counsel to the law firm of Strauss & Troy in its Cincinnati office, and will direct the firm’s health care practice group. She was formerly Chief Counsel of the Health Care Financing Administration and Special Counsel for Catastrophic Health Care and Medical Malpractice with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The law firms of Rice & Seiller and Cantor, Anderson & Bordy have announced their merger under the firm name of Rice, Seiller, Cantor, Anderson & Bordy, with offices at 22d Floor, Meidinger Tower in Louisville and 305 Bank Street in New Albany, Indiana. Members of the firm include Robert H. Rice '67 and Neil C. Bordy '81. Among those associated with the firm are Maury D. Kommer '84 and Michael C. Bratcher '85.

The Class of '68 held a reunion on homecoming weekend, September 23 and 24. The class had a dinner at the Radisson Plaza Hotel on Friday evening and a tailgate party at Commonwealth Stadium on Saturday before the UK-Kent State football game. Joe Bill Campbell chaired the reunion.

Thomas J. Grady '68 has been elected Judge of the Ohio Second District Court of Appeals. The court covers a six-county area in west central Ohio, and is one of twelve District Courts of Appeals in the state. Mr. Grady resides in Springfield, Ohio.

The National Association of Convenience Stores has elected Fred Higgins '69 to the Association’s Board of Directors. He is President and Chairman of the Board of Minut Mart Foods, Inc. with headquarters in Bowling Green, which operates 81 convenience stores in Kentucky and Tennessee.

James L. Cottrell '69 has formed a partnership for the practice of law with Martha S. Warchol under the firm name of Cottrell and Warchol, with offices at Executive Center, 4040 Del Prado Boulevard, Cape Coral, Florida.

The Louisville-based law firm of Barnett & Alagia has been renamed Alagia, Day, Marshall, Mintmire and Chauvin. The new name partners include Donald F. Mintmire '69, who manages the firm’s Washington, D.C. office and practices in the litigation area, and Joseph M. Day.
The Class of '78 held a reunion dinner on Friday, October 28, at Caper's restaurant in Lexington. Over 50 people attended. Jennifer Coffman chaired the reunion.

The Law Alumni Board for 1988-89. From left to right: John D. Van Meter, Greg Bartlett, Don Combs, Marcia Ridings, Dean Biff Campbell, Rebecca White, Frank Berry, Penny Travelsted, Sonny Martin, Jock Reisz, Bill Dexter, John Hickey, John David Preston, Edsel Jones, Bill Stevens, and Barbara Edelman. The "mystery guest" behind Don Combs is Mark Overstreet. Absent when this picture was taken were Kathy Ross Arterberry, J.P. Cline, David Denton, Bill Garmer, Charles Lavelle, John McNeill, Thomas Spain, Charles Ward, and Rebecca Westerfield.

'72, managing partner of the Louisville office, whose practice is concentrated in the areas of agriculture, health care and general practice. The firm's other offices are located in Frankfort, Kentucky, Miami and Palm Beach, Florida, Atlanta, Georgia, Nashville, Tennessee and New Albany, Indiana.

Robert Chandler '71 placed third in the World Veterans' Weightlifting Championships (Heavyweight Class). He also recently was promoted to Executive Vice President with Aimore Securities in Solana Beach, California.

Wm. T. Robinson III '71 has been elected a Fellow of the International Society of Barristers. He is a partner in the Covington law firm of Robinson, Amzen, Parry & Wentz, and presently serves as the President of the Kentucky Bar Foundation.

J. Gregg Clendenin, Jr. '74 has announced the relocation of his offices from Lexington to 100 Wapping Street in Frankfort.

Carl R. Page '74, Executive Vice Presidents and formerly General Counsel, for Liberty National Bank & Trust Company in Louisville, has been assigned management responsibility for the Human Resources and Administrative Services Division.

James E. Rogers, Jr. '74 is now Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Public Service Indiana. He also was made the head of PSI Holdings, Inc., the utility's newly-formed holding company, and elected to each company's board of directors. Formerly he was executive vice president for the gas pipeline group of Enron Corporation, an energy company with headquarters in Houston.

Douglas W. Becker '77 is one of the three partners in the newly-formed law firm of Roach, Becker & Wheat with offices at Cathedral School Court, 433 South Fifth Street in Louisville.

Bruce Boyer '77 has relocated his office for the practice of law to 2753 State Road 580, Suite 206, Clearwater, Florida.

Thomas A. Marshall '77 has resumed the private practice of law at 403 W. Main Street in Frankfort. He formerly served as General Counsel of the Kentucky Public Service Commission and as Chief Hearing Officer for the Kentucky Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet.

Rose Ashcraft '78 is now of counsel with the U.S. Department of the Interior, Office of Hearings and Appeals, Board of Land Appeals. Her office address is 4015 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Virginia. Ms. Ashcraft resigned as Chief Attorney for the Office of the General Counsel, Kentucky Labor Cabinet, where she had served since 1982. She is also former counsel to the Kentucky Occupational Safety & Health Review Commission.

Sarah Collins Huggins '78 has been awarded a Masters of Law degree in Law, Criminology and Psychology from the George Washington University Law Center in Washington, D.C. with "highest honors."

John C. Irvin, Jr. '78 and David R. Marshall '84 have joined the Lexington law firm of Gallion, Baker & Bray, P.S.C. Mr. Irvin previously was associated with the Lexington office of Stoel, Keennon & Park and Mr. Marshall was with Fayette County Legal Aid, Inc.
Ashland Oil, Inc. has promoted John D. Van Meter ’78 to Administrative Vice President for Valvoline Company. He has relocated to Valvoline’s Lexington offices.

John F. Zink ’78 has joined Heideman Law Offices in its downtown Louisville office. The firm recently opened an office in Washington, D.C. under the firm name Heideman & Kittrie, located at 1155 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Suite 300.

G. Edward Henry, II ’79, John P. Watz ’80 and James W. Gardner ’78 have formed a partnership for the general practice of law under the firm name of Henry, Watz & Gardner, 201 West Short Street, Suite 310, Lexington.

Teresa Ann Isaac ’79 has relocated her office to 333 West Vine Street, Suite 300, in Lexington. She served as Assistant County Attorney for Fayette County from 1986 to 1988.

The law firm of Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs has announced that Mark T. MacDonald ’79 and John R. Rhorer, Jr. ’81 have been elected to the partnership. Both are in the firm’s Lexington office in the business law department. Also, Penny R. Warren ’79, former Assistant Attorney General for the Commonwealth of Kentucky, has become associated with the firm in its Lexington office.

Peck, Shaffer & Williams of Cincinnati has announced that John E. Pence ’80, has become associated with the firm. He has worked previously in the Department of Financial Institutions, Commonwealth of Kentucky, and with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Ronnie M. Slone ’81 is now engaged in the general practice of law with offices at 11 Third Avenue in Prestonsburg.

J. Jeffrey Landen ’82 has been named a partner with the Cincinnati law firm of Grayden, Head & Ritchie. He practices in the area of corporate law, with particular emphasis in commercial and equine law.

The Louisville law firm of Middleton & Reutlinger has announced that Kendrick R. Riggs ’82 has become a member of the firm.

Kathryn Ross Arterberry ’83 recently was named Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Liberty National Bank & Trust Company in Louisville. She was formerly with the Louisville office of Brown, Todd & Heyburn.

Fowler, Measie and Bell of Lexington has announced that James E. Hargrove ’83 has become a member of the firm and that Joan E. Morris ’87 and Michael W. Troutman ’82 have become associated with the firm.

The law firm of Bullett, Kinkead, Irvin & Reinhardt has announced that D. Brent Irvin ’83 and Susan Speare Durant ’86 have become associated with the firm in its Lexington office. The firm also announced the relocation of its Nicholasville office to 100 North Main Street.

Bernard F. Lovely ’83 has become a partner in the Lexington law firm of Vmopt & Wills. Other partners of the firm include Richard E. Vimont ’60, Timothy C. Wills ’74, David L. Holmes ’73 and Anne A. Chesnut ’79.

Scott D. Majors ’83 has been appointed Assistant Bar Counsel for the Kentucky Bar Association. He was formerly associated with Warren B. Little Law Office in London.

The Lexington law firm of Sturgill, Tumer & Trutt has announced that Douglas L. McSwain ’83 has become associated with the firm. He is also Chair-Elect of the Young Lawyers Section of the Kentucky Bar Association.

Shirley A. Wiegand ’83 is leaving the Lexington law firm of Brown, Bucalos, Santana & Bratt, P.S.C. to join the faculty of the College of Law at the University of Oklahoma.

Russ Baldani ’84 has left the Fayette County Legal Aid office to join the Lexington office of the Cleveland-based firm of Summers, Fox, Dixon, McIntyr and Davidson.

The Maysville law firm of Royse, Zweigart and Kirk has announced that Susan M. Branner ’84 has become a member of the firm. The new firm name is Royse, Zweigart, Kirk and Branner, and the other members of the firm are Eugene C. Royse ’34, Robert G. Zweigart ’61 and Charles L. Kirk ’66.

Terry L. Clark ’84 has obtained a Master of Laws degree in Patent and Trademark Regulation Law from The National Law Center of George Washington University in Washington, D.C. He is presently a senior associate with the law firm of Birch, Stewart, Kolasch & Birch in Falls Church, Virginia.

The law firm of Lewis, Scoville, Scoville & Stanbury in London has announced its expansion and the addition of Timothy Crawford ’84 to the firm as a new partner. He will manage the firm’s Corbin office located at Main and Center Streets.

The Lexington law firm of Brown, Bucalos, Santana and Bratt, P.S.C. has announced that Nancy M. Curtis ’84 is now associated with the firm.

Karen J. O’Connor ’84 has become associated with the firm of Sifford, Pezzulli, Edson, Meyer & Jones in Dallas, Texas. She is also an adjunct professor teaching contract law at Southern Methodist University School of Continuing Education.

Mark L. Ford ’85 has joined Cawood Smith ’50 in the practice of law. The firm’s offices are located at 105 Central Street, Smith Building, in Harlan.

The Louisville law firm of Porter, Riley & Bardenwerper has announced that Karen A. Harpenau ’87 has become associated with the firm. She formerly clerked for Kentucky Supreme Court Justice Joseph E. Lambert.

Regina Abrams, Robert Temple Juett and Jennifer Leigh Sapp, all Class of ’88, have become associated with the firm of Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs in its Lexington office.

The Louisville law firm of Ogden & Robertson has announced that Susan C. Bybee ’88 has become associated with the firm.

John Di Fiore ’88 is now associated with the law firm of Johnson & Vornerick in Long Beach, California.

John W. Hays ’88 was selected as the third-place winner in the second annual Student Writing Competition sponsored by the Kentucky Bench & Bar for his article, “The Revival of Subject-Matter Analysis in Private-Figure Libel Actions.”
College of Law
Alumni Homecoming Reception
Marriott
Griffin Gate Resort, September 24, 1988
The Supreme Court's Ongoing Struggle with New York Times. He is associated with the Lexington office of Brown, Todd & Hayburn.

The North Carolina law firm of Womble Carlyle Sandridge & Rice has announced that Raymond W. Hines '88 is now associated with the firm in its Winston-Salem office.

J. Stan Lee '88 and Cary Kemper Smith '88 have become associated with the Lexington law firm of Kincaid, Wilson, Schaeffer, Hembree, Van Inwegen & Kinser, P.S.C.

In Memoriam

Basil Frost '25, Marshall, Texas.

Paul Keen '26, Falls Church, Virginia.

James F. Thomas '27, New Castle, Kentucky.

Carroll E. Byron '30, Punta Gorda, Florida. He was a member of the law firm of Farr, Farr, Haymans, Moseley, Emerich and Slifrit, P.A.

Francis H. Hankes '33, Falls Church, Virginia.

James W. Hume, Jr. '33, Jefferson-town, Kentucky.

Elmond L. Martin '42, Lexington, Kentucky.

William D. Sparks '43, Louisa, Kentucky. He was a circuit judge for Lawrence, Johnson and Martin counties from 1956 to 1976.

Roger E. Fritz '50, Mobile, Alabama.

David C. Graves, Jr. '50, Lexington, Kentucky.

Dianne L. McKaig '54, Arlington, Virginia. She was a former vice president for consumer affairs with the Coca-Cola Company and a partner in the law firm of Jones and McKaig until her death. She also was a past president of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association.

Charles D. Weaver, Jr. '70, Lexington, Kentucky.
Drusilla Vansant Bakert, associate dean. ELECTION: Secretary, Southeastern Law Placement Consortium, Atlanta, Georgia.

Todd B. Eberle, associate dean. ELECTION: At-large seat on Board of Directors for the Association of Continuing Legal Education Administrators (ACLEA), an organization composed of over 250 members representing approximately 150 national, state and local continuing legal education providers in the U.S. and foreign countries. PRESENTATIONS: “Competition or Cooperation: Can a Network Function Among Competing Providers of Adult Education Services?” Kentucky Association for Continuing Education Annual Conference (November 1988); “From Competitive to Cooperative: An Uneasy Ride for Law School Based Continuing Legal Education Providers,” ACLEA Annual Meeting, Toronto, Ontario (August 1988).

Williburt D. Ham, professor of law emeritus. ACTIVITIES: Taught one of the sections of Business Associations in Fall 1988, substituting for Dean Campbell.

Circuit Court Judge James Keller '66 of Lexington and Professor Louise Graham present to Dean Rutheford B Campbell a check for the first royalties from their book, Kentucky Domestic Relations. They are donating all proceeds from the book to the College of Law.

David C. Short, professor of law and director, Mineral Law Center. PRESENTATIONS: Program committee and moderator, “Fourth Institute for Natural Resources Law Teachers” sponsors jointly by Eastern Mineral Law Foundation, Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation and the Southeastern Legal Foundation, Boulder, Colorado (May 1989); Sponsor and program chairman, “Thirteenth Annual Mineral Law Seminar”, Lexington (October 1988). APPOINTMENTS: Law school representative for the UK Energy Advisory Committee and Chair of its Environmental/Social/Economic Subcommittee. REAPPOINTMENTS: Co-Chairman, ABA Natural Resources Section, Coal Subcommittee; Executive Committee, Eastern Mineral Law Foundation; Chairman, Scholarships and Grants Committee, Eastern Mineral Law Foundation; KBA Long Range Planning Committee. ACTIVITIES: Member of UK Environmental Systems Committee and Course Coordinator for Legal, Social, Economic Sciences “with responsibility for developing and coordinating this course, which will be taught for the first time in 1989 in the UK Graduate School as a part of the University’s new “environmental systems approach.” The “environmental systems” method is a multidisciplinary approach to studying the environment that includes biological sciences, physical sciences, law, economics and social sciences.

Thomas J. Stipanowich, alumni associ-ate professor of law. PUBLICA-TIONS: “Arbitration and the Multiparty Dispute: The Search for Workable Solu-

Frederick W. Whiteside, professor of law emeritus. APPOINTMENT: Associate, Sanders-Brown Center on Aging, 1988-90, in recognition of "a high-level, ongoing commitment to research, teaching and service in gerontology."

MEMBERSHIP FORM—COLLEGE OF LAW
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Name ___________________________________ Graduation year ____________

Preferred Mailing Address ____________________________________________

___________________________________________________________ Check if home / /

Other Address _____________________________________________________

Title; Firm or Employer _______________________________________________

Area(s) of Practice Emphasis (optional) __________________________________

Business phone ( ) __________________ Home phone ( ) ___________________

Spouse's Name ______________________________________________________

Please return with $25.00 Dues (Check payee: UK Law Alumni Association) to:
Law Alumni Association, University of Kentucky, 261 College of Law Building,
Lexington Kentucky 40506-0048 Attn: Joan A. Yocum

YOU WILL BE MAILED YOUR FREE COPY OF
THE 1988 LAW ALUMNI DIRECTORY AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY
College of Law
Office of the Dean
Lexington, KY 40506-0048