MEMORANDUM

TO: SEALL Publicity and Public Relations Committee
FROM: Sue Burch
RE: Last Letter!!

Enclosed please find the draft copy of our last "PR" letter to the deans. Also enclosed are:

1) AALL Registration Form
2) Hotel Registration Form
3) AALL Meeting Agenda

I would like us to get this material mailed by the end of the month. As usual, please feel free to edit the letter in any way you wish.

This will probably be my last correspondence with you. Thanks to all of you for helping disseminate information about SEALL and law librarianship to the "outside" world. I've kept Tim Coggins apprised of your work, and he knows we've been a productive committee.

I will be in New Orleans and hope to see many of you there!

Again, many thanks for your efforts this past year.

HOUSING INSTRUCTIONS

1. Housing forms must be received at the Housing Bureau by June 20, 1991.
2. Reservations are made in the order received by the Bureau.
3. Lower-priced rooms fill quickly. If the room requested is not available, the second choice room will be assigned.
4. Complete all information requested below and mail before June 17, 1991.
5. NO TELEPHONE REQUESTS WILL BE ACCEPTED.
6. If you are sharing, send only one form with the names of persons who are sharing. If arrival/departure dates differ, include earliest arrival date and latest departure date.
7. IF YOU ARE REQUESTING MORE THAN ONE ROOM, THE NAMES OF THE OCCUPANTS OF EACH ROOM MUST BE PROVIDED. No more than one room may be requested under any one name.
8. Allow 3-4 weeks for processing. You will receive an acknowledgement from the Housing Bureau and a confirmation from the hotel will follow.
9. Make cancellations as soon as possible through the Housing Bureau. However, rooms guaranteed for late arrival should be canceled directly with the hotel and a cancellation number should be obtained. Make date changes directly with the hotel after the confirmation has been received.
10. Read hotel confirmation carefully to see if it is correct.
11. Many of the hotels require a first night's deposit. A check or major credit card (Master Card, American Express, Visa, Diners Club, Discover card) is acceptable. This policy protects the hotel as well as the attendee.
12. New Orleans Room Tax is $3.00 per room per night. Room Sales Tax is 11%.

The burgeoning population in our prisons strains all resources including legal information resources. As prisons privatize and legislatures cut the barely adequate facilities of most state-run prisons, where will prisoners turn to research legal questions? Our three speakers will answer this question by discussing the conditions of prison libraries and the need for cooperation between prison and non-prison libraries, prisoners' right to access legal information as well as the duty of librarians to help provide such information, and the development of policies by non-prison libraries regarding prisoner requests for interlibrary loans, microforms, and legal research. Program level: Basic.

Law students and new attorneys with the new information technologies expect to find electronic media in their working environments. They are used to push-button response, self-programmed conveniences, equipment with the operating instructions on the front, electronic problem diagnosis, customized transactions, global communications, and processing information laced with entertainment. When it comes to teaching legal research in law school or in prison settings, should we have the equivalent of cellular phones, voice mail, VCRs, ATMs, electronic maps, remote controls, talki4 cameras, electronic security systems, or microwave ovens?

Law Librarian and Professor of Law

Tulane University Law Library

Raphael Bahabin

Professor of Law

Loyola University Law School

New Orleans, Louisiana

Most local librarians' understanding of the Louisiana legal system is based upon a vague notion that it is the only civil law jurisdiction in the United States, one strongly influenced by the French, Spanish, and Roman systems. It is the exception to most rules. This program will shed some light on the diverse legal systems and the unique and somewhat peculiar system and explore some of the myths and realities of that development. Program level: Basic.

The... fact is that people don't really live in memoirs, which tend to read them a bit too much. They live in the stories which are told about them in relaying moments when no one "official" is listening. (Art Charpentier, Former AALL President)

Hand on the heels of programs in Reno and Minneapolis, a group of "offbeat" luminaries will converge in New Orleans, looking for a few relaxing moments in which to exchange stories about some of the people, places, and events they recall from their long association with AALL. Just imagine how fascinating it would be to slide into the adjacent booth in the hotel bar and eavesdrop on their retelling conversation as they recall the movers and shakers of an earlier time. This program invites you to do just that. Who (or what) will take the spotlight in their reminiscences this year, following in the footsteps of the likes of Bill Stern, Elizabeth Finley, Miles Price, children's banquet, and "Genemood" parade? Anyone interested in the rich and fascinating history of AALL and law librarianship won't miss the opportunity to find out!

C-6 Tapping the Wealth of International & Foreign Law-Related Material in U.S. Databases: Ask Your Colleagues

James D. Smith

Reference Librarian

University of Arizona

Madeline J. Trees

Reference Librarian

University of California

Richard M. Garelick

Reference Librarian

University of Kentucky

This program is a follow-up to last year's program on providing access to the disabled parishioner. Now that the ADA is law, how do we provide access to employment for disabled staff members? We will attempt to answer the following questions. How do we (as individuals, as libraries, and as an association) recruit and train disabled staff? How do we instill in the profession a commitment to disabled staff? And how do we overcome stereotypes that lead us to think that the disabled are unable to work or unable to work in libraries as other professionals or as support staff? Slides and a videotape will be shown, and there will be time for questions and answers.

Monday, 2:00 p.m.-3:30 p.m.

C-3 Another New Hat to Wear: Law Librarian/Computer Programmer

Stuart Spore, Coordinator, Moderator and Speaker

Head of Cataloging & Automated Systems

New York University Law Library

John Doyle

Associate Law Librarian

Washington & Lee University School of Law

Rick Gates

Systems Librarian

University of Oregon Library

Besides being a profession in its own right, computer programming is a skill that is increasingly in the arsenal of practitioners of other professions, including law librarianship. This session will give law librarians who program a forum to discuss how they apply computer programming to law librarianship. The focus will be on the use of programming to develop self-reliance, to provide tools usable in the marketplace, and to overcome shortcomings of desktop writing systems, utilities, etc. There will also be an opportunity to discuss the insights that the discipline of programming provides about the theoretical and actual practice of librarianship and to discuss how the skill of programming makes translating between librarians and systems professionals more productive. Program level: Intermediate.

Monday, 2:45 p.m.-5:15 p.m.

C-5 General Business Meeting

Penny A. Haustman, AALL President

Coordinator of Law and Library Resources

University of Washington

Due to the nature of legal materials, law libraries discard a tremendous amount of paper each day. This aggravates the already pressing problems of solid waste disposal and shortage of landfill space. Should we, as a profession, address our contribution to this dilemma? Panelists will discuss the advances and problems of recycling efforts from the community, corporate, library, and personal perspectives. The program will provide ideas to help plan, organize, and implement a recycling program in a law library. Time will be allowed for questions. Program level: Basic.

Micrographics publications are a large part of many law library collections, and materials are still being published in various types of microforms. Publishers are now producing materials in the CD-ROM optical disc format, however, and many librarians are concerned about the impact of this new medium on micrographics publishing and, ultimately, law libraries. This program will provide discussion on the technical advantages and disadvantages of publications in micrographics vs. CD-ROM format; CD-ROM publications as a full-text tool for the alternate form of legal graphics, future trends and development in both types of publishing over the next ten years, and the economics of producing and using both formats. Each participant will discuss and debate the issues, allowing sufficient time for questions and opinions from the audience. Program level: Intermediate.

Tuesday
10:15 a.m. - 11:45 a.m.
E-3 Bridges to the Past: Looking After Older Legal Materials (Rare and Historical)

Technical Services Librarian
University of Virginia Law Library

Larry W. Wenger
Law Librarian
University of Virginia Law Library

Ann Russell
Executive Director
Northwood Document Conservation Center
Additional speaker to be announced.

The librarian is increasingly confronted with materials in declining condition that may have cultural and historical value and/or value in the market place. Some of these materials are desirable to collectors and to the antiquarian book trade. The panel will discuss how to identify such materials in the collection, present options for preservation and conservation, and provide hints on sources of support and funding. Program level: Basic to intermediate.

Tuesday
10:15 a.m. - 11:45 a.m.
E-4 Award Winning Papers
Call for Papers Committee
Zena Kovacek, Coordinator and Moderator
Shawnee State University Librarian

For those who let the responsibility of work interfere with their daytime viewing pleasure, here is the chance of a lifetime—the perfect opportunity to cash off the shackles and become part of a real live studio audience. Phil will direct himself (or a reasonable facsimile thereof) in traveling to New Orleans to make a special appearance at the AALL Annual Meeting and take on one of the biggest challenges of his career: making sense out of library images. The sparks will fly as "Phil" and his group of eager guests illustrate what is good and bad about the way librarians are viewed by the rest of the world. A master of both the comic quip and the tough question, Phil will entertain and educate as he leads a unique panel of "experts" intent upon selling us everything it is possible to know (and maybe some things we would like to forget) about library images. Definitely not your standard conference fare: Come armed with questions, comments—and your sense of humor.

Many of the difficulties surrounding both hardware and software in a law library climate is not a lack of standards in the marketplace. While standards are increasing, we are still being beset by incompatible hardware, individualized user interfaces for online and CD-ROM databases, and so on. A selection of formal technical standards (CD-ROM, OSI, X.400, etc.) will be translated into English and examined from several viewpoints. The muddled "industry standards" of the PC marketplace also will be looked at, including coping mechanisms for law librarians and their patrons. Program level: Basic.

The topic of education for librarianship has been prominent in recent professional literature and in discussions at library conferences. The American Library Association's Committee on Accreditation has appointed a Subcommittee on Standards Revision charged with revising the 1972 Standards for Accreditation. As part of this three-year process, hearings will be held at a variety of library association meetings. This is an opportunity for our members not only to learn more about the revision of library school standards for accreditation but also to provide feedback to the Subcommittee through this open hearing.

This program is designed to assist law librarians facing the challenge of moving from a manual to an automated circulation system. It will prepare librarians to ask the right questions, properly evaluate automated circulation components or systems, deal with drastic workflow redesign and staff training, and learn how to improve when essential needs are not met with system supplied options. Discussion will include planning, impact on staff, workflow redesign, fulfilling users' needs during the changeover, integration with other library functions, and advantages and disadvantages.

Copyright concerns in libraries of for-profit institutions may be substantially different than those of non-profit counterparts, especially regarding "fair use" and library photopyroring rights. Copyright holders have begun issuing notice and bringing lawsuits against law firms and corporations suspected of making multiple copies of copyrighted materials without paying appropriate royalties. This program will focus on copyright considerations in for-profit institutions, including fair use and library photopyroring, current levels of compliance or non-compliance in law firms and corporations, and the current atmosphere of enforcement litigation. Attorneys will have an opportunity to ask their toughest compliance/enforcement questions anonymously.

Librarians have complained for years about the cost and frequency of supplementation to looseleaf publications. Every library has reacted to this problem in a different way. This program will focus on the decision-making process concerning the purchase and upkeep of looseleaf treatises in academic law libraries. The traditional approach has been to accept these increases and maintain the upkeep on all looseleafs added to the collection. This policy will be analyzed with special reference to the ABA and AALS standards regarding currency of collections. A growing approach is to adopt a collection development policy that selects specific titles for supplementation. There will be discussion of the procedures used to review titles systematically and the methods for informing patrons that certain material is not being maintained. Alternate ways of updating material will be explained.

Law libraries of all kinds are experiencing an increase in use by paralegal and paralegal students. Like law student interns, these patrons are often ill-prepared to conduct the in-depth research requested by their employers or instructors. The law librarian is increasingly being placed in the position of acting as an advanced legal research tutor. If a number of paralegals request such assistance, it can take a tremendous amount of the law librarian's time. The question then arises as to what assistance are paralegal instructors and employers relying on the law librarian to provide? What level of research sophistication should the law librarian attribute to the paralegal when providing assistance? Where do law librarians need to draw the line on assistance to paralegals? Would the situation be different (improved) if law librarians were to make a more active role in paralegal instruction (e.g., if law librarians were to teach legal research techniques)? Similar to the reference librarians teaching legal research in law schools, paralegal librarians should attempt to reach conclusions on these questions and other in a lively discussion offered by panelsists representing a variety of backgrounds.

By using a Socratic dialogue as a catalyst (similar to the format made popular by Fred Friend on PBS), this program will explore some of the more difficult ethical and political problems experienced by law librarians. Scenarios from law firm, public, and academic law libraries will be presented. Sticky questions about dealing with lazy or incompetent summer associates, pro se patrons, and processes on the library from powerful alumni are but a few of the issues to be addressed.

In order to take full advantage of automation, national standards are being developed to allow computer-to-computer exchange of information. This program will provide basic background information on national standards and their applications. Standards to be covered include the Serial Issue and Contribution Data Committee (SECD), the Accredited Standards Committee X12 for formats for acquisitions (orders, claims, invoices, etc.), and the US MARC Format for Holdings Data. Learn how the standards in development today will affect the automated environment of tomorrow. Be better prepared to convey to the vendors of our automated systems the position of law libraries on these important issues. Program level: Basic.
