A message was received from the House of Representatives, announcing that they had appointed a committee on their part.

The committee on the part of the Senate then retired, and soon after returned, when Mr. Wingate reported, that the committee had performed the duty assigned them, and were informed by the Governor, that he would make a communication in writing by way of message to each branch of the general assembly, in their respective chambers, forthwith.

On the motion of Mr. Bibb, leave was given to the Editor of the Commonwealth to take a seat within the bar of the Senate, for the purpose of reporting the proceedings.

A message in writing was received from the Governor, by Mr. Sanders, Secretary of State.

The said message was taken up and read as follows, viz:

Gentlemen of the Senate,

And of the House of Representatives:

By the permission of the great Ruler of the Universe, we have met for the purpose of communing in order to advance the public good; a trust, filled with great responsibility. To be the guardians in a great degree, of a state like Kentucky, with a population of 800,000 persons, presents considerations of no ordinary magnitude.
At no period of our political history has it happened, that the citizens of our state have suffered by severe malignant disease as during the past year. In many sections of the Commonwealth, the dreadful epidemic which has visited almost every quarter of the Globe, and taken off more than fifty millions of inhabitants, remained for several weeks, carrying with it dismay, desolation and death. Long will the melancholy events of the past year be remembered by those who survive; many, many of our most valuable and interesting citizens have gone to that "country from whose bourne no traveller returns"—the busy scenes and bustle of life are, to them, no more; hushed and stilled by the cold hand of death: but it must be so: it was not the will of Heaven that the "cup" should "pass away." I am pleased, however, to be able to state that the country, at present, enjoys good health—perhaps to a greater extent than usual; for which, and the many other blessings we enjoy, religious and civil, we should be filled with thanks to the author of all good, and implore Him to continue his kindness towards us.

Our state exhibits a prosperous condition: our farmers have had the usual results in quality, and abundance from their agricultural pursuits. Lands have risen in price; our commerce with the other states is active; and the commodities for sale, vended generally at higher prices than those which have been obtained for several years past.

In pursuance of the several laws to that effect, I have subscribed, on behalf of the Commonwealth, fifty thousand dollars of stock in the Washington, Maysville, Paris and Lexington turnpike road company; fifteen thousand dollars in the stock of the board of Internal Improvements for Shelby county; and fifteen thousand dollars in the stock of the board of Internal Improvements for Franklin county. It is believed that those roads will be finished for travel during the present year. The subscription of fifty thousand dollars directed to be made in stock of the Louisville and Elizabeth-town Turnpike has not been entered, because a like sum had not been subscribed by individuals as required by the act of incorporation.

The commissioners, appointed to superintend the improvement of the navigation of Green River, have employed competent engineers, who have made a survey and estimate of the costs of clearing the obstructions in said river, whose report will, no doubt, be laid before you. I am advised that the commissioners will proceed early in the spring to the execution of the trust reposed in them.—There will be a small appropriation needed in addition to the sum allowed at the last session. As this is an improvement of great value to a considerable portion of the Commonwealth, and as it has already the patronage of the state, I flatter myself that the subject will meet a liberal reception on your part.

The undertaking on the part of the state on behalf of the Lexington and Ohio rail road, by which it became security for that company for the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, has been entered into, in pursuance of a law of the last session.—Whether the loan has been negotiated in full or not, I have not been advised.

There has been much energy displayed by the company during the last year, and it is expected that the road will be finished from Lexington to this place by mid-summer. From the energy and ability of the gentleman who is at the head of the corporation, there is no doubt that this highly valuable work will progress as rapidly as possible.

The subject of the revenue will necessarily demand your particular attention. The resources of every government should be at least equal to its necessary economical disbursements; this the people expect and are willing to contribute to that amount. They know that their government must be sustained, and, that if there be a deficit in one year, it must be made up the next, or some time thereafter. The auditor of public accounts will exhibit his report, from which, you will discover that there has been an annual deficit in the revenue for the last ten years, and that there will be one the present year, including the appropriations made at the last session to the turnpike road companies, and to remove the obstructions in Green river, to a considerable extent. We should not be surprised that such has been and is the state of the treasury, when we reflect that so many sources of revenue, heretofore productive, have been annihilated, or are available to a very limited extent—such as the dividends accruing to the state for its stock in the Bank of Kentucky, and of the Commonwealth—the tax upon stockholders; the money arising from the sales of head right lands; a diminution in the amount received for lands west of Tennessee; amounting in the whole to a very considerable sum. Whilst this process was going on, the “wheels of the government” rolled onward; the civil list was paid; the capital of the state was, of necessity, rebuilt, and some appropriations were, by way of subscription, made to works of internal improvement. From all which it is readily perceived, how it is, that the treasury has been and now is so much in arrear. According to the view that has been taken of the law as it now exists, the officers of the government have no power to collect the revenue due for the year 1832. I submit to your consideration, whether it would not be most advisable to apportion the amount due for that year among some two or three subsequent years, in order to lessen the burden, and relieve the people from the necessity of paying a double tax, which would be the result if the whole revenue of 1832 should be collected with that of the present year. Although the law entitled “An act to amend the revenue laws, approved December 23, 1831,” has many valuable provisions, I doubt the policy of that part of it which requires the appointment, biennially, of the commissioners of tax. It is impossible for the clerks of the different county courts to furnish the sheriffs with the different changes that may have occurred in the tax list of a given year; our citizens are enterprising, many changes of property take place in the course of a year, many citizens migrate from the state; and their places are filled by emigrants from other states. In what way is the clerk to obtain the necessary information that he may furnish a list to the sheriff for the second year?—The people, many of them, will not know that it is their duty to go to the clerk’s office and furnish their list of taxable property, or, have it corrected if any changes have occurred, and many who may know it, will omit it. They have been accustomed to be waited upon such occasions. I have no question, from the information received upon the subject, that the change will result in a loss to the state of a much greater amount than the pay of the commissioners, had they been appointed annually, as was the case before the passage of the law referred to. The collection, being made the same year that the property is assessed by the commissioners of the tax, will have a salutary influence upon the revenue; the delinquent list will be comparatively small, to what it was when the collection was made the year after.

Few states have been more liberal to their non-resident land holders than ours, yet, when we require a tax from them on their lands, the same that is paid by our own citizens, not a third or a fourth as much as is paid in many of the other states, we find a negligence and inattention to the subject, in many instances highly culpable. It will be ascertained that there stands forfeited to the state, of non-residents lands, several millions of acres, and that the tax and interest due thereon amount to two hundred and eighty thousand dollars; that in some instances, not a cent has been paid since the commencement of the government, and, in many cases, not for several years. We should act upon the subject, and take some efficient step, under a hope, that those who are interested in the matter, will no longer delay the payment of the tax upon their lands. I would suggest the passage of a law allowing, say two years, for the payment of the amount due, with an interest of 10 or 15 per cent. per annum, instead of fifty and an hundred as the law now is, and, that in the event of failure, let the land be sold to the highest bidder, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the tax and interest. Have the law disseminated in other states, so that those interested might have an opportunity of learning its provisions. It is believed that, under the operation of such a law, some twenty or thirty thousand dollars would be paid into the treasury during the present year. There is, however, a portion of those claims to which I would not extend this general amnesty; those that interfere with the claims of persons who may be in actual bona fide possession, connected with a previous one of several years. There is also a class of cases on the part of occupants, that I would not shield; where persons have located common land office warrants upon forfeited non-resident lands, with a full knowledge that such was the case, individuals acting thus, mala fide, have no claim upon the extraordinary aid of the government. It is not deemed good policy to permit persons to interpose and render impotent the right of sovereignty to release forfeitures, and grant favor to its citizens and others.

It is the duty of the functionaries of the government to provide for the protection of its citizens in the enjoyment of life, liberty, and property, as far as they can, in accordance with the principles of moral justice. The happiness and quiet of the people require that statutes of limitation should be passed; that dormant outstanding claims should, after a given period, be rendered harmless and inoperative. Unfortunately our state exhibits a scene of much conflict in land titles, as the records of the courts and the sad experience of many of our citizens fully attest. Although our state was formed more than forty years ago, and the courts have been always opened for the investigation of controversies, it is believed that many, in relation to land titles, remain yet to be adjudicated. The legislature, actuated by motives highly praise worthy and commendable, passed an act approved February 9, 1809, entitled "an act to compel the speedy adjustment of land titles." Many doubted the constitutionality of the law, but I am gratified at being able to state that its validity has not only been sanctioned by our state courts, but by the Supreme Court of the United States.

It will be discovered by an examination of that law that its provisions extend protection, by way of defence, to persons only who shall have actually settled upon the land in controversy, and who shall have been so settled, or those under whom they claim for seven years anterior to the commencement of the suit. I would submit to your consideration the propriety of enlarging the provisions of the law so as to allow a like protection to all persons who may be in actual possession of land, and where it may have been continued for seven years. The courts have, in their adjudications upon this statute, required that the defendant must be settled upon the land in controversy, else he could not shield himself by virtue of it. Seven years actual occupancy of a tract of land, is as well calculated to give notice of claim, as a residence of the same length of time, and I would extend the protection to one class of cases as well as to the other. Instances have occurred where the interference covered a principal part of the defendant's tract on which he resided and had lived for seven years, but, because the house was not embraced in the confliction of titles the plaintiff succeeded. I do not perceive any reason for such a distinction. While upon this subject, let me ask you to take a review of the various decisions of our appellate court upon the subject of the savings and exceptions in our various statutes of limitation; it is doubted whether the court has not oscillated in its decisions upon that subject; its members have sometimes divided in opinion. It is a subject of much importance, and if you should believe that the laws have been enlarged by construction, pass a statute to remedy the error.

Let me again respectfully urge upon the Legislature the necessity of establishing a State Bank, based upon a specie capital of about four millions of dollars, with four or five branches or offices of discount and deposit; two fifths of the stock to be reserved for the state, the balance to be taken by individuals—let directors on the part of the state be appointed in such mode as you may deem most advisable, equal as near as may be to its proportion of stock; designate the amount to be paid annually into the treasury of the state by the stockholders as a tax upon their capital invested.—Should you concur with me, as to the propriety of this measure, I hope the charter will be well guarded, limiting the powers of the directory to a prudent, cautious exercise of banking privileges; requiring the payment of specie for its issues when presented, and upon failure in that respect, that the charter be forfeited. Make the directory responsible out of their own estates for a violation of the terms of the charter in making over-issues and loans. When I made my communication to the legislature, at the opening of the last session, in which I referred to this subject, I was of opinion that the portion of the stock to be held by the state, might be supplied from the funds in the banks of the Commonwealth and of Kentucky. But it was the pleasure of the legislature to give a different direction, to a considerable amount of those funds, so that we cannot look to that source to supply the capital contemplated to be invested by the state in the proposed bank. I would, therefore, recommend the issue of scrip on the part of the state, for one million of dollars, bearing an interest of four and a half per cent. payable semi-annually, redeemable at the end of thirty years.—Let the money arising from the sale of this scrip, which I have no question might be made in the eastern cities, at par, if not more, be subscribed as stock; the balance of the State's portion of stock to be supplied from the money arising from the Commonwealth's Bank and other sources as the legislature may deem most advisable. There are many who will object to this mode of raising the money, but wherefore? That it would be a profitable arrangement on the part of the state, must be conceded by all. It would no doubt make a clear profit on the sum thus obtained, of three per cent. which at the end of thirty years, if the interest were re-invested annually, would amount to more than a million of dollars—a considerable sum to be made upon credit alone, and that for the benefit of the people of our own state; for I do not suppose that there is any risk in the matter. The money would be on loan to individuals, well secured, and might be withdrawn at any reasonable notice. Let it not be said that the people will have to be taxed to repay the money thus obtained. No such thing. The fund invested will of itself be sufficient; besides the said nett profit to the state of more than one million of dollars. When we have the same fund as it were, at command to restore when due, I do not regard it an indebtedness of the ordinary character. When we have not the means at command to pay debts, whether private or public, they are to be dreaded. You have been advised of the condition of the treasury; you know the difficulty of bringing aid to it. We desire to see works of internal improvement progress, and education diffused as much as possible throughout the state.—The civil list must be paid. Shall we not then issue this scrip and receive this profit, and furnish ourselves with the means to meet public expectation in respect to the great subjects of legislation? But again: there is something due to the enterprise, the commercial, agricultural, and manufacturing interests of the people; let us afford them as many facilities as we can, consistently with the constitution and the conservative principles of the government. Establish a bank upon the principles suggested, paying the specie for its notes, and it will give a beneficial impulse to all the leading interests of the people. Look into the State of Ohio, you will find eighteen or twenty banks. In the state of Tennessee, the legislature about a year since incorporated the Union Bank with a capital of three millions; the state was authorised to issue its scrip bearing an interest of five per cent. for half a million, which has been sold at a premium. The state of Alabama issued its scrip for three and a half millions bearing five per cent. interest. Mississippi and Louisiana have also increased their banking capital in the same way. Should we refuse to establish a State Bank, and afford the facilities the exigencies of the country demand, we may expect to see many of the notes of the banks of the adjoining states in circulation among us. Is it not infinitely better to have an institution of our own, one that the people would get accustomed to, and would be interested in sustaining, whose notes would be current alike in every part of the state? If the privilege of banking be profitable, let our own state have a share in it. But upon this subject we have been told to wait — wait until it be ascertained that there is no longer any hope of re-chartering the Bank of the United States. Some say until it be re-chartered; and then if the condition of the country requires it, establish some independent banks. How long shall we wait? can they who make the objection tell us? I did hope that the question of the establishment of a state bank would have been decided upon its own merits, aside of every consideration other than to advance the public interest. I regret that the question of re-chartering the Bank of the United States has been obtruded and made to operate upon a question exclusively of state cognizance. I remember to have heard something myself about that question upon a certain occasion; and when the constituted authorities of the state were soon to decide upon an important question, involving the great interests of the state, behold it comes again upon us. Let that subject occupy its proper forum—the general government. I have had much solicitude that the action of the two governments should be confined, each to the legitimate exercises of the attributes conferred by the respective constitutions. I had confidence in the talents, patriotism, and firmness of the functionaries of the general government, and believed that the ship of state would be safely steered, holding up to the world the prosperity of the nation; and I am gratified that my expectations have been fully realised. The genius and character of the people of Kentucky could not have been well considered, or the objection alluded to would not have been made. With a population high-minded, honorable and magnanimous, willing to concede much for the purpose of promoting harmony and good feeling, but not a cent for tribute, their opinions are not to be propitiated by suspending a sword over their heads. By being told to wait for a state bank until the United States Bank be rechartered, it need not be expected that they will barter their opinions, or forego what they believe to be right upon one question, in order to succeed in another. I do hope that the time has not arrived when the oracle at Delphi must be consulted before we can proceed in the examination of important subjects; let us rather consult our constituents,—endeavor to ascertain what will best subserve their interests, and let that be done, regardless of the influence it may have upon the question of re-chartering the United States Bank. I am pleased to ascertain that many, who favor a continuation of that bank, are also advocates for the establishment of a state bank. They believe that both might be useful. Whether we have a bank of the United States or not, we should have a state institution. The suggestion to establish a number of independent banks, is also made with a view to thwart the creation of a state bank. Surely we are not prepared to act over the bank scenes that have occurred within the last fifteen years in Kentucky. Is there an individual acquainted with the history of the state, who does not remember the baneful influence that the establishment of the forty independent banks had upon the country? The great desideratum in the various towns was to get a bank charter; and what followed? The business was overdone, and the banks failed—a depreciated currency left upon the people, and many of them ruined. The great difficulty in legislating upon the subject, is, to know when to stop; there is a tendency to proceed onward, which should always be scrutinized. I should, therefore, regret exceedingly, to see the establishment of various independent banks in the state. Respond reasonably to the expectations of the people, afford them the facilities their interests demand by the creation of a state bank, founded upon a solid capital, calculated to assure to the people a good currency, equal to gold or silver, and then let us forbear. I would not have a bank of any other character. A depreciated currency is most ruinous to any people, and has been repudiated in almost every country that has suffered by its deleterious influence. Money is used for the purpose of exchange, and as a means by which we test the value of all commodities. Various expedients have been resorted to for the purpose of obtaining a substitute for money.—Bank bills, bills of exchange, &c. when they represent money, answer the purpose very well; but, when they cease to do this, and their value is to be tested by equivocal rules, it is unfortunate for any country. Let us not, therefore, be led away by the idea of the establishment of a number of independent banks. It will not do. Again, money may be regarded as having a certain and a relative value. Certain, as it relates to all domestic uses; relative when compared with the value of money in other states and countries. If the government of a state see that the currency within its own action and legitimate cognizance be of the proper standard at home, nothing further should be required. Let it not, therefore, be objected to the measure proposed, that possibly the notes of the bank may not be exactly at par in some of the other states; they will be current within the limits of their own state. The comparative or relative value depends upon a variety of incidents, so numerous that it cannot be regulated exclusively by legislative enactment. The commercial part of the community in the several countries fixes the exchange or relative value of money between the several parts of the world. I hope, therefore, that no political economist will insist upon such a paradox—that the value of money can, by legislative authority, be made the same in all countries. Much subsidiary aid may be afforded as well by the legislature, as by the energies of the people. Whatever tends to increase the prosperity of a community—the construction of turnpike roads, rail ways, clearing the obstructions in navigable streams; the diffusion of education among the people; the increase of agricultural products, of manufacturing establishments, and of the general commerce of the country—will elevate the relative value of money. These are the bases upon which the wealth of a country mainly depends; the data by which the relative value of money is ascertained; for if a country exports more than she imports—sells more than she buys, there is no question that if the currency he sound at home, it will be in good demand abroad.

The practice of lending money at an inordinate rate of interest, as pursued by many in the state, is an evil of considerable magnitude. If it were loaned at a small premium over the legal rate, as is done by some, I should not deem it a subject for this communication. But there are many professed usurers, who lend at an exorbitant, destructive interest; whose sensibilities become blunted; who speculate in their own minds, like the master of ceremonies at the inquisition, how much the patient will bear—two, four, or six per cent. a month. Let me, therefore, call your attention to that subject, and suggest that the law of the 6th February, 1819, be repealed. By that act a usurious contract is legitimated to the extent of the principal and six per cent. interest, and made void as to the usurious interest only; and the statute of January 26th, 1798, which declared the whole contract void, if usurious, was repealed. By that act, any borrower of money or goods, might exhibit his bill in chancery, and compel a discovery upon oath of the facts in relation to the contract, and if it were ascertained to be usurious, the lender would be bound to accept his principal, without interest. That the act of 1798, is better calculated to prevent the practice of usury than that of 1819, I think no one will doubt. It is milder in its provisions than most laws that exist upon the subject in our government. I would, therefore, recommend that the former law of 1798 be re-enacted.

Anciently, it was held as being against conscience to exact interest for the use of money: That opinion, however, yielded to the more correct one, that a reasonable rate of interest was admissible. But in all civilized countries, for centuries past, the governments have turned their attention to that subject, regulated the amount of interest, and in some instances affixed heavy penalties incident to the violation of the law. The rate of interest has varied in our own state, and it varies in several of the other states. It is contended by some, that they have a right to use their money as any other article of value, and that the legislature should not intervene. They who argue thus, should recollect that the whole community are interested in the value of money; that good policy requires that it should be circulated for the benefit of the people as much as possible; whatever, therefore, tends to retard its circulation, or make its value fluctuating and uncertain, should be the subject of legislative enquiry. If usury were tolerated, much of the money of the country would be locked up in the desk of the miser, waiting for opportunities to loan at a high interest.

The great object of government in the administration of the criminal law, is to punish the guilty, and to shield the innocent. The rights of an individual should be as plenary in a criminal, as in a civil case. If there be a controversy in which a few dollars are involved, either party may obtain the opinion of the appellate court upon the subject; but not so in a criminal case, where a man's life or liberty may be put to hazard. Does it not seem that there is an unfitness in this? Is the government in such haste for the punishment of individuals, that a short time could not be allowed to test the conviction by the opinion of the appellate court? Upon questions that often occur in the progress of the trials of criminals, there is much diversity of opinion in the different circuit courts. Each is independent of the other, and at liberty to adopt its own opinions, and form its own criminal code. I submit to your consideration, whether some remedy may not be applied. Let the defendant be entitled to a writ of error as in civil cases. Let the case be disposed of by the appellate court at the com-
The commencement of the first term after the trial in the court below.—The delay would not be long, and as it would be at the election of the defendant, he could not complain; the additional expense would be inconsiderable. In cases where the attorney for the Commonwealth believed, that important questions had been decided in the progress of a criminal trial, I would direct that the record be sent by him to the appellate court. Although it would not affect the individual who might have been acquitted, the opinion might serve as a rule in like cases and questions; and thus we might probably obtain uniformity and some kind of system in the administration of the criminal law.

Permit me to call your attention to the jury system, and to recommend a change in relation to it. The people have a direct interest in every thing which relates to the judicial department of the government. Every one acquainted with the business of courts, must admit, that the present mode of selecting jurors is not well adapted to a correct administration of the law. Men should be selected, on so important a trust, because of their intelligence and moral worth; but it is not so, generally, under the present system. The sheriff is commanded to furnish a jury, and of necessity, he is obliged to summon those with whom he may chance to meet, whether qualified or not; and persons are often brought into the court in a state unfit for business. Thus it is, that jurors are selected who are to decide questions of the highest import. Besides, jurors should be paid a reasonable compensation for their services. Individuals cannot live entirely upon patriotism. Have the requisite number summoned a short time before their services would be required, and let the state pay a portion, and the litigants the balance of an allowance equal, at least, to the expenses of those who might serve. That such a change would contribute greatly to the correct administration of the law, I have no doubt.

In looking into the archives of the state, I regret, that many important documents in relation to the political history of the Commonwealth, are not to be found. It is believed that many have never been furnished; indeed some of them have never been printed; and that others were lost in the conflagration of the Secretary's office some twenty years ago. Do we not owe it to ourselves and to posterity, to rescue from the oblivious hand of time, important papers, in which all should feel an interest? It is a fact not generally known, that the people inhabiting the district of Kentucky had many meetings. Convention followed convention for several years anterior to the final separation from the state of Virginia. The journals of those Conventions have never been printed, and perhaps, but a single copy remains in the hands of a private gentleman. The journal of the convention of 1799, which formed our constitution, I find, also, in manuscript. We are proud of the name of Kentuckians. There is a laudable solicitude, to know everything in respect to our history. Those “pioneers of the west,” were a bold, patriotic, enterprising, and liberal people. Let us, at least, perpetuate their public acts in some durable manner, and be able to furnish a complete history of the proceedings of the various public assemblies in connection with our government.

I would, therefore, suggest the propriety of the appointment of a committee to make enquiries into the matter, and that you direct the printing of such documents as may be regarded necessary to a perpetuation of our political history as a state.

I am much gratified to learn, that Transylvania University is in a highly flourishing condition; the zeal and high attainments of the gentleman who presides over the institution; the deservedly high and elevated professional stand of the gentlemen who have charge of the various chairs in the law and medical departments, are a sure guarantee to the public, of its usefulness in an eminent degree. I flatter myself, that it will continue to receive the patronage of the public. The people of the state are particularly interested in its success; were it not for its existence, many of our young men would be obliged to go to other states to finish their professional studies. The various colleges in the state are in successful operation, as are also, many schools, imparting useful knowledge to the rising generation.

I have observed, with much pleasure, the united efforts of many learned and distinguished gentlemen, with a view to inform the public mind and bring it to a proper estimate of the importance of a general diffusion of education. I hope that much good will result from their labors, and that every one will contribute his aid on so important a subject.

We congratulate ourselves on the excellence of our government; we venerate our ancestors, by whose prowess and wisdom
it was formed. They labored for themselves and for posterity.—Shall we not discharge the duties which devolve upon us with the same steadfastness of purpose, to the same end? There is no subject of more importance in a political point of view, in a republican government, than that of education. It is its main pillar.—Unless the people be informed, they cannot long sustain the government to advantage; they must possess the ability, as well as the power. Liberty and a want of intelligence in the great body of the people, do not long abide together. In proportion as either may advance, the other will recede. Such has been the experience of all the republican governments that have existed. With such monitory lessons before us, derived from history and our own experience, we should be disposed to do all that we can upon so important a subject. In order to preserve our government, there should be, not only a ceaseless vigilance on the part of the people in respect to its administration, but, also in relation to the means necessary to its continuation; let that be the case, and we have nothing to apprehend; let the people be informed, and they will rule correctly.

The Lunatic Asylum at Lexington; the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb at Danville; the Hospitals at Louisville and Smithland; will I hope receive your particular attention. They are institutions resulting from the best feelings of the heart, to provide for the unfortunate; and should be sustained in a manner worthy the objects to be attained.

The Penitentiary system will also be the subject of enquiry.—The convicts suffered severely by the visitation of the epidemic during the past year. The Agent and Physicians were very vigilant, and fewer deaths occurred than usual, in proportion to the number of cases.

There might be a valuable improvement made by a different arrangement of the buildings within; the plan will be communicated to you by the agent, to whom the country is much indebted for his attention to the institution. In any event, I would recommend that you order a room to be furnished for the purposes of an infirmary. It is extremely difficult to give the necessary attention to a sick person, confined in a cell, barely sufficient to admit another individual. It will be found, that the fiscal affairs of the institution are in a satisfactory and flattering condition. It is a source of some pleasure, that whilst many of the Penitentiaries of other states are a charge upon their governments, ours yields a small revenue; and that too, without drawing too heavily upon the time and labor of the convicts.

The subject of the militia, also claims your attention. I regret to find, occasionally, a disposition to annul the system entirely. It is believed, that the militia of the Union is its defence and support. We should, therefore, keep it duly organized and disciplined. I hope you will take a review of the whole matter, and embody the laws upon the subject in one general act. If you should find that a work of too much labor for one session, appoint a committee of competent persons to collect all the laws upon the subject, and make a report to the next session of the legislature.

In pursuance of a resolution adopted at the last general assembly, I transmit to you a report from the Quarter Master General, of a plan for an arsenal.

The legislature of Virginia made a donation to the officers of her state and continental line, of a tract of land containing four thousand acres, binding on the Mississippi, including the town of Columbus. Some years ago, the legislature of this state ordered the land to be sold, and the proceeds to be deposited in the treasury for the use of said officers, their heirs, &c. I am charged with a report, herewith transmitted, from the trustees, to whom had been delegated the trust, by which it appears that the land has been sold, and the proceeds deposited in the treasury. It is proper, therefore, that a law should pass, making distribution of the fund upon some equitable principle.

It appears that there remains due to the Bank of the Commonwealth, the sum of $647,769 19, of that sum it is supposed that $236,651 90 are due from persons who are insolvent, or in doubtful circumstances. The profits, to the state, of the institution amount for the last year, to the sum of $18,094 98. Its expenses for the same time, to the sum of $13,890 55. There were notes in circulation on the 30th day of Nov. 1833, that had been issued by said bank, the sum of $103,269 35, and there was on hand at the same time, the sum of $96,730 65, which, in pursuance of the policy heretofore adopted, should be cancelled by burning.

From the Bank of Kentucky, it is estimated that the state may receive the sum of $50,000.
The Commonwealth owns stock in the Maysville, Washington, Paris, and Lexington, the Shelby and Franklin turnpike roads, to the amount of one hundred and thirty-four thousand, three hundred and eighty-four dollars.

Pursuant to the request of the legislature, I did, shortly after the close of the last session, transmit to the President of the United States, to each of our Senators and members of Congress, and to the Governor of each of the states, a copy of the preamble and resolutions adopted by our legislature, on the subject of nullification as insisted upon by South Carolina. During the recess, I have had the honor to receive a communication from the Governor of each of the following states, upon the subject of nullification: New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware, Ohio, Alabama and Pennsylvania; and the same are herewith transmitted, out of respect to the respectable states named, and from a consideration of the high importance of the matter. As we have heretofore acted upon the subject, no additional action will be necessary. It is a matter of much solace, to find those states so unanimous in their opposition to the doctrine of nullification. I flatter myself, however, that we shall never have occasion again to refer to those documents; that peace and harmony will be cultivated among the states, and also between the general and state governments.

Gentlemen, it will afford me great pleasure to co-operate with you in all that may advance the public good.

REPORT

BANK OF THE COMMONWEALTH.

[Fourth Th December 1833]

Sirs—I have the honor to communicate herewith, a report, exhibiting, in detail, the situation of the Principal Bank, and each Branch District, on the 30th day of November, 1833.

The entire resources of the institution are as follows:—Notes under discount, $831,682 28. Notes in hand, $1,066,144 72. Real estate, $42,128 39. Due from former Cashiers, Attorneys, Treasurer's over Hand, &c., $86,162 29. Making an aggregate sum of $809,334 54.

The interest received on notes renewed, and those paid in full during the year, amounts to the sum of $18,094 98; and the expenses for the same period to $13,389 55; leaving a profit of $4,654 42. To be passed to the credit of the Treasurer; which, added to the sums heretofore paid into the Treasury, together with the Literary Fund, appropriations to Transylvania University, Colleges, &c., makes the sum of $490,811 53, that has been realized to the state in stock.

There now remains of all the notes issued, payable to bearer, the round sum of $200,000. The interest received on real estate, and estimated profits, amount to $474,110 71 49; leaving $174,099 25. Making $239,099 95. Leavmg a profit of $76,146 00.

The accounts of the Bank have been credited by the sum of $186,729 90, which is charged to the stock account, and adds that item to the sum of $471,109 37. And, in accordance with an usage that has prevailed for several years, and which seems to have met with the approbation of the Legislature, the Treasurer has again been permitted to overdraw to the amount of $27,449 34.

Under the provisions of an act to improve the navigation of Cumberland river, approved on the 2d day of February, 1833, the sum of $3286 77, has been paid over to the state direct; and stands charged upon the books of the Bank to that appropriation.

Owing to the general pressure for money during the past year, which has mainly been produced by sickness and death, the debts have not been certified in rapidity as they otherwise would have been. In many parts of the State, the courts have transacted very little business; and it has been found impracticable to obtain trials in a large majority of contested cases.

In addition to this, it is generally known to the debtors, that the constitutionality of the Bank is a question of controversy now pending before the Supreme Court of the United States, which has contributed in no small degree to embarrass the operations of the Bank, and will continue to do so until the same shall be determined. The Bank is represented by able counsel, and a trial is confidently expected at the approaching term of the court.

Very respectfully, Sir, your obt. serv't.

Hon. JAMES T. MOREHEAD.
Speaker of the Senate.

A Statement of the situation of the Bank of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, on the thirtieth day of November, 1833.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE:

I have been furnished with a copy of a resolution of your body, adopted on the 8th instant, requesting me "to furnish the Senate with the originals, or copies, of the several recommendations for the applicants for the office of Auditor."
It is always a source of regret that I am at any time compelled to differ with the Senate, in relation to the interchange of business, concerning Executive nominations.

The papers called for, are not official documents of the executive office, but are like various oral communications on the same subject addressed to myself, for my own consideration; many of them are private in their character.

I am not aware that a like requisition has ever been made in the history of the Government, save one, to some extent similar, which was from a chairman of a select committee of the Senate at the last session of the Legislature, and which was then refused.

It is the duty of the executive to make nominations for office, and that of the Senate to advise and consent to, or, reject them—each should act independently of the other. But if any gentleman shall desire to see any recommendations in my possession, in behalf of any gentleman recommended to me, it will afford me pleasure to exhibit them to him, or such of them as are not essentially private in their character.

Fully impressed, therefore, with the conviction that it would be improper for me to lay them officially before the Senate as public documents, I must beg leave, most respectfully, to decline doing so.

JOHN BREATHITT.

Ordered, That Mr. Daviess inform the Governor thereof.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE:

I herewith transmit to you, the report of the President and Directors of the Lexington and Ohio Rail Road Company, made to me, of the condition of the work in which they are engaged, the amount expended thereon, the sources from whence the funds were derived, and their reliance for means necessary for the accomplishment of the enterprise, beyond those within their immediate control.

JOHN BREATHITT.

His Excellency, John Breathitt, Esq.

Sir:—The President and Directors of the Lexington and Ohio Rail Road Company respectfully solicit the favor of representing to you, and through you to the Legislative department of the Government, the condition of the work in which they are engaged, the amount expended thereon, the sources from whence the funds were derived, the present state of their finances, and their reliance for means necessary for the accomplishment of the enterprise, beyond those within their immediate control. The magnitude of the undertaking, whether viewed with reference to its cost, or the benefits it will confer by its speedy execution, has not been equalled by any private association in the western states, and humbly hope that without being a charge upon the public Treasury, that it will continue to receive, what it has experienced already, the kind attention of the public spirited and generous representatives of the patriotic citizens of Kentucky.
The condition of the work, at the present moment, is this:

The road way, with the exception of some few points at which the rock excavations are incomplete, is graded for a distance of twenty six miles, or within two and a quarter miles of Frankfort; the grading of the latter part is under contract to be finished in May next.

The rail sills are laid down, though not in a connected and continuous line, on fifteen miles of road, and will require the laying down of six miles more, to make an effective line of twenty-one miles in length. The materials for which being nearly all prepared for laying down, with four separate and efficient contractors, sixty days of favorable weather will be ample time to complete the road to a point within seven miles of Frankfort; and as our pecuniary resources are amply sufficient for the object, we have a reasonable expectation of connecting the city of Lexington with the Capital of the state, by a well constructed rail way of permanent materials in all the month of August next.

The balance of cash on hand, $16,688

The resources from whence that amount has been drawn, are as follows:
From stockholders, of which nearly one half has come from the Directors, $199,365
From the Bonds guaranteed by the State, 100,000
Premium on Bonds, 7 per cent. 7,000

$306,365

The company will require, for the completion of their Road to the Ohio River, the sum of four hundred thousand dollars beyond the means within their immediate control.

To raise that sum, we propose negotiating for a convertible loan, and respectfully ask from the legislature permission to borrow, upon the credit of the company, the sum of four hundred thousand dollars, with power to convert the loan, at some future period, into stock in the road; the time for the conversion to be agreed upon between the Directors and the lenders.

Relying with the utmost confidence in the safety of our investment, we are willing to subject all we have paid, with as much more, to the security of the money we may borrow; and respectfully ask of the Government, that they will permit the mortgage that may be executed therefor, to take precedence of that heretofore given to the State, in security for their guarantee of our bonds, requiring from the President and Directors of the Rail Road Company a bond, binding them in their individual capacity, conditioned, that they will faithfully apply to the objects of their corporation, all the money thus borrowed.

Should the constituted authorities be pleased to extend to the company the kind indulgence asked for, in the prosecution of an undertaking, so important and beneficial in its consequences, as is the work in which we are engaged, we humbly conceive that it will be adding to, rather than diminishing, the security they now hold, for the faithful discharge of the debt already contracted or the joint credit of the company and the State, inasmuch as every dollar vested in a road, terminating at the Ohio, would be worth more than if the Road terminated short of it.

We are the more encouraged in our application, by the liberality manifested by the Government towards other works of a public character; in which they have participated in the profits and loss in much greater proportion than we ask. We are willing to subject our capital to the hazzard. If productive, the State are to become interested to the whole amount for which they are committed; if unproductive, the entire individual capital invested, is made subservient to the security of the State from loss.

It may be proper to remark, that the road, completed from Lexington to Frankfort, was estimated originally, to cost $355,000. Say, three hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars; and, from the evidence before us, we are warranted in saying, that the actual cost of executing the work, will not vary five thousand dollars, over nor under the original estimate. And inasmuch as the calculations for the entire road to the Ohio, was founded on the same data of calculation, we may reasonably rely upon executing the work at an expense, not exceeding the original estimate; which was one million of dollars. This result, so unusual in public works of great magnitude, may be readily accounted for, by the deep stake those who manage the finances had in their economical application.

Before closing, permit us to express to the guardians of the public welfare our most cordial thanks for the kindness and indulgence they have, at all times, extended towards the important enterprise in which we are so ardently engaged, and to assure them, that no exertions on our part shall be wanting to confer upon the interior, at the earliest period practicable with our limited means, all the benefits that can be conferred by an uninterrupted channel, for their commerce, as cheap, more expeditious, certain, and secure than good river navigation; and will name the year 1837, as the probable time at which we will be able to apply, and make steam power subserv the agricultural and commercial interests of the counties far removed from boat navigation, as fully as it has those interests in counties adjacent to steam boat navigation.

Respectfully submitted, in behalf of the Directors of the Lexington and Ohio Rail Road Company.

January 11, 1834.   ELISHA I. WINTER, President.

The first section of said bill is as follows, viz:

§1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, That, in addition to the sum heretofore appropriated by the act to remove the obstructions to navigation at the Falls of Green River, and for other purposes, approved on the 2nd February, 1833, there shall be, and is hereby appropriated, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, to remove the obstructions to the free navigation of Green River, at the principal falls thereof; and that the commissioners, who were appointed by the before recited act, and were qualified according to the provisions thereof to superintend and conduct the work necessary to be done in the removal of said obstructions, shall proceed, with reasonable despatch, to cause the necessary dams and locks to be constructed at the falls of said river, of sufficient dimensions to facilitate the passage of boats and other craft over said falls at low stage of water, up and down said river: Provided, that the said commissioners shall, if they deem it most advisable, confine the appropriations made by this and the before recited act, to the construction of dams and locks for slack water navigation at Vienna and Spot's Falls, until the obstructions to navigation at those falls shall be removed; and the remainder of the money, if any, to be applied to the removal of other obstructions and impediments to the navigation of said river.

The first amendment reported from the committee of the whole, proposes to strike out "twenty-five" in the said section, printed in italics, and to insert in lieu thereof "fifty," and the question being taken on concurring in said amendment, it was decided in the affirmative.

The said petition, agreement and statement, were referred to the committee of propositions and grievances.

Mr. McHenry presented the reports of the commissioners appointed to improve the navigation of Cumberland river, which are as follow, viz:

The undersigned commissioners appointed by the Legislature of Kentucky, at their last session, to view and mark out channels through the shoals in the Big South Fork of Cumberland river, below Maj. Dick, and M. Huling's Coal Banks, beg leave to report,

That they proceeded to discharge the duties assigned them in the month of July last. On ascending the river, the first obstruction was found to be at a place known as Sloan's Shoals.—At this place the river expands to double its width above, and falls about seven feet in half a mile. At one place there is a break or abrupt fall of three and a half feet, falling over broken ledges of lime-stone rock. At this place we had a channel cleared on the north bank, one hundred and twenty feet wide, graduating the fall by removing the ledges of rock which made the fall, and built a wall four feet high and eighteen feet wide. This dam is about two-fifths finished, and is to be continued in an oblique direction across the river, which will throw all the stream in the channel until it passes the fall. The whole appropriation, made at the last session of the Legislature, was expended on this dam and shoal, (as it was considered the greatest obstruction,) except about 150 or 200, which will not be expended this winter.

The work has been done in a very strong manner, so that there is very little danger of its being injured by the river rising. The completion of this dam will enable boats to pass down by these shoals with any tide at which the other shoals could be passed.

From the head of the Sloan's Shoals the river is very good until we arrived at the mouth of Big Sinking creek. At this place the river falls about four feet in one hundred yards. Above and opposite the mouth of the creek, on the north side, two small bars put in about one third across the river, confining the current down the south side to the head of a large bar; below the mouth of the creek this bar throws the water across to the north bank, unless the river is very high.

The upper end of this bar is very low, not more than two feet high at low water, and the lower end is about four feet high. The plan by which we proposed to improve this shoal, was to place a frame of timber across the present channel, from the upper end of the large bar, below the mouth of the creek, to the lower side of the small bar on the north side, which will be about forty yards in length, and clear a channel through the bar eighty feet in width, and fill up the frame of timber with the rock taken from the channel in the bar, (which is composed of lime-stone rock and sand, which will be easily removed,) and when once opened through, the current of the river will keep it open, as the channel will be perfectly straight.
The expense of making this improvement will not be very great. $500, it is thought, would complete it.

From this place there is very little obstruction in the river, (except some large rock, stand in deep water, which the current washes close by in high water, all of which is marked and should be blown off to low water mark; and a bar at the mouth of Cooper's Delight, which should be cleared of all the timber on it,) until we arrived at the mouth of the Little South Fork. At this place is the first stone coal mines, and this is the highest point from which boats have descended.

From here there is nothing but rocks, near the bank at the place where the current washes, which will have to be blown off, and which are marked for about eight miles, to the mouth of Big Creek, (or as it is better known by the name of the Gulph.) Here the river becomes very much compressed by masses of large sand stone, that nearly fill up the channel, which is at one place only six and a half feet wide at low water, but of great depth. The plan by which we proposed to improve this place, was, to blow the rock down to low water mark; as the water is very deep, to just blow them down, they would be out of the way. The channel we marked through here, is 150 feet in width; at the lower end of the gulf a sharp clift puts in on the north side, a considerable distance into the river, which also bends considerably to the south. This point divides the current and turns nearly half the river back, forming a large whirl, or gulf, which gives name to the place. Here it was thought necessary to remove a high bar on the south side, (so as to enable boats to hug the point,) and blow off some of the rock on the north side, which will enable boats to pass this place in safety.

The improvement at this place will be the most expensive of any other on the river, it would probably take $5000 to complete the necessary improvement.

At this place stone coal appears in large quantities, and is near the river. The coal appears to preserve a horizontal level, still rising above the river's descent; and twenty or thirty miles above this place it is on a level with the river.

Coal abounds on this stream for thirty miles above this place, in large and inexhaustible quantities, and of a superior quality. This being the highest point contemplated improving the river; was the highest place examined by us; but from our own knowledge very little will make it navigable to the highest point at which coal has been found, as there is but one place, (known as the Jumps,) which is large sand stone standing in the river, which will be easily removed.

Improving the gulf would lay open some of the finest stone coal to market; besides, the finest forests of pine and other timber in the world border this stream, with seats for the erection of mills to convert it into lumber for market. There is also a prospect of salt being made of the finest quality in the western country; besides, copperas, (the ore of which is found imbeded in the stone coal,) alum ore and sulphur, also abound, all of which would be profitable works, if the government would only appropriate the necessary funds for completing the improvement of this stream.

There are at this time near eighty thousand bushels of stone coal, raised at the mines at the mouth of the Little South Fork, all of which would have reached a market last winter and spring, but for the obstructions at the mouth of Sinking and the Sloan's Shoals. It will probably reach a market this winter. Navigation can never be safe until these two places are improved, and then only one coal mine could be reached. But clear away the gulf and a vast coal region will be made accessible to boating.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MICHAEL CASTILLO, \[Commrs.\]
JAMES MOODY.

The undersigned commissioners, appointed by the Legislature of Kentucky at their last session, to view and mark out a channel through the Smith shoal in Cumberland River, beg leave to report, that they proceeded to perform the duties assigned to them, in the month of August last.

On examining the river at these shoals, they found the river, immediately below the head of the shoals, expand to near three times its width above them, with a gradual fall (except at three places) of about three feet in a mile, flowing over a bed of limestone of a very hard texture, disposed in horizontal ledges of from six to fifteen inches in thickness. They found the shoals, on surveying them, to be three miles and nearly three furlongs in length, with a fall of near fifteen feet. At the lower end of the shoals two or three of these ledges came down to the same point, forming an abrupt fall of three and a half feet entirely across the river. At this place the improvement was commenced by graduating the fall, by removing these ledges, which was done by sledging and blasting them from a channel fifty-five yards in width on the north side, and building a dam with the rock, raised four feet high and fifteen feet wide, crossing the river in an oblique direction; which will be better understood by reference to a map of the river that accompanies this report. This dam is completed to within forty yards of the south bank. The rock is large, and laid up in a shingling manner, and is thought, will stand the highest freshet. It would probably be best to complete it to the bank, and throw the whole river into the channel. From the head of this dam, the river has a depth of at least three feet on the north side at low water, to the lower end of the second improvement. Here the river has a fall of about two feet. At this place we cleared a channel on the south side, of the same width of the one below, and built a dam, which is near one third finished, of the same kind built below. Very nearly all the boats lost on the shoals, received the first injury at this place. The bend of the river and the fall, together with a small bar at the lower end of this dam, rendered it a very difficult place to pass. The river, in running over these shoals, acquires a rough undulating motion, which is communicated to boats, and at every motion sinks them much below their draft; and unless at very high stages of the river, would strike the bottom (which is generally very rough,) and bilge. From this place we directed the loose rock and protuberances to be cleared, on the south side, (which is the side boats have to descend,) to the head of the shoals. The appropriation made at the session of the last legislature, was laid out, with the exception of $300 and upwards, including tools, (which will not be expended this winter,) in the above described work. If the dam at the bend of the river was finished, and three dams built at the points marked on the map, the descending navigation of the shoal would be very safe; at least, it could be passed in safety when the other shoals above would be safely passed. The three wing dams laid down on the map, would not be as expensive to make as the ones already begun; as they would not have to be as high, nor so long. At the upper dam laid down, there is the greatest fall in 20 poles, that is in any other part of the shoal—being three and a half feet in that distance—though there is a greater depth of water, as the river is not near so wide. Here, also, the river first gets its rough undulating motion, which it retains throughout the shoal.

The completing the improvement of these shoals will enable boats to pass down in safety from the coal mines above, with the common tides; which would be of great advantage to people of this country, as it would be the means of bringing from $30,000 to $40,000 annually to this country for coal alone, as the coal on this stream, above these shoals, is inexhaustible, and of a very superior quality, and finds a steady market at Nashville, Tenn., and below on the river, and the demand increasing.

There are also other considerations for improving this stream. Iron ore of a superior quality is said to abound, and water power for the erection of forges, furnaces, mills, &c., to work the ore into iron of every description, as well as to convert the vast forests that border this stream, into lumber; all of which would be immediately done if the government will only appropriate the necessary funds for the completion of the improvement.

The work already done, is done in a manner that it cannot be lost, as the most laborious part was the raising the rock which cannot be washed off, and can be continued from time to time, as the government appropriates the means of continuing the work.

It will probably take from $10,000 to $12,000 to complete the necessary improvement, which could continue from year to year, without any danger of losing any that was done. An effort will be made at the present session of Congress to get a western armory located at the falls of Cumberland, which furnishes the finest water power in the world, as well as every other requisite, such as iron ore, stone coal, &c.; which if done, the General Government will appropriate funds, in aid of any the Legislature may think proper to appropriate. All of which is respectfully submitted.

CYRINUS WAIT.

To the Honorable the Legislature

Of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The undersigned, appointed by the county court of Pulaski county, to superintend and manage the opening and improving the navigation of Cumberland river at Smith’s shoals, under, and in pursuance of, an act of Assembly for that purpose, approved February 2d, 1833, would respectfully report:

That they have expended in the purchase of proper tools and utensils, the hire of hands and laborers, the purchase of provisions and other necessary and incidental expenses, of the amount appropriated by said recited act, about the sum of two thousand seven hundred dollars, leaving a balance of said appropriation of about three hundred dollars yet to be expended.

They would further respectfully report that they do believe they have greatly benefitted and improved the navigation of Cumberland river at Smith’s shoals. They believe that boats and other craft can now descend said river with much greater facility than was practicable before the labor was done, and improvement made on said river, at said place. That they do believe that boats loaded can now descend said river, over said shoals, with from twenty to twenty-five inches less water than before the working and opening the shoals. That large rocks have been removed out of the said shoals, which has rendered the navigation of said shoals much safer, and greatly less hazardous. Which is respectfully reported.

SAMUEL NEWELL, Jr.
CHRISTOPHER GOGGIN.

Ordered, That the said reports be referred to the committee of internal improvements.

The Senate assembled.

Danville, January 13, 1834.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY:

The Trustees of the Asylum for the Tuition of the Deaf and Dumb, respectfully report,

That the institution is in successful operation; being furnished with well qualified teachers, and a superintendent and matron, in whom we have confidence; and the pupils enjoy good health, and are making satisfactory progress in their studies.

During the last summer, whilst the Cholera prevailed in our town, and in this region of country, this institution was for a time suspended. Among its first victims were the Rev. John R. Kerr and lady, superintendent and matron to the Asylum, much respected, and lamented as a loss to the institution, and to society. The whole of Mr. Kerr’s white family were about the same time prostrate by sickness; and the disease continuing, and spreading through the town and neighborhood, the trustees felt it a duty to send many of the pupils to their respective homes, and those who could not be sent home were removed to the country, and to places where they could be temporarily accommodated. We have heard of only one who died; but some have not returned. The board of trustees lost no time in reorganizing the institution, and appointed Doctor Luke Munsell and lady, to supply the places of Mr. Kerr and lady; and in September last it was again in complete operation.

The state of the finances of this institution you will find annexed, [marked A.] The amount of debt due us bearing interest is a little increased; but our receipts from Col. Allen, our agent in Florida, have fallen short of our expectations. We have however before us, an abstract of the sales made by him, viz: eight thousand three hundred and twenty acres, at an average of four dollars and twenty-nine and one half cents per acre, making the gross sum of thirty-five thousand seven hundred and thirty-seven dollars and sixty cents. Most of these sales were on a credit of one, two, three and four years; the amounts of course are mostly outstanding, but believed by Col. Allen to be well secured. We have the promise of remittances in this and the ensuing month.
By a reference to the annexed list of pupils, [marked B.] it will be seen that the number has decreased since our last report. Some have gone home because the time of their continuance, allowed by law, had expired; and some, as before mentioned, have not returned, probably, because of the panic which the Cholera produced through the country, and the apprehension felt by many, that that, or some other epidemic may be expected the ensuing spring or summer.

We are confident there has been no period since this institution went into operation, that it was in better condition as to government, good order, and instruction, than at present. A work shop has been prepared by Dr. Munsell, in which it is intended to give the pupils some knowledge in mechanism.

We now and then see letters from pupils, who have left the Asylum, and it gives us pleasure to see that they have not forgotten what they learned, and that they are doing well.

The utility of sending the pupils to the seat of government, for the satisfaction of the Legislature, as to the benefits of the institution, may, perhaps, in some measure, be rendered unnecessary, as there is a former pupil of the Asylum living in Frankfort, in a printing office; but if it should be the pleasure of the legislature that we send down pupils to be examined before them—or to send a committee to make a thorough examination into the condition of this institution, the trustees will feel gratified, and will promptly meet your wishes.

Respectfully submitted, by order of the Trustees.

JAMES HARLAN,

1. Mr. James presented the petition of sundry citizens of Hickman county, praying the establishment of the town of Mills' Point, in said county.

2. Mr. McDonald presented the remonstrance of sundry citizens of Washington county, against the division of said county.

3. Mr. Guthrie presented the petition of George James Trotter, representing that the stands charged in the Jefferson circuit court for shooting at George D. Prentice, with intent to kill, and that owing to the excitement and prejudice against him in said circuit, he believes he cannot have a fair trial, and praying for a change of venue.

4. Mr. McHenry presented the petition of sundry citizens, praying a further appropriation of money to improve the navigation of the Big South Fork of Cumberland river.

5. Mr. James presented the remonstrance of sundry citizens against the passage of a law to authorize a mill dam to be built across Obin creek in Hickman county.

The said petitions and remonstrances were received and referred: the first and second, to the committee of propositions and grievances; the third, to the committee of courts of justice; and the fourth and fifth, to the committee of internal improvements.
Mr. McHenry presented the following report, viz:

We the undersigned, being appointed by the Wayne county-court, pursuant to an act of the last legislature, appropriating one thousand dollars to improve the navigation of the big south fork of Cumberland river, below the coal mines, as superintendents to carry on said work, which act requires us to make a report to the next legislature a true account of our proceedings, we proceed to do so, as follows:

We have proceeded to remove the greatest obstruction in the Sloan's shoals by opening a channel one hundred and twenty feet wide through the rocks, smoothing the bottom of said channel, and lowering it about four feet from the highest points and bars. We have erected a dam about one hundred yards in length, twenty-one feet wide at the bottom, and gradually tapering to the top; seven feet and a half high at the lower end, and four at the upper end. This difference in the height of the dam from one end to the other, is owing to a fall of about four or five feet in the shoals. We also built a wall on the opposite side of the channel, from the dam at the lower end, about thirty yards in length, twenty feet wide, and six feet high, so as to confine the water between the dam and wall, and thereby raise the height of the water, so that vessels can pass these falls in safety. We have expended eight hundred and fifty dollars in doing this work, and believe the navigation to be greatly improved, and the money usefully applied. The dam was intended to throw into the channel the main body of the river, which it would do if it could be extended a proper distance, but had to be left in this situation for want of money. We believe that one thousand dollars more could be usefully laid out at this place. We regret that a work of such great utility should be left in this situation for want of money to complete it. We feel anxious that the friends of internal improvements will endeavor to procure aid from some source or other to carry on and complete this work. The dam and wall are built of rock entirely, and we believe will stand as long as time lasts, if finished, but are apprehensive that in the present situation of the dam, there might be some danger; as the current is very rapid, it may break away in part. Given under our hands, this 23d day of December, 1833.

Of those that remained in the Asylum when we had the honor to report last, seven have been discharged, and forty-six died the past year. In common with the citizens of this city, the number of deaths was much increased, under the visitation of Divine Providence in the shape of Asiatic Cholera. The number at present in the house, is sixty six; some of whom are convalescent.

The document marked B, exhibits the receipts and expenditures of the Institution for the last year, shewing a balance in the hands of the Chairman, of two thousand one hundred and fifty dollars and sixty and three-fourths cents in specie.

Your commissioners beg leave to recommend the appropriation of six thousand dollars, for the support of the Institution for the ensuing year.

All of which is respectfully submitted by your Commissioners.

Ordered, That the said bill, as amended, be read a third time.

Mr. Clark from the committee of internal improvements, made the following report, viz:

The committee of Internal Improvements and Domestic Manufactures, to whom was referred a resolution instructing them to inquire into the expediency of making an appropriation to the Sandy road, and of erecting two additional turnpike gates thereon, have had the same under consideration, and report:

That the road referred to in the resolution, is what is denominated a state road, and that it was originally opened under the requisitions of an act of the Legislature more than twenty years since. That by an act approved January 29, 1830, the Governor was authorised to employ a suitable engineer to survey the said road from the mouth of Big Sandy river, by the way of Little Sandy salt works, or its vicinity, Owing-ville, Mountsterling, Winchester, and to Lexington; with directions to report the best route, to the next General Assembly. That the next session of the Legislature passed an act making an appropriation to aid in the improvement of this road, and authorising a turnpike gate to be placed on it.—To raise the necessary funds for the completion of this work, books of subscription for the contribution of money or labor were opened, and it was agreed on the part of the state, that so soon as three thousand dollars should be subscribed and paid by individuals, there should be paid out of the public treasury, one thousand dollars to aid in the work.

The voluntary contributions required by this act were obtained, and the commissioners, with that sum and the thousand dollars paid by the state, have caused great and important repairs to be made. That by the act making this appropriation the money was expended in improving the road between the mouth of Big Sandy, in Greenup county, and John M. Rice's, in Bath county, a distance of about eighty miles.

But few roads, if any, in the state of Kentucky, are of equal importance with this, and none afford the same facilities in traveling from the northern part of the state, to the cities of Washington, Baltimore and Richmond.

The state of Virginia has constructed, with great labor and expense, a road from the town of Staunton, across the mountains to the mouth of Big Sandy river; by the way of the Warm, the Hot, and the White Sulphur Springs, the Kenhawa salt works and Charleston, the highest elevation of which does not exceed five degrees, and on which daily stages run the whole year.

The Sandy road to which an appropriation is asked, unites with this road at the mouth of Big Sandy, thereby giving a continuous road from our seat of government to the large cities before mentioned; and that in traveling to either of them, the distance of from eighty to one hundred miles will be saved.

The committee would further state that nature has done much for this road. The country through which this road now passes, from Rice's to the mouth of Big Sandy, is based upon a gravel foundation, and admirably adapted to the construction of an artificial raised road. That when the earth is moderately raised above the common level, the water soon sinks, and thereby leaves the road in fine condition for travelling. That there are but few inhabitants in the vicinity of the road, and they generally poor and entirely destitute of the resources needful for keeping the road in its present state of improvement.

The committee would further state that this road passes by the Little Sandy salt works, and through the immediate neighborhood of sixteen manufactories of iron, now in successful operation, in Greenup county; that these manufactories furnish a considerable market for the surplus products of the farmers of Fayette, Clarke, Bourbon, Montgomery, Bath, and Fleming counties, the transportation of which is in wagons; that it is on this road that the live stock, north of the Kentucky river, is taken by our enterprising traders, to the Virginia and Maryland markets; amounting to not less than three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, annually.

The committee would remark that, although great improvements have been made on this road, under the act of 1831, much is yet to be done to render travelling in carriages, and transportation of produce in wagons safe and expeditious. The location of the road has not been on the best site in many places. The hills, of which there are but few that present any considerable elevation, can be avoided by winding the road on the sides of them. It is the opinion of the committee, that an appropriation ought to be made sufficient to put the road in repair; and that the tolls arising from two more gates will be sufficient not only to keep it in good condition, but it will give a surplus to the gradual extension of the road into the interior of Bath and Montgomery counties: a bill is therefore reported.

The said bill to amend an act making an appropriation to aid in the repair of the Sandy road, and to authorize a turnpike gate thereon, approved January 15, 1831, was read the first time and ordered to be read a second time.

The Speaker laid before the Senate, the annual report of the Board of Internal Improvements for Shelby county, which is as follows, viz:

To the Honorable the Legislature of Kentucky.

The Board of Internal Improvements for Shelby county, when their last annual report was made to your Honorable body, had under contract five miles and 174 rods of turnpike road, commencing at Shelbyville and extending eastwardly, which was opened for public use on the 17th day of January last. The whole cost of constructing this part of the road, including bridges, culverts and contingent expenses, amounted to the sum of $25,690 16 cents. Of this sum $1693 was paid for building a permanent covered bridge across Gift's creek, one hundred and fourteen feet in length; and $1751 05 cents, for the building of a similar bridge of the same length, across Clear creek at the east end of Shelbyville; making together the sum of $3,411 08, for building permanent bridges. For grading, turnpiking, &c. including three small bridges and four culverts, which contained six hundred and one perch of masonry, they paid $22,245 08 cents, making an average cost of $4 54 cents per road, or $401 280 cents per mile.

The distance, from the termination of the above five miles and 174 roads, to the Franklin county line, at Hardinsville, is about seven miles, all of which they put under contract early last spring; but the prevalence of the cholera and other causes, prevented the completion of it by the time the contractors had engaged to finish it. Three miles of these seven are now open and used by the public; and the work on the whole line is in such a state of forwardness, that the Board confidently anticipate the completion of the road to Hardinsville by the middle of June or the first of July next.—

Their superintendent estimates the cost of constructing this part of the road at not more than $4300 per mile, including bridges, culverts and contingent expenses.

At the two gates west of Shelbyville, in the last year, which commenced on the 22d of November, 1833, and ended on the 21st of November, 1833, there was received and due from persons who pay quarterly, tolls amounting to $3,522 161 05 cents. Out of this sum they paid to two gate keepers, for their services one year, $309, and for keeping ten miles of road in repair the same length of time, $751 65 cents, making in all $1060 65 cents for keeping the gates and repairing the road; which leaves a nett profit of $2,161 514 cents; being within a very small fraction of six per cent on the capital expended in the construction of that part of the road.

The gate east of Shelbyville was erected on the 17th of January last, and on the 21st of November had been up ten months and three days. At that gate, the tolls collected and due up to that time, from persons who pay quarterly, amounted to $1317 72 cents. Out of that sum they paid to the gate keeper and for keeping five miles and a half of road in repair ten months, and also an additional quantity of about three fourths of a mile from some time in September until the 21st of November, $435 82 cents, leaving a nett profit of $321 90 cents. The whole amount of profits for the year ending 21st November 1833, is $3283 414 cents, of which the state is entitled to one half, or $1641 701 cents, being the owner of one half of the stock in the road.

By an act of the Legislature, approved December 23, 1831, the Board were authorised to apply the dividends on the stock of the state, in the Shelby turnpike, for the next two years commencing on the first of January, 1832, to the extension of the road, and re-required to enter an order on their books, increasing the number of shares belonging to the state, one share for each hundred dollars so applied; and they were also required to certify the same to the Auditor of public accounts, and to declare and pay dividends to the state, on the same, as on other stock. The dividends on the stock of the state have been applied as directed by said act.

All of which is respectfully reported.

The Speaker laid before the Senate, the following communication from the President of the Bank of the Commonwealth, viz:

Bank of the Commonwealth,
January 28, 1834.

Sir:—In obedience to a resolution of the Senate of the 25th instant, I have the honor to communicate the enclosed statement, shewing the number of Agents employed by the Bank; the compensation allowed to them respectively; and the amount collected and paid over by each Agent within the last year; the number of Directors receiving pay for their services, and the amount received by them; the sum paid to the officers of the Bank; the number of Clerks, and their compensation. Also, the amount paid to Attorneys at law for one year past; with their names.

The largest of these are of several years standing, and with few exceptions, in contested cases, are such fees as the law allows for bringing suits, and will, in most cases, be reimbursed to the Bank.

The services performed by the Board of Directors, are such as a general supervision and control of all the business of the Bank.
Under the provisions of the act for the withdrawal of the branches, approved 29th January, 1830, twelve agents were appointed, whose compensation amounted to the sum of $3000, and so continued until the 1st day of December, 1832, when their number was reduced to seven, and their pay to $1,900.

The design of the Legislature in the appointment of Agents, seems to have been two-fold. In the first place, the security of the debts and their ultimate collection were considerations paramount to all others; and secondly, facilities were to be afforded to the debtors by which they might be enabled to renew and pay off their notes with the least possible inconvenience to themselves. This is the policy that has been pursued by the Bank, and in curtailing the expenses, I would respectfully recommend that it be done in the amount of compensation, rather than in the number of Agents employed.

The debts due the Bank are now more than four thousand in number, and the greater portion of them will have to be collected by the process of law. Their history is better known to those familiar with them, than it can be in the very nature of things, by an examination of the books.

Most of the large debts are now in suit; they have, therefore, and will still continue to require the unintering attention of one or more of the officers of the Bank. The costs and expenses incident to their collection have been paid, which will be refunded to the Bank, and which, if added to the arrearages of interest due, would make the profits much greater than they appear in the last report.

I feel authorised in saying that the officers and Agents of the Bank are duly sensible of the high obligations they are under to the Legislature, and that they will cheerfully unite in carrying into effect such measures as may be deemed best for winding up the affairs of the Bank, in the most speedy and economical manner.

Very respectfully, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

H. WINGATE, President.

Hon. James T. Morehead.

The Senate assembled.

The Speaker laid before the Senate the annual report of the Trustees of the Cumberland Hospital, which is as follows, viz:

REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES OF CUMBERLAND HOSPITAL.

To the Honorable—the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The Trustees of this institution again submit to your consideration, the situation of the business since their last report of 24th November, 1832. It will be seen from the annexed statement, as well as former report, that, at that time, we had on hand the sum of fifty dollars twenty-seven cents, and were indebted to Mr. Barnes, the keeper, the sum of two hundred and eighty-nine dollars. The Legislature, at their last session, made an appropriation of fifteen hundred dollars, for the further support of the hospital, which, after paying the balance due to the keeper above mentioned, has, with the small balance on hand, paid the current expenses of the institution to this period, and leaves a balance now on hand, of three hundred and thirty-eight dollars and forty-seven cents, as per statement annexed. The number of persons admitted into the hospital since our last report, is seventy-six, a large increase over that of any former year.

We have, through our representative in Congress, made an arrangement with the General Government, by which we are entitled to pay at the rate of three dollars and fifty cents per week, for all those who may enter the hospital, that have been subject to pay hospital money in the different ports in the United States. This will assist considerably in defraying the expenses of the institution in future. It is necessary for the convenience and comfort of the sick, that a small addition should be made separate from the present building, for the use of the keeper as a family house. Under the present arrangement, the lower part of the building is occupied by the keeper, and the patients placed in the upper rooms of the house. This is attended with much inconvenience and trouble. Many patients who might be able to go out of the house at times, are prevented by the circumstance of being placed up stairs:—which would fatigue them too much in getting down and up again. In addition to the inconvenience experienced by the sick, the house is too small to accommodate the family of the keeper and have a sufficiency of room for the patients. A house of sufficient size for the family of the keeper, could be built for about five hundred dollars. We must therefore ask of your honorable body, a further appropriation for the support of the institution the present year, embodying therewith an amount sufficient to make the above named addition. We are of opinion that the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars will be sufficient to pay the present year's expenses and make the necessary improvement. We annex a statement of expenses, viz:

Smithland, Ky. Jan. 16, 1834. DAVID J. BROWN.

Ordered, That the said report be referred to the committee of finance.

The Speaker laid before the Senate the following letter and report of the Secretary of the Board of Managers of the Louisville Hospital, viz:

JAMES GUTHRIE, Esq.:

I beg you will do us the favor to lay our short report before the Legislature of the state of Kentucky.

Patients admitted to the Hospital since December 1832, 237

Sums expended for their support, $4696.54—all derived from the 2 per cent fund arising from auction duties, save $500 allowed by the general government.

Since September last, the doors of the Hospital have been closed to the humane and benevolent purposes for which it was established for the want of means. The sales at auction, from whence the duty is derived, have been so limited that no dependence can be placed upon it as a permanent fund.

It is now left to the wisdom of the representatives of the state to say whether any thing can be done to save so many valuable lives from destruction, as seek and find relief from this institution.

Secretary of the Board of Managers of the Louisville Hospital.

Your committee deem it an act of justice to say, that they found the office, its furniture, books and papers, in excellent order, and that their examination was greatly facilitated, both by the prompt answers of the Register and his clerks, to all the questions propounded to them, and the fact that all the books and papers were in their proper places.

Your committee are satisfied that the labors of the office have been greatly increased since the reduction of the price of warrants; and particularly since the practice has been adopted of dividing large appropriations of land into numerous small warrants and certificates of survey, upon which the state price has been remitted, and no fees are chargeable.

It has heretofore been reported to the Legislature, that the Register expended eight hundred dollars of his salary annually, for clerks' hire, on account of the increased duties of his station.—Your committee are informed that this is the fact, and incline to the opinion that it would be but an act of justice to that officer, that in all cases in which appropriations of land are made, on which the state price and fees are remitted, that some allowance be made to the Register for his increased labor. But as this would be uncertain in its amount, and something complex, your committee would recommend a definite compensation for the increased labors.
of the office, to enable the Register to perform his duties to the public without violation of his obligations to himself and his family; and therefore propose the following resolution.

Resolved, That five hundred dollars be added to the present salary of the Register, to enable him the better to perform the requisitions of his office and pay clerk hire.

APPENDIX

ACCOMPANYING THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Report of the joint committee of the Senate and Assembly of the state of New-York, on so much of the Governor's Message as relates to the communication from the Governor of the state of South Carolina, and the proceedings of the Convention of the People of that state.

[Made to the Legislature, January 29, 1833.]

The right claimed by the State of South Carolina, to make void the laws of the United States within her territory, is so fully set forth in the Ordinance and Documents before the Legislature, and so well understood, that a precise statement, in this report, of its nature and extent, would be superfluous.

The committee have considered the claim, thus set up, with the attention due to the high respectability of the source from which it emanated, and to the very grave consequences that would unavoidably result from its establishment; and they concur with the Governor in regarding it as a pretension, "not merely unauthorised by the Constitution of the United States, but fatally repugnant to all the objects for which it was framed."

The unfounded nature of the authority asserted by South Carolina, has been so clearly demonstrated in the Proclamation of the President of the United States, which has been published by order of the Legislature, and now on its files; and is so fully confirmed by the concurring opinions of the people of every other State in the Union; that it cannot be necessary that the committee should attempt to shed any additional light upon a subject, in respect to which the argument may, with so much truth, be said to be exhausted.
The duty of the President to exercise the authority vested in him by the Constitution and laws of the United States; to enforce the latter in the State of South Carolina, notwithstanding the unjustifiable attempt on the part of that State to arrest the due execution thereof, is obvious and imperative. And the committee are well satisfied that they represent truly the opinions of the Government and People of the State of New-York, when they reciprocate the assurance given by the Governor, that in the performance of that great and responsible duty, by the exercise of necessary and proper means, the President may count on their support and co-operation.

With this brief statement of the principal matter referred to them, the committee would prefer to leave the subject. Considered only with reference to the present aspect of the affair, it might not be strictly necessary to say more; and they deprecate too sincerely the asperities which usually grow out of diversities of opinion upon doctrinal points, not to be anxious to avoid them as far as it can properly be done. The more especially are they impressed with the propriety of such a course, in reference to the present posture of our public affairs, when the hearts and minds of our citizens should be exclusively directed to the measures best calculated to preserve the happy union of these States in the spirit of affection and brotherly love in which it was established. The committee, however, are too well advised of the desire of the Legislature that their opinion should be distinctly expressed upon some points of deep interest, growing out of the assumptions of right contained in the Ordinance of South Carolina, and the commentary of the President thereon in his recent Proclamation and Message, to feel themselves at liberty to exercise a discretion upon the subject.

In the performance of the duty assigned them, they will submit the dictates of their best judgment, in that spirit of liberality and forbearance which, under any circumstances, it would give them pleasure to cherish, but which, under those that now exist, they consider it a sacred duty to observe.

They believe that this duty cannot be better discharged than by a frank and explicit avowal of the principles which, in their opinion, ought to be applied to the construction of the Constitution of the United States, and to control in that respect the administration of the government established by it. They regard it the more important to do so, from the attempts which have been made to bring into discredit political principles which the people of this State have so long and so ardently cherished; and upon the maintenance of which, in all their purity, the committee firmly believe the safety of our institutions, and the future welfare of the country, mainly depend. The re-assertion of those principles at a period like the present, when there is reason to fear that they may suffer from misapprehension or misrepresentation, is, in the opinion of the committee, a matter of a paramount obligation.

There is no reasonable ground to doubt, that the great body of the American people are fervently attached to the union of the States, and sincerely desirous that the partition and limitations of power intended to be established by the Federal Constitution, and the republican principle on which it rests, should be preserved inviolate. They have, however, greatly differed as to the most effectual and least exceptionable means, of effecting those objects; and as to the true source of the dangers to which our political system was exposed.

These differences arose in the Convention which framed the Constitution; attended every step of its formation and establishment, and have never ceased to exist. Consolidation on the one hand, tending to monarchy in the head, and on the other, anarchy, consequent upon the insubordination and resistance of the members, were the evils anticipated at its formation, and have ever since been dreaded by the respective parties.

A portion of the people believed, that unless great vigor was imparted to the Federal arm, it would not be able to sustain itself against the power and influence of the States, and effect the great objects which all desired to accomplish, through the agency of the Federal Government. Others supposed, that the natural tendency of the new system would be towards consolidation; and that unless the powers delegated to the government, thus created, were granted with a sparing hand, scrupulously and vigilantly guarded, and the remaining powers and sovereignty of the States amply protected, there would be reason to apprehend that the revolution of 1776 would be shorn of its honors and its benefits; and the consequence ultimately would be, a return to that form of government which had been thrown off at so much cost. No candid and intelligent observer can have failed to witness the enduring effects of these early differences, nor be ignorant of the unceasing influence they have exercised on public affairs. On every recurrence to the conflicting principles by which they were generated, we have seen on the one side, a strong inclination to yield, readily, to that construction, and to that course of measures, which might best serve to strengthen the Federal Government, and extend the sphere of its action; a disposition which at all times, but with various success, has been resisted by those, who entertain different views, as to the best means of securing the efficacy and harmony, and of preserving the equilibrium, and constant stability, of the entire system. It is not the intention of the committee to enter into a particular consideration of the reasons, by which these conflicting opinions are respectively sustained; nor to advert to them, farther than is necessary to the distinct and intelligible explanation of their own views, upon the subject referred to them.
The committee are advocates for the reserved rights of the States, and a strict construction of the Constitution of the United States. Experience has, they think, fully demonstrated the wisdom of the determination of the Convention to commit to the Federal Government, the management of such concerns only, as appertain to the relations of the States with each other, and with foreign nations, and certain other matters particularly enumerated in the Constitution: leaving the great mass of the business of the people, relating as it does mainly, to their domestic concerns, to the legislation of the States. They were wisely regarded as the safest depositories of the latter powers. This course was moreover due to the reserved sovereignty of the States, and required by an enlightened estimate of the dangers to the harmony of National Legislation, inseparable from the great diversity in the interests and conditions of the different States. A sincere adherence to this partition of legislation amongst the respective governments, and an honest and inflexible observance of the specifications and restrictions by which it was defined, in the sense designed by the Convention, and as understood by the people in the adoption of the Constitution, are in the best judgment of the committee, indispensably necessary to its preservation.

Time, and the course of events, have solved the great problem that divided the Convention. It is now apparent that the tendency of the system is to encroachments by the Federal Government upon the reserved rights of the States, rather than to an unwillingness on the part of the States to submit to a full exercise of the powers which were intended to be delegated to the General Government. So manifest has this tendency been rendered to the people of the U. States, that at several interesting eras in our history, they have been induced by the excesses to which it led, to rise in their strength and drive from power, the agents employed in giving it effect. Such was their course in the memorable civil revolution of 1800: and the same sovereign remedy, upon the same impulse, and, it is hoped, with similar effect, was applied by the people in 1828. Whilst these scenes have passed before our eyes, and stand forth upon the page of our history, for our edification and security, not an instance has occurred in which the resistance of a single State, to the measures of the Federal Government, has excited sufficient sympathy or countenance from her sister States, to afford cause for a well-grounded apprehension of detriment to the Union, by improper combination amongst its members. Even at this critical emergency in our public affairs, when so much discredit is apprehended to the sacred cause of State rights from the excesses of South Carolina, the confidence of the committee in the correctness of that cause is strengthened by the exemplary conduct of her sister States. When we witness the fervent zeal that pervades them all, and see so many who have the same cause of complaint as South Carolina, and who are equally solicitous for a redress of their grievances, rising superior to local interests, exhibiting to the world the most sublime spectacle of devoted patriotism, and throwing their great moral and physical weight into the scale of the Union, who can doubt that now, as in the late war, the federal arm, in the hour of its greatest peril, will be upheld by the State authorities? The committee are cheered by this animating indication of fidelity, not merely because they see in it the unequivocal evidence of the safety of that Union which they so highly cherish, but on account of the favourable influence which the complete establishment of the principles to which they have avowed their attachment, is calculated to exercise on the future administration of this government. In "the support of the State governments in all their rights as the most competent administrators of our domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies: and the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet-anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad," the committee recognise the highest duties of every public functionary; and in the encouragement derived from the approving voice of a virtuous and grateful people, the best security for their faithful performance.

Of the deeply interesting questions arising upon the Ordinance and other documents referred to the committee, there is none of more immediate importance, than the claim which is advanced, that a single State has a right to withdraw herself, against the wishes of her co-States, from the Union, whenever, in her sole judgment, the acts of Federal Government shall be such as to justify the step. The committee cannot approve this doctrine. Anxious as they are to sustain the sovereignty of the States in its full force, they do not feel it to be less their duty to "preserve," in the language of Mr. Jefferson, "the General Government, in its whole constitutional vigor." There is no conflict of duty between these sentiments; so far from it, that, in the opinion of the committee, no man can be a good citizen, who is disloyal to either. No apprehension too alarming, can be entertained as to the injurious consequences which may result from the principle attempted to be established. The committee have witnessed with deep regret, that an impression has gone abroad, that the assertion of this right was embraced in the proceedings of the Legislatures of Virginia and Kentucky, in 1798 and 1799. Whatever authority there may be for the right of secession, it certainly cannot, in the opinion of the committee, claim any from these proceedings. They took place at a very dark and portentous period in our history; when the encroachments of the Federal Government, and the general temper of the times had filled the hearts of many of our firmest patriots with alarm.
The respect of the people of this State, for those emanations of lofty and devoted patriotism, is at this day as great, and their devotion to principles they inculcated, as sincere as it was in 1800. And the committee cannot, as they conceive, render a more acceptable service to the Republic, than by separating them from a doctrine which, however sincerely it may be entertained by others, is rejected by our citizens, with a degree of unanimity, heretofore unknown to political controversy. A very brief exposition of the nature and history of those proceedings, is all that is essential for that purpose. The portions of the Virginia Resolutions, upon the alien and sedition laws, (and there is not, in this respect, sufficient difference between them and those of Kentucky, to make the separate examination of each necessary) from which a deduction is attempted to be made, are the following words:

"That this Assembly doth explicitly and peremptorily declare, that it views the powers of the Federal Government, as resulting from the compact, to which the States are parties, as limited by the plain sense and intention of the Instrument constituting that Compact; as no farther valid than they are authorised by the grants enumerated in that Compact; and that, in case a deliberate, palpable and dangerous exercise of other powers, not granted by the said Compact, the States who are parties thereto, have a right, and are in duty bound, to interpose, for arresting the progress of the evil, and for maintaining within their respective limits, the authorities, rights and liberties appertaining to them."

"That the good people of this Commonwealth, having ever felt, and continuing to feel, the most sincere affection for their brethren of other States; the truest anxiety for establishing and perpetuating the union of all; and the most scrupulous fidelity to that Constitution which is the pledge of mutual friendship, and the instrument of mutual happiness; the General Assembly doth solemnly appeal to the like dispositions in the other States, in confidence that they will concur with this Commonwealth in declaring, as it does hereby declare, that the acts aforesaid are unconstitutional; and, that the necessary and proper measures will be taken by each, for co-operating with this State in maintaining unimpaired, the authorities, rights, and liberties reserved in the States respectively, or to the people."

These resolutions were met by several of the State Legislatures to whom they had been communicated, by counter resolutions, protesting against them with much warmth, chiefly on the ground that the act of a State Legislature, declaring a law of the United States unconstitutional was, in itself, an unconstitutional assumption of authority, and an unwarrantable interference with the exclusive jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States: accompanied, in some instances, with severe denunciations against their disorganizing tendency.
The resolutions of the protesting States were, at a succeeding session of the Virginia Legislature, referred to and reported upon, at large, by a committee of that body. Their report was written by Mr. Madison, and led to a re-affirmance, by Virginia, of the unconstitutionality of the alien and sedition laws, and a re-assertion of the doctrines of the original resolutions. This masterly exposition of the true principles of the Constitution, and of the abuses which had been practised under it, contributed more than any event, to that radical change in the public sentiment of the country, which was consumated by the election of Mr. Jefferson, and has, from that day to the present, been justly regarded as the genuine text book of political orthodoxy. The committee do, unhesitatingly, and with great satisfaction, embrace this occasion to avow their decided approbation of its doctrines; and they feel, that they would be wanting in gratitude and duty, if they were not to express their conviction of the benefits which have been derived from their influence: of the extent to which, in their opinion, the future operations of our political institutions are dependent upon the continued respect and confidence of the people in them: as well as their unfeigned admiration of the unsurpassed disinterestedness and inflexible fidelity, with which those doctrines have, through evil, and through good report, been sustained by that truly patriotic member of the confederacy.

That the judicial department of the Federal Government, was the exclusive expositor of the Constitution, in cases submitted to its judgment, in the last resort, was freely admitted. But, it was contended by that committee,—“First, that there may be instances of usurped power, which the forms of the Constitution would never draw within the control of the judicial department: Secondly, that if the decision of the judiciary be raised above the authorities of the sovereign parties to the Constitution, the decisions of the other departments not carried by the forms of the Constitution before the judiciary, must be equally authoritative and final with the decisions of that department. That the resolutions of the General Assembly related to those great and extraordinary cases in which all the forms of the Constitution may prove ineffectual against infractions dangerous to the essential rights of the parties to it. That the resort to the judiciary must necessarily be deemed the last, in relation to the authorities of the other departments of the Government: not in relation to the rights of the parties to the constitutional compact, from which the judicial as well as the other departments hold their delegated trusts. On any other hypothesis, the delegation of judicial power would annul the authority of the power delegating it; and the concurrence of this department with others in usurped powers, might subvert forever, and beyond the possible reach of any rightful remedy, the very Constitution which all were instituted to preserve.” That “a declaration that proceedings of the Federal Government are not warranted by the Constitution, was a novelty neither among the citizens nor the Legislatures of the states"—"nor could the declarations of either, whether affirming or denying the constitutionality of the measures of the Federal Government; or whether made before or after judicial decisions thereon, be deemed in any point of view an assumption of the office of a judge. The declarations in such cases are expressions of opinion, unaccompanied with other effect than what they may produce on opinion by exciting reflection. The expositions of the judiciary, on the other hand, are carried into immediate effect by force. The former may lead to a change in the legislative expression of the general will: possibly to a change in the opinion of the judiciary." Hence it was urged that there was no impropriety in the declaration by the Legislature that the alien and sedition laws were unconstitutional; nor was there any valid objection to the communication of that resolution to her sister States; nor in the invitation which was given to them to concur therein; nor in asking for the adoption of "necessary and proper measures by each, for co-operating with her in maintaining unimpaired the authorities, rights, and liberties reserved in the States respectively, or to the people."

But what were those measures which the Legislature of Virginia deemed "necessary and proper" to meet the exigency in the affairs of the country so truly alarming as that which then existed, and to which their proceedings had reference? Was it to oppose, by State authority, the regular administration of justice in any case in law or equity committed by the Constitution to the Federal Judiciary? Did they relate to resistance by a member of the confederacy, to the execution of the laws of the United States, passed in conformity to the provisions of the Constitution; or embrace the revocation by a State of the powers which had, with so much solemnity, and under such high penalties, been granted by the people of the respective States to the Federal Government? Far, very far from it. Anticipations of this character were entertained when those resolutions were under discussion in the Virginia Legislature, and they were consequently denounced as the harbinger of civil commotion. These denunciations were met and refuted by the advocates of the resolutions, not only after they had been submitted to the other States, but when they were first submitted to the Legislature of that State. They were introduced by John Taylor, of Caroline.

In reply to these predictions he said, "Suppose a clashing of opinion should exist between Congress and the States, respecting the true limits of the constitutional territories, it was easy to see that if the right of decision had been vested in either party, that party deciding in the spirit and interest of party, would inevitably have swallowed up the other. The Constitution must not only have foreseen the possibility of such a clashing, but also the consequence of a preference on either side as to its construction; and out of this foresight must have arisen the fifth article, by which two-thirds of Congress may call upon the States for an explanation of any such controversy as the present, by way of amendment to the Constitution, and thus correct an erroneous construction of its own acts, by a minority of the States; whilst two-thirds of the States are also allowed to compel Congress to call a convention in case so many should think an amendment necessary, for the purpose of checking the unconstitutional acts of that body. Thus, so far as Congress may have power, it might exert it to check the usurpations of a State, and so far as the States may possess it, an union of two-thirds in one opinion might effectually check the usurpations of Congress. And under this article of the Constitution, the incontrovertible principle before stated might become practically useful, otherwise no remedy did exist for the only case which could possibly destroy the Constitution, namely, an encroachment by Congress or the States upon the rights of the other. * * * * Mr. Taylor then proceeded to apply these observations to the threats of war, and the apprehension of civil commotion, towards which the resolutions were said to have a tendency. Are the republicans said he, possessed of fleets and armies? If not, to what could they appeal for defence and support? To nothing except public opinion. If that should be against them, they must yield. * * * * How could the fifth article of the Constitution be brought into practical use, even upon the most flagrant usurpations? War or insurrection therefore, could not happen," &c. * * * * "Such, however, he hoped would be the respect to public opinion, that he doubted not but that the two reprobated laws would be sacrificed, to quiet the apprehensions even of a single State, without the necessity of a convention or a mandate from three-fourths of the States, whenever it shall be admitted that the quiet and happiness of the people is the end and design of government.

Similar sentiments were advanced by the other supporters of the resolutions. Mr. Mercer said "that force was never thought of by any one. The preservation of the Federal Constitution, the cement of the Union, with its original powers, was the object of the resolutions."

But all pretence for misapprehension or misconstruction upon this head is put at rest by the direct explanations of the Virginia Legislature, in the report which was made and received their sanction in the session of 1799; in which, in relation to the means referred to in the resolutions, and in answer to the objection that they might have been such as conflicted with the order and stability of the Union, they say, "In the example given by the State of declaring the alien and sedition acts to be unconstitutional, and of communicating the declaration of the other States, no trace of improper means has appeared. And if the other States had concurred in making a like declaration, supported too by the numerous applications flowing immediately from the people, it can scarcely be doubted, that these simple means would have been as sufficient as they are unexceptionable.

"It is no less certain that other means might have been employed which are strictly within the limits of the Constitution. The Legislatures of the States might have made a direct representation to Congress, with a view to obtain a rescinding of the two offensive acts; or they might have represented to their respective Senators in Congress their wish that two-thirds thereof would propose an explanatory amendment to the Constitution; or two-thirds of themselves, if such had been their option, might, by an application to Congress, have obtained a convention for the same object.

"These several means, though not equally eligible in themselves, nor probably to the States, were all constitutionally open for consideration. And if the General Assembly, after declaring the two acts to be unconstitutional, the first and most obvious proceeding on the subject, did not undertake to point out to the other States a choice among the farther measures that might become necessary and proper, the reserve will not be misconstrued by liberal minds into any culpable imputation."

Such was the understanding of the import and the intent of the resolutions by him who introduced them; by those who supported them; by the committee to which they were at a subsequent session referred; and by the Legislature which adopted their exposition.

It is a matter of undoubted historical fact, that the Virginia resolutions were drawn up by Mr. Madison, and those of Kentucky by Mr. Jefferson.

In the dispensation of an all-wise Providence, Mr. Madison's useful and brilliant life has been prolonged to this late period of existence. He has borne his testimony against the justice of any of the inferences which the committee have felt it their duty to repel; and they are unadvised of any act or declaration of Mr. Jefferson, who, in the confidence and affections of his fellow-citizens, was only second to the Father of his Country, which conflicts with the known views of his great coadjutor. The committee are well aware that the advocates of nullification have attempted to sustain that doctrine by expressions contained in an unpromulgated draft of the Kentucky resolutions found among his papers, in which is set forth the right of a State to nullify an act of Congress, passed in respect to a subject upon which its action is expressly inhibited, or upon which it had no authority to legislate at all. A suggestion which, if it were possible to make a paper so circumstanced whenever it may be found, the basis of so solemn an act, is clearly inapapplicable to the case under consideration, inasmuch as it expressly declares, that for "an abuse of delegated power, (the most that could by possibility be made of the revenue laws) "the members of the General Government being chosen by the people, a change by the people would be the Constitutional remedy." But the published writings of that great man are replete with the evidences of his avowed opinions, inconsistent with the supposition that he believed in the right of a single State either to make constitutional resistance to the laws of the United States or to dissolve the Union by withdrawing herself from it, when in her sole judgment, the circumstances were sufficient to justify the act.

In a letter to Mr. Destutt Tracy, in January, 1811, he says, "Dangers of another kind might more reasonably be apprehended from this perfect and distinct organization, civil and military, of the States, to wit: that certain States from local and occasional discontent, might attempt to secede from the Union. This is certainly possible; and would be befriended by this regular organization. But it is not probable that local discontents can spread to such an extent as to be able to face the sound parts of so extensive a Union—and if ever they should reach the majority, they would then become the regular government, acquire ascendency in Congress, and be able to redress their own grievances by laws peaceably and constitutionally passed.

In a letter to Elbridge Gerry, of January, 1812, he uses these significant and emphatic expressions:—"What, then, does this English faction with you mean? Their newspapers say rebellion, and that they will not remain united with us, unless we will permit them to govern the majority. If this be their purpose, their anti-republican spirit, it ought to be met at once. But a government like ours should be slow in believing this, should put forth its whole might when necessary to suppress it, and promptly return to the paths of reconciliation. The extent of our country secures it, I hope, from the vindictive passions of the petty incorporations of Greece. I rather suspect that the principal office of the other seventeen States, will be to moderate and restrain the local excitement of our friends with you, when they (with the aid of their brethren of the other States, if they need it,) shall have brought the rebellious to their feet."

In a letter to Major John Carwright, as late as June, 1824, he says, "But you may ask, if the two departments, (meaning the General and State Governments,) should claim each the same subject of power, where is the common umpire to decide ultimately between them? In cases of little importance or urgency, the prudence of both parties will keep them aloof from the questionable ground; but if it can neither be avoided nor compromised, a convention of the States must be called, to ascribe the doubtful powers to that department which they may think best. You will perceive by these details, that we have not yet so far perfected our Constitutions as to venture to make them unchangeable. But still, in their present state, we consider them not otherwise changeable than by the authority of the people, on a special election of representatives for that purpose expressly: They are until then the lex {

The committee have felt it their duty to say thus much, in order to separate the doctrines of 1798, from the principle now in question. So far, at least, as they are contained in and depend on documents which deserve to be held in respectful remembrance whilst the Constitution endures.

Neither do the committee concur in the opinion that the right of secession necessarily results from the sovereignty of the States. It appears to the committee, and they express their views with unfeigned deference to the highly respectable opinions of those who differ with them, that this impression arises from erroneously regarding the sovereignty of the respective States as unqualified, and the association a mere confederacy of free and sovereign States. — If such were the case, if the union were a mere league, the result contended for might follow; but the committee do not so understand the system. The States, on the contrary, as it was competent for the people of each, acting in their highest sovereign character, have voluntarily established, by express grant, a sovereignty in some respects concurrent with, and in other respects superior to their own. This authority thus established, though founded on a compact, is nevertheless a government which is made by that compact, sovereign and independent as to the powers granted to it, in the same manner as the States are sovereign and independent as to powers not granted. The people of the respective States have stipulated that their legislatures, and all their executive and judicial officers, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support the Constitution of that government. For a breach of their allegiance to it, they have voluntarily subjected themselves to the highest penalties known to human laws; and to maintain its sovereignty, they have invested this government of their own creation with the purse and sword of the nation. The faithful performance of this contract is certainly matter of high obligation to all the parties to it; and no condemnation by the people can be too severe upon such as are so lost to the obligation under which they rest to each other, to the people, and to the cause of free government throughout the world, as to be guilty of its intentional violation. But, of the fact and consequences of such a breach, in cases where no other umpire has been designated, it is the right of each party to judge for itself; not for the Federal Government exclusively, as was contended by the States which protested against the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions in 1799; nor for each State solely, as is now contended. No right is reserved to the people of any State to absolve themselves from the performance of duties which they have so solemnly assumed, without the consent of the other party or parties to the compact. Each State, on surrendering a portion of its sovereignty, acquired, in consequence thereof, a right to the perpetual adherence of each of its co-States to that Union which is so necessary to, and was established for the security of all.

The Articles of Confederation abound with declarations that the Union then formed should be perpetual; and the present Constitution was established for the avowed purpose of making it more perfect. New-York entered into the formation of it expressly “to render the Federal Constitution adequate to the exigencies of the Government, and the preservation of the Union.” Deficient, indeed would have been the work which came from the hands of those great men who framed the Constitution, the final adoption of which was hailed with so much joy by the people, if it thus contained the elements of its own destruction.

When a State shall attempt to withdraw herself from the Confederacy, it is for her co-States to decide whether they will relinquish the rights which they acquired when they surrendered a portion of their sovereignty—consent to a dissolution, and endevor to establish a new government; or whether they will insist on the preservation of the Union as it is. Without the recognition of this right, the Union could not have existed to the present day.—
Strip the States of this right, and a system which but yesterday excited the respect and admiration of the world, must soon, very soon, serve only as an additional argument in the mouths of monarchists and absolutists against the capacity of man for self-government.

Let it not, however, be supposed that the committee are the advocates of unconditional submission. Such are not their views.—
They concur fully in the sentiment, “that the authority of Constitutions over governments, and of the sovereignty of the people over Constitutions, are truths which are at all times necessary to be kept in mind.” Or, in the language of our own State, “that the powers of government may be re-assumed by the people, whenever shall become necessary to their happiness. In respect to State governments, this control can be constitutionally exercised by a bare majority of the people; and in the Federal Government, by a specified number of the States. But this is not the only mode by which the people can redress intolerable grievances. There is another, which cannot be better described than has been done by Mr. Madison. “And in the event (says he) of the failure of every constitutional resort, and an accumulation of usurpations and abuses, rendering passive obedience and non-resistance a greater evil than resistance and revolution, there can remain but one resort, the last of all—an appeal from the cancelled obligations of the compact, to original rights and the law of self-preservation. This is the \textit{ultima ratio} under all governments, whether consolidated, confederated, or a compound of both. And it cannot be doubted that a single member of the Union, in the extremity supposed, but in that only, would have a right, as an extra and ultra-constitutional right, to make the appeal."

It was to this species of separation, which God in his infinite mercy avert! that the committee understand Mr. Jefferson as referring, when he alluded to the farther measure of redress which might be resorted to in extreme cases, and spoke of Virginia's "standing by her arms." It was this great calamity that he sought to avoid, when he so eloquently and feelingly invoked his native state never to think of it, until the sole alternatives left, were a dissolution of the Union, or submission to a government, without limitation or power.

The history given by the President, of the formation of our Government, has drawn forth conflicting opinions in respect to its accuracy; and lest the committee might be regarded as having omitted any portion of their duties, they will, upon this subject, also, with deference to the views of others, briefly but frankly state their own.

The character of our government, so far as that is effected by the manner in which the Federal Constitution was framed and adopted, has been always a matter of more or less contention.— Differences of opinion upon the subject, have been in some degree fostered by a seeming discrepancy between the preamble of the Constitution, and historical facts; and perhaps in a still greater degree, by the different senses in which the term "States" is used by different persons. If we use that term, not merely as denoting particular sections of territory, nor as referring to the particular governments, established and organized by the political societies within each, but as referring to \textit{the people composing those political societies, in their highest sovereign capacity} (as the committee think that in this respect the term should be used) it is incontrovertible, that the States must be regarded as parties to the compact. For it is well established, that, in that sense, the Constitution was submitted to the States; that in that sense, the States ratified it.— This is the explanation which is given on the matter in the report to the Virginia Legislature, which has already received the sanction of the committee. It is in this sense of the term "States," that they form the constituency from which the Federal Constitution emanated, and it is by the States, acting either by their Legislatures, or in Convention, that any valid alterations of the instrument can alone be made. It is by so understanding the subject, that the preamble is reconciled with facts, and that it is a Constitution established by "the people of the United States," not as one consolidated body, but as members of separate and independent communities, each acting for itself, without regard to their
It was in this form that the Constitution of the United States was established by the people of the different States, with the same solemnity that the Constitutions of the respective States were established; and, as the committee have herefore insisted, with the same binding force in respect to the powers which were intended to be delegated to the Federal Government. The effects which are likely to be produced by the adoption of either of the different versions of the Constitution which have at different times been contended for, it is not the intention of the committee to discuss. The positive provisions and restrictions of that instrument, could not be directly abrogated by the recognition of either. The comparative weight and influence which would be attached to the allegations and remonstrances of the States, in respect to the supposed infractiion of the Compact might, however, be very different, whether they are regarded as sovereign parties of the Compact, acting upon their reserved rights, or as forming only indiscriminate portions of the great body of the people of the United States, thus giving a preponderance to mere numbers, incompatible with the frame and design of the Federal Constitution.

The diversities of opinion which have arisen upon this subject, have been more or less injurious according to their influence in inclining or disinclining the minds of those who entertain them, to a faithful observance of the landmarks of authority between the respective governments. Professions are easily made; and the best evidence of a correct appreciation of the nature and design of the system by a public agent, is to be found in the general bearing of his official acts. If his conduct be characterized by a desire to administer the government upon the principles which his constituents have elected, and by a determination to repudiate the dangerous heresy, that the Constitution is to be interpreted, not by the well understood intentions of those who framed and of those who adopted it, but by what can be made out of its words by ingenious interpretation; if he honestly believes that the people are the safest depository of power, and acts up to that belief, by evincing an unwillingness to exercise authority which was not intended to be granted, and which the States and the people might not, on open application, be willing to grant; if he has steadily opposed the adoption of all schemes, however magnificent and captivating, which are not warranted by the Constitution—which, from the inequality of their benefits and burdens, are calculated to sow discord where there should be union, and which are too frequently the offspring of that love of personal authority and aggrandizement which men in power find it so difficult to resist. If he has done all in his power to arrest the increase of monopolies, under all circumstances so adverse to public liberty, and the equal interests of the community: If his official career has been distinguished by unceasing assiduity to promote economy in the public expenditures, to relieve the people from all unnecessary burthens, and generally to preserve our republican system in that simplicity and purity which were intended for it—under which it has hitherto been so successful, by which it can alone be maintained; and on account of which it has, until this moment, stood in such enviable and glorious contrast with the corrupt systems of the old world: If such be the traces of his official course, and if in maintaining it he shall have impressed all mankind with the conviction that he regards as nothing, consequences which are merely personal to himself, when they come in contact with duty to his country, the people of the United States will not doubt his attachment to the true principles of that Constitution which he has so faithfully administered and so nobly supported. Such, the committee take pride in saying, has been the official course of our present Chief Magistrate, a course by which, in the judgment of the people of this State, he has established for himself imperishable claims to their gratitude, respect and confidence.

The committee have thus explained their views upon the several delicate and deeply interesting questions before them, with that frankness which becomes the solemn occasion on which they act, and which should always characterise the movements of a sovereign State upon matters involving her relations with her sister States. In doing so they have felt it to be their duty to vindicate and explain the political principles which are entertained by themselves, and, as they believe, by a majority of the good people of this State. In the performance of this act of justice and duty, they have endeavored to avoid all imputations upon the motives of those who may differ from them. The same independence and tolerance which they claim for themselves, they are disposed to extend to others. Amidst the conflict of interests and feelings with which those, who are charged with the conduct of public affairs at this interesting crisis, are obliged to struggle, there is happily one opinion which has not yet met with a dissenting voice in all the land; and which is fervently hoped, is too deeply implanted in the minds and hearts of the people to be ever eradicated. It is a thorough conviction, that anarchy, degradation and interminable distress, will be, must be, the unavoidable results of a dissolution of the union of these States. Associated with this undeniable and undenied truth, and growing out of it, there are, we trust, two other sentiments of equal universality—a determination to maintain the Union at all hazards, and a willingness to make liberal concessions, nay sacrifices, for the preservation of peace and reciprocal good will amongst its members. Upon this great conservative platform, all sincere friends of the Union, all who honor and truly respect the parting admonitions of the Father of his country, all who prefer that country to their own ambitious views and personal aggrandizement, and who are disposed to give the Executive of the United States a cordial and efficient support, can meet, and act in concert to promote the greatest of all earthly objects. Here all may earn the enduring respect and confidence of the people, by an honorable sacrifice of personal and party feelings on the altar of their country's safety. We may differ as to the time, the manner, or the extent of the measures to be employed, whether of conciliation or coercion. It cannot be expected, at the present crisis, that honest and unprejudiced minds should all happen to arrive at the same conclusion. But such differences should not occasion heart burnings, much less resentments. Our fathers differed in like manner in the establishment of our government; and it is in vain for us to hope for exemption from similar embarrassments; the causes which produced them have not yet ceased to operate; they have been planted by the hand of nature, and cannot be entirely removed by that of man. Those, to whose valor and disinterested patriotism we are indebted for this glorious system under which we have so long and so happily lived, overcame them by mutual concession and compromise. If every man looks only to his own interests, or every State to its own favorite policy, and insists upon them, this Union cannot be preserved. We must not deceive ourselves upon this point, or suffer others to deceive us. Our errors, in this respect, may lead to consequences which can never be recalled; and over which we, and our posterity may have occasion to shed bitter tears of repentance; we must take higher counsel than that which is derived from our pockets or our passions; we must be just, and if need be, generous; and the deep and overpowering attachment of the great mass of the people to the Union, the fidelity, energy, and fortitude of their character, directed by the illustrious man so providentially at the head of the Government, will carry us safely through the dangers which threaten our beloved country.

It remains only to reciprocate, as the committee doubt not the two Houses will readily do, the magnanimous and enlightened sentiments expressed by the Governor, upon the subject which has caused the present embarrassments in our public affairs. Most cheerfully, therefore, do they respond to his declarations, which "disclaim for New-York all desire to aggrandize herself at the expense of her sister States, or to pervert to local purposes, a system of government intended for the common benefit of all;" which asserts her estimate of the value of the Union and her devotion to it; and which avow her willingness, if the operation of existing laws be adverse to those views, to consent to such a modification of them as will remove all just ground of complaint, and afford substantial relief to every real grievance. In these sentiments the committee recognize the best policy as well as the true glory of these States; a policy "which cultivates peace and harmony by observing justice,"

The opinion of this State in favor of the constitutional power of Congress, to afford encouragement and protection to domestic products, by the establishment for that object of suitable commercial regulations, has been too often declared to need repetition. Neither time nor circumstances have contributed to change its convictions, either of the existence or importance of this right. Without it, it would not be possible for the Federal Government to carry into effect one of the principal objects of its institution: and the United States would, in relation to our own exports, be left altogether at the mercy of foreign nations. The possession of the right, however, and the manner and extent of its exercise are very different matters. Whatever causes of serious apprehension for the stability of the Union may heretofore have arisen from this source, it appears to the committee that they have been greatly lessened by the payment of the national debt, and the disposition of the Executive of the United States, and, as the committee firmly believe, of the great body of the people, to make such modification of the tariff as becomes by that event just and practicable. The repeated recommendations of the President to reduce the revenue to what is requisite to defray the expenses of the government, necessarily incurred within the pale of the Constitution, and under a strictly economical administration of our affairs, have been so distinctly and emphatically sanctioned by the people of this State, as to leave no room for doubt or cavil as to their cheerful acquiescence in the measure. Indeed, the committee are yet to learn, that there is any man in this great community who advocates or would justify the collection of taxes from the people for any other purpose, and certainly not for the sole one of taking money from the pockets of one class of our people to put into those of another. All that is asked, is, that the amount of duties thus raised, and so expended, shall be levied in such a manner as to afford reasonable encouragement and protection to our own manufactures and other productions, to enable them to compete with similar articles, the manufacture or production of other countries. With such qualifications as may be necessary to prevent injustice, and to preserve inviolate that sound rule of legislation, which requires that all public burthens should be borne in a proportion to the ability of the contributors, and the extent of the security which they derive from the government. In other words, that too large a share of the public taxes be not imposed upon those articles of prime necessity to the poor, to the exoneration of articles of luxury, which are used only by the rich. And further, that the reduction of duties thus rendered practicable by the payment of the public debt, though ultimately certain, should not be sudden or capricious, but tempered to the condition of existing establishments—establishments which have grown up and been encouraged by our legislation, and whose claims to the favor and indulgence of the government and people are founded upon the public faith. To a claim so reasonable the committee are unwilling to believe that the real friends of the Union any where can object. Men may resist to the uttermost the imposition of unreasonable burthens for the protection of articles, in the manufacture and production of which they are not immediately concerned. But, there are, surely, no American citizens who, exempt from such impositions, would not prefer to encourage those of their own country, in preference to the fruits of foreign labor.

It is not in behalf of New-York, particularly, that these considerations are urged. For it is notorious that this State is not the principal seat of manufacturing establishments. But justice dictates the same course wherever and wherever be its application.

The rules by which this distribution and reduction of the public burthens are to be effected, must from the nature of things, be more or less arbitrary and uncertain. But if the subject be undertaken and prosecuted in good faith—if the tariff system be not made subservient to the purposes of personal ambition, nor to the cravings of individual cupidity, but treated as a matter of business affecting, deeply, the private concerns of every man in every quarter of the Union, there is no doubt of the ability of Congress to adopt such rules as will be satisfactory to the nation.

That the bill of the last session will not reduce the revenue to the proposed standard is certain. The anticipated excess is estimated at between six and seven millions of dollars. Whether the late act should be permitted to go into operation with the intention of modifying the system at the next session of Congress; or whether the object in view shall be effected at the present session, by a law which, though passed now, shall have a gradual operation, is an important point in the difficult and deeply interesting question to be decided. The committee are by no means insensible to the embarrassment arising from the existence of the Ordinance of the State of South Carolina, and regret that any such obstruction should have been thrown in the way of a regular expression of the public will. They could never advise any legislation by Congress under the dictation of any power; and they have very little fear, that any such will be desired by the Executive, or sanctioned by that body. It must, however, be borne in mind, that South Carolina is not the only State which considers herself injuriously affected by the existing law, and seeks relief from its operation; that there are many other States who are, in this respect, similarly circumstanced, whose alienation from the Union would be the greatest calamity that could befall us, but who have shown as much devotion to the Union, and have manifested as much repugnance to the measures of South Carolina as any. It is then for the justice and sound discretion of Congress to decide, whether, whilst all proper measures are adopted to maintain the laws of the United States in the State of South Carolina, in the same manner as if no such Ordinance had been passed, they may not without detriment to the honor and dignity of the Government, now act upon a matter which has been so specially and urgently submitted to them by the Executive. We may be assured that there is sufficient intelligence and virtue in the people to judge those greatly deprecated measures by themselves, uninfluenced by prejudices of any sort on the one hand, or by the cotemporaneous measures of the Government on the other. Nor is it a matter of slight importance to the people of this State to consider whether the acts of South Carolina ought to occasion a collection from them of about one million of dollars annually, a sum three times as large as is required for the entire expenses of our State Government, when the President informs us that it is not needed for the public service.

The duty of deciding upon these grave matters rests, as has been justly observed by the Governor, so far as this State has a voice in the discussion, with those who represent us in the Congress of the United States. There the committee think, with a general expression of the sense of the Legislature, it ought and may with safety be left. It would, doubtless, be competent for the Legislature to give explicit advice and instruction to their representa­tives upon the subject, but from the obvious superiority in position of our representatives in Congress, to take a better view of the whole extent to which the question as to the most proper time for action, as well as the particular provisions which ought to be made, are dependent on facts and details, of which it is impossible that we can be as capable of judging as they are, the committee think the Legislature will best consult their duty and the interests of all, by confin­ing themselves, at this time, to the general expression of opinion which is now most respectfully proposed.

If by a faithful adherence to the principles here advanced in their behalf, the people of this State can contribute to the restoration and preservation of that fraternal affection in which the Union was originally founded, by which it was once cemented, and which is so essential to its preservation, it will be to them a source of much joy and deep gratitude to the Supreme Disposer of events, for the agency they have been permitted to exercise in effecting so great a good. But if, on the contrary, their well-meant efforts prove unavailing; if the offerings of peace and good will which have been so freely and so sincerely tendered by them, in conjunction with their co-States who participate in the same sentiments, shall be rejected; if in the providence of God it be decreed that this Government and this happy Union, the affairs of which have been hitherto so successfully directed by it, are to be put to the final test, the government and people of this State will meet the crisis with the sustaining consciousness, that they have done all that duty enjoined and honor permitted to avert the worst calamity that could befall the country.

STATE OF NEW-YORK.

IN SENATE, February 16th, 1833.

Resolved, (if the Assembly concur,) That we approve of the general views and conclusions of the preceding report.

Resolved, (if the Assembly concur,) That we regard the Union of these States as indispensable to their prosperity and happiness; that we participate fully in the desire which has been manifested by the President to restore harmony and conciliate affection amongst all the people of the United States, by a reasonable and equitable modification of the Tariff, adapting it to the present condition of the country, that we approve the measures he has adopted and recommended to sustain the authority and execute the laws of the United States; and that the government and people of this State will cordially co-operate with him in the exercise of all the means which may be necessary and proper to secure those objects.

Resolved, (if the Assembly concur,) That we regard the right of a single State to make void within its limits the laws of the United States, as set forth in the Ordinance of South Carolina, as wholly unauthorised by the Constitution of the United States, and in its tendency subversive of the Union and the Government thereof.

Resolved, (if the Assembly concur,) That we do dissent from the doctrine, that a single State has a right to withdraw itself from the Union against the wishes of its co-States, whenever in its sole judgment the acts of the Federal Government shall be such as to justify the step.

Resolved, (if the Assembly concur,) That the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing report and resolutions to the Executive of the State of South Carolina, and to the Executives of the other States respectively, to the end that they may be communicated to the Legislatures thereof, and also a copy of the same to the President of the United States, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

By order,

J. F. BACON,
Clerk of the Senate.

CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA,

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to transmit copies of this Preamble and Resolutions to the Governors of the several States, with a request that the same be laid before the Legislatures of their respective States, and also to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, to be by them laid before Congress for consideration.

IN THE SENATE, 19th December, 1832.

The House of Representatives returned, with their concurrence, the Report of the Committee on Federal Relations, on that portion of the Governor's Message, No. 3, which relates to the call of a Convention of the States.

A true copy from the Journals.

JACOB WARLEY,
Clerk of the Senate.

IN SENATE, Feb. 1833.

The Special Joint Committee, to whom was referred, among other things, that portion of his Excellency the Governor's Message, relating to the subject of the preamble, and resolutions of the Legislature of South Carolina, proposing that a "convention of the states should be called, as early as practicable, to consider and determine such questions of disputed power as have arisen between the states of this confederacy, and the general government" have had the same under consideration, and respectfully submit the following REPORT in part.

Upon the first presentment of the resolutions in question, taken in connexion with the matter contained in the preamble, with which they are introduced, your committee are considerably at a loss to determine what should be regarded as being their precise scope and object. The question occurred to them whether it was the intention of the Legislature of South Carolina to invite a Convention of the States, with a view to certain specific amendments of the constitution of the general government, in conformity with the provisions in the fifth article of that instrument, or assume the novel and extraordinary ground that such a convention was necessary, or expedient for the purpose, merely, of considering, and determining, in their sovereign capacity, certain questions of disputed power, which are supposed to exist between that state, more particularly, and the government of the union.

With reference to this point, the committee were naturally led in the first place, to a consideration of the very unusual manner, in case an amendment of the constitution, in conformity with the article alluded to were alone contemplated) in which the proposition is submitted to the Legislature of Massachusetts.

Since the first organization of the federal government, it has, as the committee believe, been the uniform practice of the legislature of a state, whenever it has proposed to bring any amendment or change in the constitution of that government by a convention of the states, to specify, in their application to other states, for cooperation and support in such a measure, the precise points wherein the existing provisions of the system were supposed to be doubtful or insufficient, and the nature and extent of the correction proposed to be applied. This form of application, which, whether prescribed or not by the terms of the article before referred to, would seem to be such as the nature of the case requires, appears, nevertheless, to have been not inadvertently, but studiously, avoided by the Legislature of South Carolina on the present occasion.

In another particular, the novelty of the proposition now submitted to this legislature, not as respects its form only, but its matter and substance is not less conspicuous. It is not proposed that a convention should be called, with a view to any particular amendment, or even, in general terms, to a revision of the constitution of the general government, but that it should take upon itself, when assembled, in a manner wholly unknown in any existing provision of the federal compact, the office of umpire, and sit in judgment on certain disputes which are alleged to exist between a state or states and the nation. It is believed by your committee, that, with the exception of one solitary case of an analogous description, to which they may hereafter have occasion to advert, for another purpose, but which, considering the time of its occurrence, and the fate that awaited it, they can hardly suppose would be relied upon as affording the authority of a precedent, the proposition now submitted is entirely unexplained in the history of this government.

It is, at any rate, most manifest, that, if assented to by the states, it would necessarily be attended with the most fatal consequences to the union. If the principle be sanctioned that, whenever a single member of this confederacy, conceiving itself aggrieved by any, even a questionable measure of the general government, shall be permitted, first, to resist the measure, and then to summon a convention of the whole, in order to consider and determine the matter in dispute, it is easy to foresee what utter degradation of all the regular authorities of the government, what scenes of anarchy and disorder throughout the land must inevitably and speedily ensue. But it appears to your committee, that the proposition, in itself, is not more extraordinary than is the sweeping assertion with which it is prefaced, and which seems, indeed, to constitute the only grounds upon which it is predicated. In the preamble to the resolutions in question, it is declared that serious causes of discontent do exist among the states of this union, from the exercise by Congress, of powers not conferring or contemplated by the sovereign parties to the compact."—

The committee will not trust themselves to express, in terms such as their feelings might prompt them to employ on the occasion, the surprise, as well as the regret they have experienced at meeting with a solemn, deliberate announcement like this, from the legislative body of a respectable member of this union. Nor will they stop to consider, how far, under almost any imaginable circumstances, it is consistent with that courtesy and comity, to say nothing of respect and confidence, which the constituted authorities of the different states have hitherto been accustomed to manifest in their intercourse with one another, and with the several departments of the general government. In the view of your committee, the position here assumed, for it is unaccompanied by any reserve, or qualification whatsoever, amounts in fact to nothing less than this, that both branches of the legislative department of this nation, including of course the chief executive, who must have sanctioned their proceedings, have manifestly been guilty of a dereliction of duty, palpable abuse of power, while in the pretended exercise of their official functions.

An imputation of so grave and serious a nature is not indeed in so many words pronounced against them, but as much as this is clearly implied by the whole tenor of the document alluded to.—If, according to the naked assertion of the preamble, which is wholly unaccompanied by any allowance for a possible error of judgment, the Congress of the United States have, on any occasion, been found to have exercised "powers not conferred nor even contemplated by the parties to the federal compact," the inference would seem to follow, of course, for all acts of a legislative body must be supposed to have been the result of deliberation, that the outrage was perpetrated knowingly, intentionally. Indeed, the committee have been reluctantly led to the conclusion, especially, when taking into view the present communication from the legislature of South Carolina, in connection with the extraordinary measures antecedently adopted, and still maintained by a majority of the people of that state, in their convention, and in their halls of legislation, that it was, in reality, their deliberate intention to pronounce a sentence not less serious and severe, than that before supposed, against the legislative authorities of the general government. It is, as your committee, from a due consideration of all the circumstances of the case are constrained to believe, principally, with a view to the confirmation or the reversal of this sentence, that the invitation is now given to Massachusetts, to unite in summoning a Convention of the States. In this connection, it may be useful to notice, very briefly, the grounds on which, not the leading politicians only, but the high functionaries in the government of South Carolina, have attempted to justify the extraordinary proceedings that have been adverted to. It has been promulgated as one of the first and fundamental principles in their new theory of the federal government, that not one jot or title of the sovereignty of any state was surrendered or compromised, in any manner, at the formation of the union. That a state has a right of course, to be its own interpreter of the laws of the general government, and to be the judge in the last resort, of their validity. That, whenever a state, in its sovereign capacity, shall be pleased to pronounce that the Congress of the United States have, in regard to any of their enactments, transcended the authority delegated to them by the Constitution, all such acts must thenceforth so far, at least, as concerns the citizens of such state, be considered as utterly void and ineffectual. Furthermore, it is contended, that a declaration of the kind above mentioned, is not only binding upon all within the jurisdiction of the disaffected state, but conclusive also, for the time being at least, against all the authorities of the general government. From this novel and most extravagant doctrine, it results as a consequence, that an act of the highest legislative authority of this nation, whatever may be its scope or object, or however urgent in reference either to the foreign or internal affairs of the whole people, may have been the cause of its adoption, must, when thus brought into question, remain as it were in obedience, at the commandment of a single state. In other words, that the vast and complicated machinery of the national government shall be made to stand still, until a grand convention of twenty-four independent, contending sovereignties, if so many should be pleased to assemble on the occasion, shall have considered and determined the question of its validity.

Such, in substance, appears to be the theory of reform which has recently been promulgated, and is still maintained by the constituted authorities of South Carolina; and your committee is constrained to believe that it is, with a reference to this system, and to a consummation of the very extraordinary course of procedure, therein contemplated, that the proposition for a Convention of the States is now submitted to their Legislature. The Committee conceive that it would be a very useless appropriation of time, especially, as the whole subject matter involved in the late extraordinary proceedings of South Carolina, is already, entirely familiar to the community, were they to proceed any farther, on a course of reasoning, in order to demonstrate the utter fallacy, and impracticability of the doctrines, here adverted to; or to dwell, longer, in contemplating the consequences in which, should they be sustained, they must naturally, and necessarily involve the peace, and safety of the Union. Their tendency, it is conceived, is quite too obvious to require, or even to admit of argument, or illustration. They, manifestly, go to resolve at once, our present glorious system of National Government into its original elements, and would leave, not for the present generation, but for posterity, the fearful, if not, utterly hopeless...

In fine, your committee are unanimously of the opinion, that upon any such grounds, or for any such reasons as those which are set forth in the said Preamble and Resolutions, according to the construction thus given to them, it would be wholly, inconsistent with the honor, and the dignity of this Commonwealth to accede to the call of a Convention of the States, for the purposes therein specified.

But, secondly, in case your Committee have been so unfortunate in regard to the before-mentioned particulars, as to have misinterpreted the import, and intent of the Communication from the Legislature of South Carolina; if, contrary to the construction, now assumed, its real intention was to invite the co-operation of Massachusetts in the call of a Convention of the States with a view to some legitimate amendment of the Constitution, in conformity with the existing provisions of the instrument, the Committee are, nevertheless, entirely, agreed in the opinion, that there are, in truth, and, in fact, no such causes existing, as would justify, even for such a purpose (especially, during the present, irremediable state of feeling among the people of several States of the Union) a resort to a measure so unusual, and extraordinary. Unless some one or two discontented States in this Union should, by reason of their pre-eminence in virtue, and patriotism, be considered as justly entitled to the distinguishing appellation of “the States of this Union,” the Committee cannot assent to the position which is laid down in the sweeping language of the Preamble to the Resolutions from South Carolina, that there are, in fact, existing, serious causes, or any just causes whatever, whether serious or trivial, of discontent, among “the States of this Union;” much less, are the Committee prepared to sanction the yet more extravagant assertion, that if discontents of any kind, or to any extent, be, in fact, exist, “they have arisen from the exercise, by Congress, of powers not conferred, or contemplated, by the sovereign parties to the Federal Compact.”

It is, indeed true, that within the period of the last two or three years, one of the States of this Union has seen fit to proclaim aloud, throughout the land, her displeasure on account of certain prominent measures of the General Government.

She has been pleased to assign, as the cause of the discontent, that the highest legislative authority of the nation had assumed to itself the exercise of unwarrantable, and exorbitant power; and, on this ground, has, at length, placed herself in the attitude of open defiance of the Constitution and the laws of the land.

It is not less true, however, that whatever of sympathy or commiseration may have been expressed or felt, by any, for the errors and delusion of a much beloved, but wayward associate in the political family; not a single other State in this Union is united with her in sentiment, either as to the legal grounds of her complaint, or the propriety of the measures to which she has seen fit to resort for redress. On the contrary, in relation to both the one and the other, the voice of nearly the whole people, in their primary assemblages, in their halls of legislation, and every where throughout the land, has been heard, in a tone not of expostulation only, but of severe censure and reproof, to pronounce its decision against her.

In the opinion of your Committee, a convention of the States cannot now be necessary to consider the validity of that decision, or to add any new provisions to those already existing in the Federal compact, with the view of preventing a recurrence of similar discontent among the States, in future.

It is now nearly half a century since the present admirable system of Government first came from the hands of the illustrious statesmen and patriots by whom it was framed. Its theory, conceived as it would now seem to have been, almost by the power of superhuman intelligence, has been found, in experiment, in its wonderful adaptation to all the various and complicated concerns of this great and growing nation, not only to have equalled, but greatly to have transcended, the most sanguine hopes and expectations of the country.

In peace and war; throughout all the trials and vicissitudes to which the nations, as well as individuals, in this imperfect state of being are necessarily subjected, its original principles, as they were at first established and understood by the people, have, to this day, remained without essential change or variation—unpolluted, undisturbed. Indeed, the members of the Committee are solemnly impressed with the conviction, that next to the superintending agency of a wise and beneficent Providence which seemed from the first to have watched over the destinies of this much favoured people, it is to this same system of civil Government, and to the mild, but firm and undeviating manner in which its principles have, for the most part, been maintained and administered, that we are chiefly indebted for the general, nay, almost universal prosperity which is now seen and felt in every part of this wide spread nation. It is this, as they verily believe, which, under the smiles of Heaven, has been the means of elevating these States from their once confused and imbecile condition, to that distinguished station which they now occupy among the proudest and most powerful nations of the world.

In the Constitution of a Government framed with such wisdom, which has been thus tried and proved, and found to have been attended with such happy results, it surely would not be the part of prudence or good policy to attempt, on any light occasion, or indeed in any case but one of the most imperious and urgent necessity, a fundamental change of any kind. It is the opinion of your Committee, that in the complaints lately put forth by the State of South Carolina, there is nothing, when their real causes are fairly and fully investigated, that can be supposed to amount to the presentment of an exigency of this latter description.

Nor do the Committee believe that a revision of the Federal Constitution, by a Convention of the States, would at this time be useful, much less that it can be necessary, as has of late been sometimes alleged, or pretended, with a view to some more clear and exact definition than is to be found in the existing provisions of that instrument, in relation either to the legitimate boundaries of jurisdiction between the General and the State Governments, or to any of the powers or immunities which these high parties respectively have hitherto been accustomed to claim or enjoy.

It was not unforeseen by the illustrious framers of the Federal compact, nor by the intelligent people who adopted it, in the very nature of things, such "questions of disputed power" (to use the language of the South Carolina resolutions) would be likely to arise in the course of its operation. They were doubtless well aware also, that it was not the power of any human wisdom or forecast, or indeed of any thing less than the intelligence which belongs alone to the Omniscient, to devise a system of Government for a nation like this, that should be forever exempt from such doubts and exceptions as the ingenuity or ambition of men might suggest, especially in times of party zeal or excitement. Differences of this kind in political opinion, and the collisions which some times spring from them, should be regarded as the natural, perhaps necessary incidents of all free institutions; as constituting in fact that portion of alloy which, by the ordination of Providence, seems to have been mingled with all our best comforts and blessings, and without which we could not have been permitted to enjoy the blessing of civil liberty, which is more precious in our estimation than all others.

But it is believed that the testimony of all history will demonstrate that such difficulties have been of less frequent occurrence, and attended with much less serious consequences in this, than in any other Government partaking in any degree of the republican form, which has existed on the face of the earth. It was, at any rate, precisely with a reference to these natural and necessary consequences of the freedom of all our political institutions, that the grand conservative principle, which is found in the Judiciary department, was deeply implanted in the system; that a high tribunal was appointed to stand, as it were, by the very tenure of its office, as well as by the peculiarity of its attributes in other respects, separate and distinct from all other departments of the Government. That to this tribunal was confided the great business of interpreting the Constitution and the laws, and of performing the high office of arbiter, in the last resort, of more than a tribute justly due to the character and conduct of this distinguished tribunal, as well as to the wisdom and forecast of the illustrious statesmen who provided for its organization, to pronounce that it has hitherto fulfilled most faithfully effectually, the great purposes of its appointment.

It must be admitted, indeed, that, in the course of a series of years, during which the system has been in operation, a few isolated instances of insubordination, not only, among considerable masses of citizens, but extending, even, to the constituted authorities of whole States, have been known to exist, which seemed, at first, too mighty to be controlled by the mild, and peaceable operation of the principle alluded to; but happily, for the peace, and honor of the country, the Constitution and the laws have hitherto in all such cases, eventually triumphed. The Committee, here, feel a degree of pride as well as pleasure, from having an opportunity to unite their humble voice with that of the late distinguished Commentator, who had, perhaps, as much to do, as any other mortal now living or dead, in the original formation, and subsequent administration of our present system of government, in the declaration that, "with few exceptions, the course of the Judiciary has, hitherto, been sanctioned by the predominant sense of the nation."

If, in relation to this particular branch of the subject, anything further were wanting in confirmation of the opinions which are entertained by every member of the Committee, they would beg leave to invoke to their aid, and indeed to adopt as their own, the sentiments that were, once expressed by the Authorities of another leading State of this Union in a case corresponding, essentially, in its character, and, in fact almost entirely analogous, in its circumstances, to that which is now, presented for consideration.

The Committee, here, allude to the proceedings of the Legislature of Virginia, some thirty years ago, when a proposition was submitted to them by the Government of a neighboring State, then, the largest, and most influential member of the confederacy, for an amendment of the Constitution of the United States, by providing for "the appointment of an impartial tribunal to decide disputes between the State, and Federal Judiciary;" in other words, a tribunal, in relation to which, the one, now established by the Constitution, should become, a mere Subordinate, and Dependent. It would be foreign from the purpose of the present inquiry, and serve, only, to revive the remembrance of scenes, which, for the honor of the country, should, rather, be permitted to pass, silently to oblivion, and, if possible, be obliterated from the history of this government, were the Committee to attempt a detail of the reasons, or rather, pretexts which were urged as the grounds of this extraordinary, and, at that time, wholly, unprecedented proposal, on the part of the great State that has been alluded to.

It is sufficient for us to know, that it was in a case in which the all questions "of disputed power" that might arise in the course of their administration. It is, in the opinion of the Committee, no highest Authorities of one of the States of this Union were seen in hostile array, on the very verge of open insurrection, against the Judicial power of the nation; and which, but for a returning consciousness of error, and delusion, on the one side, and a firm, undeviating perseverance in the execution of its high duties, on the other, must inevitably, have involved the country in all the complicated horrors of civil war.

But, happily, for the nation, the pretentions, and the project of the disaffected State received no countenance from the State of Virginia. Her response, on the occasion, was precisely, such as might, reasonably, have been anticipated from the intelligence, and pure patriotism of such men, as are known to have presided, at that day, in the councils of that, much distinguished Commonwealth.

"It was, among other things, unanimously, resolved by both Branches of their Legislature that, in their opinion, there was a Tribunal already, provided, by the Constitution of the United States, to wit, the Supreme Court, more eminently qualified, from their habits and duties, from the mode of their selection, and from the tenure of their office, to decide the disputes aforesaid, in an enlightened, and impartial manner than any other Tribunal which could be erected."

Such, to the very letter, was the magnanimous declaration of Virginia, when, by reason of an unpopular, Judicial decision, (in the celebrated Olmstead case of Pennsylvania) she was invited to cooperate in an attempt to break up the existing foundations of the Judiciary Department of our Government. The example thus presented to us is worthy of all praise, and of imitation; and it surely, is of not of the less authority, from the circumstance of being holden up to us, by a member of this Union, which, whatever may, at any time, have been said, or thought of its political character, in other respects, has, it is believed, never been suspected of any deficiency of zeal, or devotedness to the cause of State rights, or the protection of its own dignity, and sovereignty.

The Committee will not attempt, by any further commentary of their own, to give this precedent, additional strength or weight. In fine, upon a mature and deliberate consideration of the whole subject submitted to them, the Committee have, unanimously, agreed to recommend to this Legislature, the adoption of the following Resolves.

For the Committee.

GEORGE BLAKE.
RESOLVES.

WHEREAS, the Governor of the State of South Carolina did by his communication, under date the fifth day of January last past transmit to His Excellency the Governor of this Commonwealth copies of a certain preamble, and resolutions connected therewith, recently passed by both branches of the Legislature of the said first mentioned States, with a request that the same might be laid before the Legislature of this Commonwealth; in which said preamble and resolutions, it is set forth that "serious causes of discontent do exist among the States of this Union, from the exercise, by Congress, of powers not conferred or contemplated by the sovereign parties to the compact; and resolving, therefore, that it is expedient that a convention of the states be called, as early as practicable, to consider and determine such questions of disputed power as have arisen between the state of this confederacy, and the general government."

AND WHEREAS, His Excellency the Governor of this Commonwealth hath, in pursuance of the said request submitted to the consideration of this Legislature, the preamble and resolutions aforesaid: Therefore

1. Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled, That the Legislature of this Commonwealth do not recognise the existence, at this time, of any serious causes of discontent among the States generally, of this Union, or in any one of them; much less, can they admit that, if any such discontents do, in fact, exist, they have arisen from the exercise by Congress of powers not conferred or contemplated by the sovereign parties to the compact, as is asserted in the before mentioned communication from the Legislature of South Carolina.

2. Resolved, That there is already existing under the Constitution of the United States, a proper and competent tribunal, namely, the Supreme Court of the United States, who are invested with sufficient power, and authority; who are, eminently, qualified, and to whom it constitutionally belongs, to consider and determine "the questions of disputed power," and all other matters of controversy which are referred to in the said preamble and resolutions: Therefore

3. Resolved, That the Legislature of this Commonwealth do not accede to the proposition of calling a convention of the States for the purposes therein expressed, or for any other purpose whatsoever.

4. Resolved, That His Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of these resolves, together with the report which accompanies them, to the President of the United States, the Gov-

MARYLAND.

By the House of Delegates,

February 9, 1833.

The joint committee, to whom was referred the Ordinance and other documents, transmitted us by the Governor of South Carolina, and that part of our late Governor's message, relating thereto, have given the subject that attention which its serious import demands, and report the following:

Resolved by the General Assembly of Maryland, That in expressing our opinion upon the ordinance of nullification, and the recent proceedings of South Carolina, it is our duty to declare our opinions firmly on the principles assailed, and to expostulate mildly and affectionately with her.

Resolved, That we hold these principles to be incontrovertible, that the government of the United States was adopted by the people of the different states, and established in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, "provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity," that it possesses all the powers necessary for the purposes for which it was instituted, that it is irreconcilable with the objects and purposes for which the constitution was adopted, to suppose that it contains in itself the principles of its own destruction, or has failed to endue the government, created by it, with the essential power of self-preservation.

That it is not in the power of any one state to annul an act of the general government as void, or unconstitutional.
That the power of deciding controversies among the different states, or between the general government, and a state, is reposed in the federal judiciary, and that it is an act of usurpation for any state to arrogate to herself jurisdiction in such cases.

That the Supreme Court is the only tribunal, having conclusive jurisdiction in cases involving the constitutionality of the acts of the general government.

That whenever a state is aggrieved by the constitutional acts of the general government, the fifth article of the constitution prescribes the remedy, declaring that "the Congress, whenever two thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constitution, or on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this constitution, when ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the several states, or by a conventions, in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress."

That the right to annul a law of the general government, assumed by one state, is "incompatible with the existence of the Union, contradicted expressly by the letter of the constitution, unauthorized by its spirit, inconsistent with every principle on which it was founded, and destructive of the great object for which it was formed."

That our fellow citizens of South Carolina, who remain faithful to the constitution and laws of the United States, are entitled to the protection of the general government, both for their property and their persons.

That if any state, regardless of the constitutional remedies which are afforded for every grievance and oppression, should attempt to withdraw from the Union, it is the right and duty of the general government, to protect itself, and the other states from the fatal consequences of any such attempt.

Further Resolved, That the Ordinance of nullification of South Carolina is calculated to mislead her citizens from the true character of federal government, and the just allegiance, which they owe to that government.

Resolved, That this state is ardently attached to the Union, that it does not desire any additional powers to be conferred on the general government, but wishes every delegated power to be exerted, that has a tendency to strengthen the bonds that unite us, and to fortify the hope that the Union will be perpetual.

Resolved, That this state does not recognize the power in any state, to nullify a law of Congress, nor to secede from the Union, and that it will sustain the general government in the exercise of every constitutional means to preserve unimpaired the integrity of the United States.

Resolved, That our mutual interests and general welfare impel us to guard with care, the integrity of the constitution, and to appeal in the most solemn and affectionate manner to the other states, and particularly to South Carolina, to reciprocate with this state, its well founded attachment to the Union, and to oppose, with becoming firmness, every infraction of those great and fundamental principles of the constitution, which form the only basis on which our happy institutions can with safety repose.

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the excitement which has prompted our sister state of South Carolina to the attitude of defiance, which she now exhibits; that however extravagant her irritation may be deemed, or impatient her proceedings, we will not renounce the hope that a calmer feeling will yet enable her to see the dreadful consequences of repelling the laws of the Union.—That, conspicuous and persevering as her valor was in achieving the great results which gave birth to our Union, she will yet remember the glory of her early toils, and will offer up, in the sanctuary of the Union, her ordinance and her consequent laws, a patriotic sacrifice to the cause of American liberty and Union.

Resolved, That the tariff laws of 1828, and of 1832, are within the legitimate exercise of the constitutional powers of congress, but we will acquiesce with pleasure, in any modification of those laws which the wisdom of congress may devise for allaying the excitement on that subject, in the Southern portion of our country, which shall reduce the amount of revenue to the necessary expenditures of the government, and at the same time sufficiently guard those great interests which have grown up under the system of protection.

Resolved, That the following words from Washington's Farewell Address, should at all times, but particularly at the present alarming crisis, be impressed upon the heart of every American: "The unity of government, which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you; it is justly so, for it is a main pillar of the edifice of your real independence. The support of your tranquility at home, your peace abroad; of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize."

"It is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your National Union, to your collective and individual happiness, that you should cherish a cordial, habitual, and immovable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as the palladium of your political safety and prosperity, watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety, discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can, in any event be abandoned, and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts."

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit a copy of the above resolutions, to the President of the United States, to the executives of the several states, and to each of our senators and representatives in congress.

By order,

G. G. BREWER, Ctk.

By the Senate, Feb. 26, 1833.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Trenton, Feb. 19, 1833.

Sir,

I have the honor to transmit to your Excellency, Preamble and Resolutions, recently passed by the Legislative Council and General Assembly of this State—and am, very respectfully,

SAM'L. L. SOUTHARD.

Of the State of Kentucky.

STATE OF NEW-JERSEY.

WHEREAS the people of the State of South Carolina, in Convention assembled, have, by an ordinance, dated 24th of November, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, declared and ordained that the several acts and parts of acts of the Congress of these United States, purporting to be laws for the imposing of duties and imposts on the importation of foreign commodities, are unauthorized by the constitution, violate the true intent and meaning thereof, and are null and void and not binding upon the said state, its officers or citizens, have proclaimed their determination to enforce said ordinance at every hazard, denied the authority of the general government to enforce the revenue laws within the said State of South Carolina, and transmitted a copy of such ordinance, together with an appeal to the people of the United States, to the Executive of this State: And whereas the high obligations we owe to our common country, as a member of this great confederacy, as well as the due preservation of the inestimable privileges we enjoy under this free and happy government, secured by the toils and cemented by the blood of our common ancestors, has rendered it an imperative duty to proclaim our opinions upon this important subject—Therefore, in the name and in behalf of the people of the State of New-Jersey, and as their legal representatives,
1. Be it resolved, by the Council and General Assembly of said State, That the Constitution adopted and sanctioned by the people of these United States, as well as our early history, our common interest, our habits, our intercourse, our love of freedom, the honor, strength and durability of our country, proclaim that all the States of this Union make one indivisible nation, united in prosperity and adversity, in peace as in war, by the sacred and indissoluble bond of their Union.

2. Resolved, That we deprecate the acts and proceedings of our brethren of the State of South Carolina, as opposed to the fundamental principles upon which the government of these United States is based, as violating the spirit and meaning of the Federal Constitution, and tending to rend asunder those ties of common interest and fraternal regard, of mutual dependence and reciprocal obligation, which are alike our pride, our glory and our strength, and which have proclaimed us to the world a United People.

3. Resolved, That when South Carolina, together with all the other States, acceded to this Union, and adopted the Constitution, she and they became thereby irrevocably bound that all controversy upon the Constitutionality of an act of Congress, should be finally adjudicated by the Supreme Court of these United States. The sacred charter of our liberties never contemplated that each state had reserved to itself an ultimate appeal to its own citizens in their sovereign capacity.

4. Resolved, That the manufactures of America, are one of the elements of our independence and greatness; not oppressing, but advancing hand in hand with agriculture and commerce. These three sources of National prosperity, demand equally the fostering protection of Government; to crush either would be to paralyse all; and to the General Government, alone, standing on an elevation to survey the whole ground, belongs the information, the wisdom, and the power to apportion just patronage wherever circumstances may require.

5. Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States, now contains within itself, an ample provision for its amendment, and for the remedy of every evil which may arise from unforeseen events, or ambiguous construction. When this provision shall be legally called into operation, we shall be prompt to concede all to justice, much to fraternal feeling, and somewhat even to local excitement and mistaken enthusiasm. But it cannot comport either with dignity or sound policy to yield ought in the face of threatened disunion and an armed resistance to the laws.

6. Resolved, That the principles contained in the proclamation, and late message of the President of the United States, meet our entire approbation; and that we will sustain the Chief Magistrate of the Union in the constitutional enforcement of these principles.
7. Resolved, That we implore our fellow citizens of South Carolina, allied as they are to us, by all the heart stirring and inspiring recollections of the eventful struggle that made us an independent nation, maturely to ponder over the present crisis in their affairs, and magnanimously to return to more temperate counsels, and a juster sense of that obedience to the general will which constitutes the lasting security, and should be the glory and the ornament of every member of this confederacy. But should our fellow citizens of South Carolina, contrary to our reasonable expectations, unsheath the sword, it becomes our solemn and imperative duty to declare, that no separate nation ought or can be suffered to intrude into the very centre of our Territory.

8. Resolved, That the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the President of the United States, to each Senator and Representative in Congress, from this State, and to the Governors of the respective States of the Union.

House of Assembly, February 18th, 1833.

These re-engrossed joint resolutions having been three times read in the House of Assembly,

Resolved, That the same do pass.

By order of the House.

JOHN P. JACKSON, Speaker of Assembly.

In Council, February 18th, 1833.

These re-engrossed joint resolutions having been three times read in the Council and compared,

Resolved, That the same do pass.

By order of the Council.

ELIAS P. SEELEY, Vice President.

I, James D. Westcott, Secretary of the State of New-Jersey, do certify, that the foregoing is a true copy of the joint resolutions of the Legislative Council and General Assembly of the State of New-Jersey, passed February 18th, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, as compared with the original, now remaining on file in my office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of my said office, at the city of Trenton, in said State, this 18th day of February, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three.

JAMES D. WESTCOTT.

REPORT of the committee in the Senate of the State of Delaware, on the Ordinance of the State of South Carolina, Nullifying certain Laws of Congress.

EXTRACT FROM THE JOURNAL OF THE SENATE,

Wednesday, January 2, 1833.

"On motion of Mr. Bayard,

"So much of the Governor's message as refers to the communication from the state of South Carolina, was referred to a committee of three members—Whereupon, Messrs. Bayard, Wainright and Rodney were appointed such committee."

The members of the committee, are Messrs. Richard H. Bayard, Thomas Wainright, and Henry F. Rodney.

MR. BAYARD,

From the Committee to whom was referred, so much of the Governor's message, as relates to the Communication from the Governor of the State of South Carolina, made the following Report; January 7, 1833.

The Committee to whom was referred so much of the Governor's message as relates to the communication from the Governor of the State of South Carolina, respectfully submit the following REPORT:

The communication from the Governor of South Carolina is composed of documents ordered by a Convention of the people of that State held in November last, to be transmitted to the Governors of the several States for information of their respective Legislatures. These Documents consist of a Report of a committee of twenty-one to the Convention, on the subject of the several acts of Congress imposing duties for the protection of domestic manufactures, with the Ordinance to Nullify the same, an address to the people of that State, and an address to the people of the United States. Your committee have examined the papers with great care and with that respectful attention which is due to the source from which they emanate, but they cannot disguise their astonishment at the position assumed by the Convention and the arguments by which it is attempted to be sustained. The position taken by the Convention is, that they have a right to suspend the operation of certain acts of Congress within the limits of the State by declaring those acts null and void, on the ground of their supposed unconstitutionality. This extraordinary right is assumed not as a revolutionary measure, but as one that results from the nature of the compact, created by the Constitution, and as in perfect harmony with its principles. It becomes necessary therefore, to settle distinctly, the nature of that instrument, in order to decide the question of this right.
The ground taken by the Convention on this subject is "that the Federal Constitution is a treaty, a confederation, an alliance by which so many sovereign states agree to exercise their sovereign powers conjointly, upon certain objects of external concern, in which they are equally interested." That the Federal Government is the common agency of the sovereign States, and possesses no more inherent sovereignty than an incorporated town, that it is a mere political corporation, "and that it is the moral obligation alone which each state has chosen to impose on herself, and not the want of sovereignty" which restrains her from exercising all those powers which have been granted to the Federal Government. And this is declared by the Convention to be the true nature of the compact. The principle with which they set out, and upon which the whole doctrine is built, is thus laid down in the address to the people of the State—page 4. "The Constitution of the United States, as is admitted by cotemporary writers, is a compact between sovereign states." This is the corner stone of the whole system of Nullification. For if it be true that the Constitution is a mere treaty or compact between sovereign states, which now possess all the sovereignty they ever had, and among whom there can be no common arbiter, the rest of the doctrine follows as a matter of course. The question then arises, is this proposition true? Your committee conceive that it is false in both its branches. It is neither a compact between sovereign states, nor is so admitted to be, by cotemporary writers, at least of any credit.

The first and most natural source to look to, for the settlement of this question, is the instrument itself. Since it is apparent that it would be utterly useless to reduce an agreement or compact to writing, that it would be useless to establish a written constitution for any government or any people, if the crude notions and wild conceits of any individual may be substituted for the terms of the instrument. This is more particularly true with regard to such an instrument as the Constitution of the United States, which was the work in the first instance of a general convention from the different States, and was afterwards submitted to the conventions of the people in each of the States. So that not a word or letter, and certainly not a single principle contained in it can be supposed to have escaped the severest scrutiny, and the whole must therefore have the highest sanction.

Upon opening that instrument, the first principle which presents itself is, that it purports to be the act of the American people. It is not stated to be a compact between New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and the other ten sovereign states, and which would have been the appropriate, and indeed the only preamble if the idea intended to be conveyed was, that of a compact or treaty between those sovereign states; but on the contrary, it is declared to be the act of the American people. The language is,
"We the people of the United States do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America." The principle here established is, that the government created by that constitution is the act of the people of the United States, and not the act of the States, as sovereignties. As this principle lies at the foundation of the whole system, it is impossible that it should have escaped the attention of the General Convention, and of the thirteen state conventions which passed upon it. They could not have been ignorant of, or inattentive to, the difference of the two principles involved in the question, whether the instrument to which they assented, was a constitution of government to be established by the people, or a treaty or compact between thirteen sovereign states. To suppose them ignorant, is to suppose them incompetent to their task, and to suppose them inattentive, is to suppose them culpably negligent of their duty. But we will show that they were neither the one or the other.

The very first question, as might naturally be supposed, that presented itself to the General Convention was, whether the constitution they were about to form should be a compact among the states or the act of the people. The particular business of the convention was opened by Governor Randolph, who submitted to their consideration, on the 29th May, 1787, various resolutions, with a view to settle the principles on which they were to proceed. The first of those resolutions was in these words—"Resolved that the articles of Confederation ought to be so corrected and enlarged as to accomplish the objects proposed by their institution, namely, common defence, security of liberty and general welfare." Elliott's Debates, vol. 4, p. 41. Now, it must be recollected, that the articles of Confederation were in point of fact, and in terms, a compact between the different States as sovereignties. The instrument itself purports to be such, and is described in the preamble as "Articles of Confederation and perpetual union between the states of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations," &c. As governor Randolph's proposition was merely to correct and enlarge those articles, if it had been adopted, the nature of the compact would have been the same, and it would have continued to stand on the footing of an agreement among the states as sovereignties. The very point now at issue was therefore brought at once, and directly before the Convention. On the same day the convention resolved to go into committee of the whole, on the state of the Union, and the propositions of governor Randolph were referred to that committee. On the following day, May 30th, these resolutions were taken up for consideration, and the particular one in question being the first in order, was, on his own motion, postponed; and another offered likewise by him, was, after debate, adopted as a substitute in the following words: "Resolved that a National Government ought to be established consisting of a Supreme Legislative, Judiciary, and Executive."—
On this question, six states, namely, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina voted in the affirmative; Connecticut voted in the negative, and New York was divided.—Elliott's Debates, vol. 4, p. 49. Mr. Yates, a mem­ er of the convention from New-York, who was opposed to the present constitution, and afterwards withdrew from the convention because he thought they were exceeding their powers, kept minutes of the debates while he was there, which are published in the 4th
vol. of Elliott's debates, and has thus thrown much light on the questions that were agitated; and may be considered for that purpose, as of the highest authority. In his minutes of the debate on that day he observes, "this last resolve had its difficulties, the term supreme required explanation. It was asked whether it was intented to annihilate the State Governments? It was answered only so far as the powers intended to be granted to the new government should clash with the states, when the latter should yield."—Yates' Minutes, p. 50. It was thus decided that the articles of confederation should be laid aside and the principle of a compact among the States as sovereigns abandoned. Accordingly we find that on the 6th June following, when the fourth resolution offered by goveror Randolph, was under consideration, which provided that the members of the first branch of the national Legislature should be elected by the people, a motion having been made to strike out the word "people" and substitute the word "Legislatures," of the several States, the motion was lost by a vote of eight states to three.
In the debate on that point Mr. Madison is reported by Mr. Yates, to have observed that when we agreed to the first resolve of having a national government, consisting of a Supreme Executive, Judicial and Legislative power, it was then intended to operate to the exclusion of a Federal Government, and the more extensive we made the basis, the greater probability of duration, happiness and order."—Yates' Minutes, p. 63.

The first resolution was afterwards modified so as to read thus:
"Resolved that the government of the United States ought to consist of a Supreme Legislative, Judiciary, and Executive." The reason for which is stated by Mr. Luther Martin, one of the delegates from Maryland, and a most determined opponent of the proposed system at the time, to have been that they were afraid that the word national might tend to alarm.—Yates' Minutes, p. 22.

The principle was thus, therefore, clearly established and remained unchanged, that the new government was not to be placed on the footing of a compact among the states as sovereigns; but was to emanate from the people and be established by their authority.
On the twenty-third of July the resolution thus modified, was, together with the others which had been elaborated in the debate that had been carried on in the committee of the whole, referred to a committee of five for the purpose of reporting a constitution. It is evident that the committee appointed for that purpose, were bound, in drafting the instrument, to preserve the fundamental principle. Accordingly, on the 6th of August, the committee reported the draught of a constitution, the preamble to which began in these words: "We the people of the states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, &c. do ordain and establish the following constitution for the government of ourselves and our posterity."—Elliott's Debates, vol. 4, p. 116. The principle was here distinctly set forth, but as it might have afforded some room for cavil, and it was determined that there should not be a loop to hang a doubt upon, the phraseology was changed, and that of the present constitution adopted, "We the people of the United States," &c. If it is possible for human language or for human conduct to express the intentions of the mind, nothing can be clearer than the intention of the General Convention on this point. If regard then be had to the instrument itself, it is, and it purports to be, a constitution of government established by the people of the United States. For this purpose it was not at all necessary that they should be assembled in one body, in one place, or by one authority. It was sufficient for them to assemble in their respective states, at their usual places of election, and under the usual authority. When once assembled and they proceed to ratify the instrument, it became to all intents and purposes their act. Nor does it at all affect the question that it was provided, that the ratification of a certain number of the states should be necessary for its establishment. That was a mere condition which amounted to no more than a declaration, that the experiment was not worth the trial, unless such a portion of the people should concur. So far as this particular subject is concerned, the term states is a mere description of the people by classes, and is of no more moment in the argument than if the provision had been, that it should not take effect unless ratified by two millions of people, or by two hundred and forty counties, or one hundred districts. The provision was a condition precedent which ceased to be of importance the moment it was fulfilled.

The tenth amendment of the constitution which provides that "the powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively or to the people," illustrates and confirms the view here taken of the character of the instrument and the source of its authority. But if in addition to this, the form of government be considered which deprives the states of almost all the essential rights of sovereignty, and makes them amenable to the tribunals of the United States' government, whose decisions are conclusive in relation to all controversies arising under the constitution and the laws of the United States, it becomes a matter of surprise that any doubt should have been expressed on the subject.
It thus appears that the constitution is not a treaty or compact between sovereign states, and it remains to show that such was the opinion of contemperate writers. Reference has already been made to the work of Mr. Yates who was a member of the convention from New York, and whose minutes of the debates are of the highest degree of authenticity, and which in the passage already cited, as well as in others, confirms the position taken by your committee. In the debate on the 29th June, the first clause of the seventh proposition being under consideration, which respected the suffrage of each state in the first branch of the legislature, Mr. Madison who is so much relied upon by the Carolina Convention as an authority, in the celebrated resolutions of 1798, expressed himself as follows, as reported by Mr. Yates: "Some gentlemen are afraid that the plan is not sufficiently national, while others apprehend that it is too much so. If this point of representation was once well fixed, we would come nearer to one another in sentiment.—The necessity would then be discovered of circumscribing more effectually the state governments, and enlarging the bounds of the general government. Some contend that states are sovereign, when in fact, they are only political societies. There is a gradation of power in all societies, from the lowest corporation to the highest sovereign. The states never possessed the essential rights of sovereignty. These were always vested in Congress. Their voting as states in Congress, is no evidence of sovereignty. The state of Maryland voted by counties—did this make the counties sovereign? The states at present are only great corporations having the power of making by-laws, and these are effectual only if they are not contradictory to the general confederation. The states ought to be placed under the control of the general government. If the power is not immediately derived from the people, in proportion to their numbers, we may make a paper confederacy, but that will be all. We know the effects of the old confederation, and without a general government this will be like the former." Yates' Minutes, page 114.

In the debate on the 5th June, the last or 15th proposition of governor Randolph, being under consideration, which provided that the work of the convention should be submitted to assemblies of representatives to be chosen by the people expressly for that purpose. Mr. Yates reports that, "Mr. Madison endeavoured to enforce the necessity of this resolve, because the new national constitution ought to have the highest source of authority, at least, paramount to the powers of the respective constitutions of the states; points out the mischiefs that had arisen in the old confederation, which depends upon no higher authority than the confirmation of an ordinary act of a legislature."—Yates' Minutes, page 62.

Mr. Luther Martin, who was a delegate from the State of Maryland in the General Convention, and violently opposed to the new system at the time, in his report to the legislature of Maryland, on the subject of the proceedings of the Convention, thus details the arguments used by himself and his friends: "It was urged that the government we were forming was not in reality a federal, but a national government, not founded on the principles of the preservation, but the abolition or consolidation of all state governments. That we appeared totally to have forgot the business for which we were sent, and the situation of the country for which we were preparing our system. That we had not been sent to form a government over the inhabitants of America, considered as individuals, that as individuals they were all subject to their respective state governments, which governments would still remain, though the federal government should be dissolved. That the system of government we were entrusted to prepare was a government over these thirteen states; but that in our proceedings we adopted principles which would be right and proper only on the supposition that there were no state governments at all, but that all the inhabitants of this extensive continent were in their individual capacity without government, and in a state of nature. That, accordingly, the system proposes the legislature to consist of two branches, the one to be drawn from the people at large, immediately in their individual capacity, the other to be chosen in a more select manner, as a check upon the first. It is in its very introduction, declared to be a compact between the people of the United States as individuals; and it is to be ratified by the people at large in their capacity as individuals; all which it was said would be quite right and proper, if there were no state governments, if all the people of this continent were in a state of nature and we were forming one national government for them as individuals, and it is nearly the same as was done in most of the States, when they formed their governments over the people who compose them."—Yates’ Minutes, pages 19, 20. Notwithstanding these arguments the constitution was prepared and adopted on the principles which were thus proposed; and we have here the commentary of one of the ablest lawyers that this country ever produced, who was himself a member of the Convention, and opposed to the system upon that very instrument; and putting it beyond all doubt and controversy, that it was the design of the Convention to abandon the principle of a compact among the states as sovereigns and substitute for it, that of a government established by the people. The same view of the subject is presented in the Federalist, a work which was written at the time for the express purpose of explaining and recommending the new constitution, and which was the joint production of three of the ablest men of the day, and has been regarded and relied upon, both in and out of Congress, and even in the courts of justice, as presenting a most able authentic, and correct exposition of its principles. The conclusion of the twenty-second number in which some of the evils of the old confederation are pointed out is as follows: "It has not a little contributed to the infirmities of the existing federal system, that it never had a ratification by the people. Resting on no better foundation than the consent of the several legislatures, it has been exposed to frequent and intricate questions concerning the validity of its powers; and has in some instances given birth to the enormous doctrine of the right of Legislative repeal. Owing its ratification to the law of a State, it has been contended that the same authority might repeal the law by which it was ratified. However gross a heresy it may be, to maintain that a party to a compact has a right to revoke that compact, the doctrine itself has had respectable advocates. The possibility of a question of this nature, proves the necessity of laying the foundations of our national government deeper than in the mere sanction of delegated authority. The fabric of American empire ought to rest on the solid basis of the consent of the people. The streams of national power ought to flow immediately from that pure original fountain of all legitimate authority."

It is unnecessary to multiply quotations. The question is not under what name the government established by the constitution would be classed by political writers; whether it would be called a federal government or a national government, or a compound of the two; but simply from whom does it derive its powers? whether from the states as sovereigns, or from the people? It thus appears from the constitution itself, from the journal of the Convention, from the debates on its proceedings, from the reports of its enemies, and from the arguments of its friends, that the principle on which it was founded was, that it was to be a government emanating from, and established by the people. If any thing more were wanting to make assurance doubly sure, the ratification by the state of Virginia, where more opposition was experienced than in any other state, and more debate was had on the subject, the solemn act of ratification by that state recognizes the fact in so many words. It is as follows:

"We the delegates of the people of Virginia, &c. do, in the name and in behalf of the people of Virginia, declare and make known, that the powers granted under the Constitution being derived from the people of the United States; may be resumed by them, whenever the same shall be perverted to their injury or oppression, and that every power not granted thereby, remains with them, and at their will, &c."—Elliott's Debates, vol. 4, p. 215.

It is thus established beyond a doubt, whether we regard the instrument itself or its contemporaneous history, that the Constitution is a form of government established by the people, and not a compact or treaty among the states. If this be true, then the whole system of nullification topples into ruin.

The principle on which that system is built, is, that the constitution is a treaty between sovereign states and the general government—an agency for them. The moment this foundation is destroyed, the whole system of reasoning fails with it. If the general government be one, established by the people of the United States, then they owe it allegiance, and may be guilty of treason towards it. Its laws are supreme, and no portion of the people can abrogate them. The state governments are component but subordinate parts of the system. They are as necessary and useful in their sphere as the general government, but that portion of the people of the United States who constitute a particular state, can have no more right to nullify or suspend a law of the United States than a smaller portion of them, as a county of a particular state, or than any individual; in other words, the union of any number, whether great or small, can give no greater or other right than that which belongs to each individual, as a constitutional measure. It is to be recollected that the ground taken by the nullification party, is, that nullification is a right consistent with the constitution and peaceable in its nature. In order to sustain that position, it was essential to show that the constitution is a treaty between sovereign states, and that in such case there could be no common arbiter, but that each was entitled to construe the instrument for itself, and was bound only by moral obligation to observe its stipulations, and was therefore the judge of their infraction, and of the measure and mode of redress. But so far from this being true, it has been shown that the constitution is a form of government established by the people of the United States; and having provided a tribunal for the settlement of all controversies arising under its provisions, or the laws of the United States, it necessarily follows that no other mode of decision can be resorted to as consonant with its principles.

If the ground had been taken, that it was a revolutionary measure, and justified on the great principle of self preservation, it would have had the merit of being intelligible; and if true, would have enlisted the sympathies of other states, and indeed, of other nations. In such a case it would be an appeal to arms, and the legal consequences of such a step would have to be met. The case would then be one of an insurrection of a portion of the people against the government, in consequence of alleged oppression. But it was clearly seen, that the real state of the case would not justify such a measure. It was clearly seen, that neither the rest of the people of the United States, nor any portion of the world, could be made to believe that in the midst of so general happiness and prosperity, in a time of profound peace, with an overflowing treasury, and under such a government as that of the United States, such a case of oppression could be made out, as would justify rebellion. It was therefore necessary to resort to this doctrine of nullification for the purpose of disguising the real nature of the measure, and to give to a contemplated resistance the air of constitutional right. The act of nullification is, itself, a nullity, and the consequences are treason.
The state governments, it is true, are sovereign for some purposes; but have, by the Constitution of the United States, been stripped of most of the essential attributes of sovereignty—such as the rights to declare war, make peace, enter into treaties and alliances, coin money, &c. It is a matter of no sort of importance, which instrument happened to precede the other in point of time, whether the Constitution of the State, or the Constitution of the United States. The latter instrument having been declared the supreme law, and being the work of the same people, necessarily controls and abridges any sovereign power vested in the state governments under the state constitutions. It is needless to pursue the subject further; it is apparent that the state of South Carolina has no such right as she claims under the Constitution. And if she can justify the measure at all, it must be on the ground of intolerable oppression and the unconstitutionality of the acts complained of; but, on this ground, the rights of her whole body of citizens, or any portion of them, are no other, and no greater, than those of the humblest individuals in the community; but they cannot trammel up the consequences. Their political organization as a state, may furnish readier means of resistance and greater probabilities of success, but the consequences are the same. They cannot sanctify or legalize resistance, and the predicament in which the individual may stand if mistaken in his judgment, is that of a traitor to his country.

The view here taken of the origin of the government and the nature of the constitution, is confirmed by the solemn decisions of that great tribunal which has been created by that instrument, and which is the sole and proper one for the settlement of all controversies arising under it. The language of the supreme court, as delivered by Chief Justice Marshall, in the case of McCullough against the state of Maryland, is as follows: "In discussing this question, the counsel for the state of Maryland have deemed it of some importance in the construction of the constitution, to consider that instrument not as emanating from the people, but as the act of sovereign and independent states. The powers of the general government, it has been said, are delegated by the states who alone are truly sovereign; and must be exercised in subordination to the states, who alone possess supreme dominion. It would be difficult to sustain this proposition. The convention which framed the constitution was indeed elected by the state legislatures. But the instrument when it came from their hands, was a mere proposal, without obligations or pretentions to it. It was reported to the then existing Congress of the United States with a request, that it might 'be submitted to a convention of delegates chosen in each state, by the people thereof, under the recommendation of its legislature for their assent and ratification.' This mode of proceeding was adopted; and by the convention, by Congress, and by the state legislatures, the instrument was submitted to the people. They acted upon it in the only manner in which they can act safely, effectually, and wisely on such a subject, by assembling in convention. It is true they assembled in their several states—and where else should they have assembled? No political dreamer was ever wild enough to think of breaking down the lines which separate the states, and of compounding the American people into one common mass. Of consequence when they act, they act in their states. But the measures they adopt do not on that account cease to be the measures of the people themselves, or become the measures of the state governments. From these conventions the constitution derives its whole authority. The government proceeds directly from the people, is ordained and established in the name of the people; and is declared to be ordained in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility and secure the blessings of liberty to themselves and to their posterity.—Wheaton Rep. vol. 4, p. 403.

The same principles are recognized as being true in the late admirable proclamation of the President of the United States.

As to the doctrine of Nullification, your committee would scarcely have considered it worth the trouble of discussion, but for the grave sanction that has thus been given to it by the convention of South Carolina. They would have treated it as one of those conceits which might have formed the subject of debate in a Moot Court of a law school, but would never have conceived it possible that it could enter into the business realities of life.

Under the view which has been taken of the subject, it is scarcely necessary to enquire into the grounds of complaint, since they are not deemed strong enough even on the part of the convention to warrant a revolutionary measure, or in other words, rebellion; and the particular subject of attention under the communication is the attitude assumed by the state on the ground of her sovereign power.

But your committee cannot forbear from expressing the opinion that their views of political economy are as erroneous as their constitutional principles. They conceive that it would be no difficult matter to show that the distress of South Carolina may be imputed to very different causes than those assigned, and might be traced with much more semblance of reason, among other causes, to the increased production of their principal staple, both here and in other parts of the world; but your committee refrain from touching further on this subject. They cannot perceive that the people of South Carolina have any constitutional cause of complaint. If there is distress among them it is a matter in which we deeply sympathize. But if in the due administration of the General Government, any measure has borne hardly upon them, we know of but one remedy under the constitution and the laws, and that is in the exercise of the elective franchise.

Your committee abstain from the expression of any hopes or wishes on the subject, they lament the delusion under which they believe a portion of the people of that state labour. But they are free to say, that as the people of this state were the first to adopt the present government, they will be the last to abandon it; and that whenever and wherever the exigency may arise they will be found on the side of the Constitution and the Country.

Your committee therefore report the following

RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS a Convention of the people of the State of South Carolina has undertaken by an Ordinance passed in November last, to declare, certain acts of Congress for imposing duties and imposts on the importation of foreign commodities, null and void and not binding on the States, its officers and citizens; and has prohibited the enforcement of those laws within the limits of that State, and has also prohibited any appeal from the decisions of the State Courts, wherein the authority of the ordinance shall be drawn in question, to the United States’ Courts: And whereas, this measure has been communicated by order of the Convention to the governor of this State, for the purpose of being laid before the Legislature, and it is expedient that the sense of the people of this State should be expressed in relation thereto—

Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Delaware in General Assembly met, That the Constitution of the United States is not a treaty or compact between sovereign States, but a form of government emanating from, and established by, the authority of the people of the United States of America.

Resolved, That the Government of the United States, although one of limited powers, is Supreme within its sphere, and that the people of the United States owe to it an allegiance which cannot be withdrawn, either by individuals or masses of individuals, without its consent.

Resolved, That the Supreme Court of the United States is the only and proper tribunal for the settlement, in the last resort, of controversies in relation to the Constitution and the laws of Congress.

Resolved, That if in the regular action of the Government, mischief of any kind be produced, the proper remedy is to be found in the elective franchise, and the responsibility of its officers.

Resolved, That in cases of gross and intolerable oppression, which in a government like that of the United States, can be little else than a hypothesis, the natural right of self defence remains;
but which must in the nature of things, be an appeal to arms, and subject to all the consequences of resistance to the constituted authorities. In such a case the measure is revolutionary, and the result remains in the hands of the Almighty.

Resolved, That the Convention of South Carolina can have no other or greater right to annul or resist the laws of Congress, than any assemblage of an equal number of individuals in any part of the United States; nor can any assemblage, however large, have any other or greater right, for such a purpose, than belongs to each individual citizen, considered as a constitutional measure.

Resolved, That it is a subject of regret, that such a delusion should exist among any portion of the citizens of that state, towards whom the people of this state, entertain the kindest feelings, with whom they stood side by side in the war of the revolution, and in whose defence their blood was freely spilt. But if the measure which has been adopted is intended as the precursor of resistance to the government, the people of Delaware will not falter in their allegiance, but will be found now as then, true to their country and its government.

Resolved, That we cordially respond to the sentiments on this subject contained in the able proclamation of the President of the United States, and shall be at all times prepared to support the Government in the exercise of its constitutional rights, and in the discharge of its constitutional duties.

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of these Resolutions and the accompanying Report of the committee to the President of the United States, to each of our Senators and our Representatives in Congress, and to the Governors of the respective States and Territories of the United States of America.

Passed at Dover, January 16th, 1833.

WHEREAS, certain Resolutions, passed in December last, by both branches of the Legislature of South Carolina, declaring "that it is expedient that a Convention of the States be called as early as practicable, to consider and determine such questions of disputed power, as have arisen between the States of this Confederacy and the General Government"—have been transmitted by the Executive of that State to the Governor of this, and by him laid before the General Assembly for an expression of its sentiments.—Therefore,

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the state of Delaware, in General Assembly met, that the Constitution of the United States of America, which is a form of government established by the people of the United States of America, has expressly provided a tribunal in the Supreme Court of the United States, for the settlement of all controversies between the United States and the respective States, and of all controversies arising under that instrument itself.

Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States of America, does not recognize any such tribunal or political assemblage as a Convention of the States; but has expressly provided for modes of amendment, if amendment be necessary, in the fifth Article— as follows: "The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution: or on the application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid, to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress." Any other mode must therefore be repugnant to its provisions.

Resolved, That such a Convention to propose amendments, when called by Congress, must be, in the nature of things, a Convention of the people from whom the Constitution derived its authority, and by whom alone it can be altered, and not a Convention of the States.

Resolved, That no such political assemblage as a Convention of the States, could take place as a constitutional organ of government; and that, if assembled, it could have no such power as that set forth by the Resolutions of South Carolina, "to consider and determine such questions of disputed power as have arisen between the States of this Confederacy and the General Government."

Resolved, That it is not expedient for Congress to call "a Convention for proposing amendments" at this time. But that if any amendments be necessary, it comports with the views of the General Assembly of this State, that they should be proposed in the other mode provided by the Constitution— "by two thirds of both Houses of Congress."

Resolved, That the governor be requested to transmit copies of these resolutions, to the Governors of the several states, with a request that they may be laid before the Legislatures of the respective States; and also to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, to be by them laid before Congress for consideration.

Preamble and Resolutions on the subject of the South Carolina Ordinance.

WHEREAS, His Excellency the Governor, has transmitted to this General Assembly, the Ordinance of the late Convention of the people of South Carolina, together with the proceeding of that body, whose object appears to be, a resistance to the collection of duties, imposts, &c. upon foreign commodities, imported into that State, by nullifying the acts of Congress, providing for the levying and collecting such duties.—And this General Assembly cannot but view, with the deepest regret the avowed determination of a majority of the citizens of the State of South Carolina, to resist the operation of the laws of the General Government, in the manner pointed out by the Ordinance adopted by their late convention; and we have no doubt that such a course, if persisted in, must inevitably lead to consequences the most disastrous, and ruinous to the peace, prosperity and happiness of our common country.

Being connected, as we are, with our brethren of South Carolina by the strongest ties of consanguinity, and endeared by the mutual reciprocity of friendly intercourse and national attachment, and being sensible of the importance of our connection as States belonging to the same Federal Union; we cannot but deplore every effort or measure which is calculated, in the remotest degree to operate to the severance of any of those ties, or render doubtful the permanent existence of our Confederacy. And entertaining as we do the most implicit confidence in the wisdom, justice and integrity of the General Government, we are well persuaded that no partial evil would be permitted to exist in any particular section of the Union, should it not be apparent that such evil was fully overbalanced by a general benefit afforded, by the same policy out of which that evil was found to spring up. Such evils if such exist, we should endeavor to remedy in a spirit of moderation and good faith; to the end that the unparalleled prosperity of the whole Union, unequalled as it is, in the history of civilized man, may not intercepted, or paralyzed in any of its parts.

Believing that the prosperity and independence of this Republic mainly depend upon the general peace and harmony which ought to exist among the several states, and that all should ever keep in view the adopted maxim “united we stand, divided we fall;” we feel it a duty, therefore, as American citizens to cling with pertinacity to the Constitution of the United States, and to the preservation of the Union of the States. We cannot, therefore, view with indifference, much less can we lend our aid to any measure which is calculated to disturb the integrity of that Union.
Resolved, therefore, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, that we view with the deepest regret the unhappy movements, and apparent determination of the late Convention of the people of South Carolina, to nullify the laws of the General Government, made in conformity to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved, that the Federal Union exists in a solemn compact entered into by the voluntary consent of the people of the United States, and of each and every State, and that therefore no State can claim the right to secede from, or violate that compact, and however grievous may be the supposed or real burthens of a State, the only legitimate remedy is in the wise and faithful exercise of the elective franchise, and the solemn responsibility of the public agents.

Resolved, that the doctrine, that a State has the power to nullify a law of the General Government, is revolutionary in its character, and is in its nature calculated to overthrow the great Temple of American Liberty:—Such a course cannot absolve that allegiance which the people of this Union, owe to the supremacy of the laws.

Resolved, that in levying and collecting duties, imposts and excises, whilst the general good should be the primary object; a special regard ought to be had to the end, that the interest and prosperity of every section of the country should be equally consulted and its burthens proportionably distributed.

Resolved, that the first object of the American people, should be, to cherish the most ardent attachment to the Constitution and Laws of this Union; and as a paramount object of a free people, we should use every honorable means to preserve the honor and integrity of the Union.

Resolved, that the Governor be requested to transmit copies of [the] foregoing preamble and resolutions to the President of the United States, and to the Executives of the several states.

Resolution in relation to a call of a Convention to amend the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That in the opinion of this General Assembly it is inexpedient at the present time to apply to the Congress of the United States, for a call of a Convention of the people to amend the Constitution of the United States, or to call a Convention of the States to consider and define questions of disputed powers which may have arisen between any State of this Confederacy and the General Government.

Resolved further, That his excellency, the Governor, be, and he is hereby requested to transmit copies of the foregoing resolution to each of the Executives of the several States of this Union for the consideration of the Legislatures thereof.

Resolution relating to the President's Proclamation and Message.

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That this Legislature do cordially approve of the exposition of the principles of the Constitution of the United States, touching the pernicious doctrines of nullification and secession set forth in the proclamation of the President of the United States, of the tenth of December last, and in his late message to Congress, and that this Legislature do also feel the strongest assurance that the principles contained in that exposition will be firmly sustained by the people of Ohio.

Resolved, That the Governor be requested to forward a copy of the foregoing resolution to the President of the United States, to the Executive of each of the United States, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Sir:

I have the honor to transmit to you the annexed Resolutions and recommendations, with the request that your excellency will submit them to the Legislature of Kentucky.

With high consideration,

I have the honor to be your ob't. serv't.

JOHN GAYLE.

REPORT of the select committee of the House of Representatives, to whom was referred so much of the message of the Governor, as relates to the Tariff, to the principle of protection, and to the doctrine of Nullification.

The select committee to whom was referred so much of the message of the Governor, as relates to the tariff, to the principle of protection, and to the doctrine of nullification, have had the same under consideration, and have instructed me to report a preamble and resolutions, which they respectfully submit to the house for its adoption.

Your committee, deeply impressed with the present alarming crisis in our history, have given to the subject that profound consideration, which its paramount importance so justly demands.

So much has been said and written on the subjects submitted to them, that they may be said to be exhausted, and they will therefore submit a very few remarks prefatory to the resolutions, which they recommend to the adoption of the house.

In a country of such vast extent as the United States, embracing such a variety of soil, climate and products, and inhabited by a people, whose pursuits are as various as the climate under which they live; any attempt on the part of the government to force manufactures into existence, by governmental bounties, must of necessity operate unequally, and therefore be unjust.

If it be a truth, not now to be questioned, that no government can justly take from one portion of its citizens a part of their property, to benefit another, it is more especially unjust in a country like ours, composed of different states, who are united in one common bond, only for the purpose of providing for the common defense, of promoting the general welfare and securing the blessings of liberty to themselves and posterity. For these purposes this union was formed, and it cannot be supposed, that those who consented to it, intended by implication and construction to confer on the general government powers destructive to their happiness and best interests. Laws having their operation, and professing to derive their authority from the constitution under which we live, being op­posed to the true interests of every section of the republic, and unjust in their operation on the Southern States, even if sustained by the letter of the constitution, are contrary to its spirit and at war with the general scope and tenor of that instrument.

It cannot be believed, that if the framers of the constitution had assigned the exercise of such a power, as the right to create and protect domestic manufactures, by a system of high duties, that it would have been left to inference or implication; its framers therefore could not have intended that such a power should be exercised. This reasoning is founded on, and these results drawn from, the instrument itself; but in addition thereto, contemporaneous history informs us that in the convention which framed the constitution it was proposed in various modes to give that power to Congress, and refused.

It is the exercise of this power, which a large majority of the South believe to be against the spirit of the constitution, and no inconsiderable number, contrary to its express letter, which has driven them to consider their government as foreign to their interests and alien to their feelings. Instead of looking up to it with pride and veneration, as the world's last hope, and as the favorite resort of freedom, no inconsiderable portion of the South have begun to estimate its value; and to contemplate even disunion itself, as an evil less formidable than submission to the exactions of the government.

And now at this fearful crisis when one of our co-states has assumed the alarming attitude of declaring an act of Congress void within her limits, and the note of preparation is sounded to sustain this attitude by force, what shall Alabama do? Our answer is, never despair of our country. We believe that there is a vital energy, a living principle inherent in our institutions, and a sense of justice residing in the bosoms of our fellow-citizens, which, when properly appealed to, must succeed. We concede that our northern brethren believe that they are acting within the pale of the constitution; but can it be believed that they will, by insisting on the obnoxious duties, peril the union of these states, and make shipwreck of the last hope of mankind? Can any pecuniary benefit compensate for results like these? If blood be shed in this unhallowed contest, a wound will be inflicted, which may never be healed, to confidence will succeed distrust, mutual recriminations, and mutual injuries, and the choicest blessings of Heaven, by the madness and folly of man, will be converted into the most deadly poison.

Deeply impressed with these views, we recommend the adoption of the following resolutions, which we are satisfied embody the opinions of our constituents, and in their name propose to our co-States a federal Convention.
Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Alabama, in General Assembly convened, That we consider the present tariff of duties, unequal, unjust, oppressive, and against the spirit, true intent and meaning of the Constitution; that if persevered in, its inevitable tendency will be to alienate the affections of the people of the Southern States from the general government.

And be it further resolved, That we do not consider the tariff of 1832, as fastening upon the country the principle of protection, but that we receive it as the harbinger of better times, as a pledge that Congress will, at no distant period, abandon the principle of protection altogether, and reduce the duties on imports to the actual wants of the government, levying those duties on such articles as will operate most equally on all sections of the Union.

And be it further resolved, That nullification, which some of our Southern brethren recommend as the constitutional remedy for the evils under which we labor, is unsound in theory and dangerous in practice, that as a remedy it is unconstitutional and essentially revolutionary, leading in its consequences to anarchy and civil discord, and finally to the dissolution of the Union.

And be it further resolved, That we earnestly entreat the people of this State, not to distrust the justice of the general government, and to rest satisfied, though long delayed, it will certainly be accorded to them. And above all things, to avoid those dangerous and unconstitutional remedies proposed for their imitation and adoption, no matter how specious their exterior, which may lead to bloodshed and disunion, and will certainly end in anarchy and civil discord. And at the same time, we would most solemnly adjure the Congress of the United States, in the name of our common country, to abandon the exercise of those dubious and constructive powers, claimed under the constitution, the assertion of which has produced jealousy, excitement and dissatisfaction to the government, and if persevered in, will, in all human probability, dissolve this union. By this means; and by this alone, can we be prevented from fulfilling our high destinies, and our onward march to greatness be arrested.

And be it further resolved, That as we have now for the first time in the history of our country, presented to us the appalling spectacle of one of the States of the Union arraying herself against the general government, and declaring sundry acts of Congress void and of no effect within her limits; presenting to Congress the alternative of repealing the obnoxious laws, or permitting her secession from the Union, and preparing by an armed force to sustain the position she has assumed, and as we cannot silently look on and witness the failure of the high raised hopes and just expectations of those patriots who cemented our liberty with their blood: Therefore, as a last resort, we recommend to our co-States the calling of a Federal Convention, to meet in the city of Washington, on the 1st of March, 1834, or at such other time and place as may be agreed on, which shall be authorised to devise and recommend such plan, which will satisfy the discontents of the South, either by an explicit denial of the right of Congress to protect domestic industry by duties on imports laid for protection, or by defining and restricting the power aforesaid, within certain prescribed limits, and making such other amendments and alterations in the constitution, as time and experience have discovered to be necessary.
THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Resolved, That the Governor be desired to transmit a copy of the foregoing resolutions to the President of the United States, and to the Executive of each of the States, with a request that the same may be communicated to the Legislature thereof.

Resolved further, That the Governor furnish a copy of said resolutions to each of the Senators and Representatives of this State, in the Congress of the United States. Approved, Jan. 12, 1833.

Recommendations of the General Assembly of the State of Alabama to the President of the United States, to the State of South Carolina, and to the different States.

The General Assembly of the State of Alabama have received and considered with absorbing interest, the late Ordinance of South Carolina, with the address of the co-States accompanying the same, together with the Proclamation of the President of the United States, consequent thereon. The attitude assumed by the State of South Carolina and the Government of the United States through its Chief Magistrate, forebodes a crisis which threatens the peace of society and the harmony of the Union, and which should be deplored by every one who loves his country and liberty. The existence of our constitution and the integrity of the union, require the instant exertion of that patriotism, forbearance and virtue, which have hitherto characterised the history of our government. Omitting, on this occasion, to enter into the causes which have produced the present affliction posture between State and Federal Government; this General Assembly now affectionately and solemnly appeals to the Congress of the United States, and to the State of South Carolina, for that forbearance, patriotism and virtue, which alone can restore, by mutual sacrifice of opinion, harmony, peace and prosperity to our common country. The only bonds of our union, and the sole preservatives of rational and constitutional liberty, are a strict adherence on the part of the constituted authorities, to the principles of our government—the affection of the people for that government, and a firm persuasion of the equality and justice of the administration, aided by a spirit of forbearance on the part of those States who may depend upon the opinion of the majority.
To this end the General Assembly of Alabama recommend to the Congress of the United States, a speedy modification of the tariff laws, in such manner as to equalise their burdens, and cause only so much revenue to be collected as will be necessary to pay the expenses of the Government in its constitutional and economical administration. This Assembly further recommends to the Congress of the United States, as she had already done to her co-States, the call of a Federal convention, to propose such amendments to our Federal Constitution as may seem necessary and proper, to restrain the Congress of the United States from exerting the taxing power, for the substantive protection of domestic manufactures. This Assembly further earnestly recommends to the State of South Carolina, to suspend the operation of her late ordinance, that the unfortunate collision of powers between the State and the government of the United States, may be amicably adjusted in such manner as not to impair the rights and powers granted to the general government, or retained and reserved to the States, or the people by the Constitution. This General Assembly further urgently recommends to the State of South Carolina, to abstain from the use of military power, in enforcing her Ordinance, or resisting the execution of the revenue laws of the United States. And this General Assembly, with equal earnestness, recommends to the government of the United States, to exercise moderation, and to employ only such means as are peaceful and usual to execute the laws of the Union. The general Assembly of this State further recommends to her co-States, to concur with this State in the foregoing recommendations.

Resolved, That the Executive of this State be requested to transmit copies of the foregoing recommendations, to the Executive authorities of each of the United States, and to the President of the United States, and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with instructions to lay the same before the Congress of the United States. Approved, January 12, 1833.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, MISSISSIPPI,
Jackson, February 6, 1833.

Sir,

The resolutions which I have the honor herewith to enclose, are forwarded in compliance with a requisition made on me by the Legislature of this State, with a request that your Excellency will lay them before the Legislature of the State over which you preside.

I have the honor to be, with much respect,
Your Excellency’s obt. serv’t.

A. M. SCOTT.

To his Excellency, the Governor of the State of Kentucky.

The select committee to which was referred “so much of the Governor’s Message as relates to the Resolutions from the States of Louisiana, Maine, New-Hampshire, and Pennsylvania, with the accompanying documents,” beg leave to report: That they have had them under consideration, and would recommend, in regard to the resolution first named, the adoption of the following Resolutions.

In relation to the Resolutions from the States of Maine, New­ Hampshire, and Pennsylvania, and that portion of the Message which points to their consideration, your committee would express the belief that the sentiments of a majority of the people of this State, in regard to the subjects to which they relate, are in accordance with these expressed by the General Assembly in the year 1829, declaring the tariff law of 1828, so far as it contemplated a system of protection, carried beyond the manufacture of such articles as are necessary to the national defence, to be “contrary to the spirit of the Constitution of the United States, impolitic and oppressive in its operation on the Southern States, and should be resisted by all constitutional means;” But fearful lest false inferences should be drawn from this expression of public opinion—ferences, calculated to induce a belief that this State is prepared to advocate and uphold the disorganizing doctrines, recently promulgated in South Carolina, your committee deem it their duty to speak plainly, and to undeceive their sister States in this respect—We are opposed to nullification. We regard it as a heresy, fatal to the existence of the Union. “It is resistance to law by force—it is disunion by force—it is civil war.” Your committee are constrained to express the opinion, that the State of South Carolina has aced with a reckless precipitancy, (originating, we would willingly believe, in delusion,) well calculated to detract from her former high character for wisdom in council, purity of patriotism, and a solicitous regard for the preservation of those fundamental principles, on which alone rest the peace, the prosperity and permanency of the Union. Your committee deeply deplore the alarming crisis in our national affairs: they regret it the more as proceeding from the unwarrantable attitude assumed by a sister of the South, whose best interests are identified with our own. In the spirit of brothren of the same family, we would invoke them to pause—to harken attentively to the paternal, yet ominous, warning of the Executive of the Union. We would conjure them to await patiently the gradual progress of public opinion; and to rely with patriotic confidence on the ultimate decision of the talented statesmen and pure patriots in the Congress of the United States. But they would also loudly proclaim, that this State owes a duty to the Union, above all minor considerations. That she prizes that Union less than liberty alone. That we heartily accord in the general political sentiments of the President of the United States, as expressed in his recent proclamation; and that we stand firmly resolved, at whatever sacrifice of feeling, in all events, and at every hazard, to sustain him in enforcing the paramount laws of the land, and preserving the integrity of the Union—that Union, whose value we will never stop to calculate—holding it, as our fathers held it, precious above all price. Your committee would therefore recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Be it resolved, by the Legislature of the State of Mississippi, That in the language of the father of his country, we will "indignantly frown upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the ties which link together its various parts."

2. Resolved, That the doctrine of Nullification is contrary to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and in direct conflict with the welfare, safety and independence of every State in the Union; and to no one of them would its consequences be more deeply disastrous, more ruinous, than to the State of Mississippi—that State in which are concentrated our dearest interest—around which cling our most tender ties—the fair land of our nativity or adoption—the haven of our hopes, the home of our hearts.

3. Resolved, That we will, with heart and hand, sustain the President of the United States, in the full exercise of his legitimate powers, to restore peace and harmony to our distracted country, and to maintain, unsullied and unimpaired, the honor, the independence and integrity of the Union.

4. Resolved, That the Governor of the State be, and he is hereby required to transmit a copy of the resolutions, with the preamble, to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, also to the Governors of the different States, with a request that the same may be laid before their respective Legislatures.

DAVID PEMBLE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

CHARLES LYNCH,
President of the Senate.

The undersigned beg leave to report, that in accordance to the act of the legislature of Kentucky, entitled "An act to remove the obstructions to the navigation at the falls of Green river, and other purposes;" and passed—183—Dillis Dyer, Simpson Stout, Stephen Ashby, Henry Shanks, and James R. Skiles, met on the first Monday in May, at the town of Hartford, and according to the requisitions of said act, gave the necessary security, and took the oath qualifying them as commissioners, and organized their board, by electing James R. Skiles, president, and Dillis Dyer, secretary.

Notwithstanding the lateness of the season, at which this first meeting was held, and the very considerable time which the board knew must be consumed in providing competent engineers, they felt a strong hope, that by vigorous and prompt action, they might be able to carry forward the views of the legislature immediately, and make a beginning of this very desirable work, during the season directly ensuing.

With this view, the board, at the first meeting appointed a committee consisting of Messrs. Dyer and Stout, whose duty it should be to take the earliest measures of ascertaining where Engineers might be procured, with the power to call a meeting of the board at Morgantown, as soon as satisfactory intelligence should be obtained.

This committee addressed Gen. A. Lacock, of Pennsylvania, for information on this subject, and upon receiving his answer, called a meeting of the board.

At this meeting the board, without dissent, determined to make propositions to Gen. Lacock, and to avail themselves of his acknowledged skill, acquired by long and useful service on the public works of western Pennsylvania.

They accordingly requested his personal services, and authorised him to employ for them a practical engineer, who... should meet us at the falls of Vienna, and commence the survey on the 1st of June.

To this proposition he acceded, except as to the time, urging the re-appearance of the Cholera as a reason for postponing the meeting until the first of October. That dreadful scourge, then threatening to bring its ravages to our own homes, induced the commissioners, though reluctantly, to acquiesce in this arrangement.

On the first of October, Gen. Lacock, accompanied by Mr. M.
R. Stealy, of the Pennsylvania Canal, met the Commissioners at the Vienna falls. This fall was first surveyed, and the estimates for the works necessary to improve them falling within the sum designated in the proviso of the 3d section of the act, the Board accordingly proceeded to the general survey of all the falls.

The able and satisfactory report of the Engineers, which has met the entire approbation of this Board, and which we doubt not will be gratifying to every member of the legislature, is hereto appended and forms a part of this report.

From the estimates appended to their report, it will be seen that the comparatively small sum of $69,000 will convert 107 miles of Green river into a slack water canal, for vessels of 200 tons burthen, and interrupted throughout this distance by two locks only, requiring from 20 to 25 minutes for the passage of each. It may be fairly inferred from the same estimates, that the addition of
this navigation to the mouth of Barren river, say 150 miles from the Ohio river.

It will likewise be seen that, although the fall of Vienna can be improved at an expense within the $25,000, the addition of $9,000 to that sum, will supercede the necessity of constructing another work at Hogg’s falls, only 16 miles above, at a cost of from $20 to

By the union of these two works much expense will be saved, and the too frequent occurrence of locks, so detrimental to Steam Boat navigation, be avoided. We beg leave, earnestly, to press this subject upon the attention of the legislature, not doubting that the result will be an immediate appropriation for the purpose of erecting these two works at Vienna.

In order to provide for this contingency, this board determined that in letting the contract for the lock and dam at Vienna, they would stipulate that the plan should be enlarged so as to embrace this object, provided the legislature should make the additional appropriation. But determined also, until it should be thus acted upon, to confine themselves to what they considered to be the strict letter of the law, and positive contract for the work at the lowest estimate, only. The board, before its adjournment, advertised the letting of the lock and dam at Vienna, to take place on the 3rd Monday in December, proximo, this being the latest period at which they could rely on the continuance of low water, which they considered of great importance, as at such a stage of water many facilities would strikingly be presented to the contractors which might be hid by a rise of water.

They also requested Gen. Lacock to give them such information, as might come within his knowledge, touching the employment of a suitable engineer for the direction of the work. From information obligingly furnished by him to this board, we have no doubt of being able to procure the services of a gentleman, every way competent to the task, for $1000 per annum.

From the confluence of Green river up to Spott’s, or the first fall, is eight and five eighths miles, this is the finest winter harbor, for boats on the Ohio river. The channel is as broad as the river, and the least depth of water five feet, according to the map furnished by the war department, which as far as it has been tested by re-survey has been found to be very accurate.

Spott’s fall varies with the rise and fall of the water in the Ohio river, probably never exceeding two feet. A large portion of the year, embracing all that season now used for shipping produce from Green river, it is flooded entirely, presenting no obstacle to boating. Above this two and a half miles, is Lick creek ripple, three inches fall, and immediately between this and Winnegan’s fall, is a long and occasionally interrupted shoal of large rocks.—Six and one eighth miles above Lick creek is Winnegan’s fall, of six and a half feet nearly.

This fall is composed of different strata of the finest building stone, from 8 to 13 inches in thickness, and of any useful length and breadth, which may be taken to Spott’s fall at a very small expense by water.

Winnegan’s fall, although often a hindrance to the passage of the river, is, for the most part, made passable by the back water of the Ohio during the boating season.

Above this fall is an uninterrupted sheet of water from 140 to 150 yards wide, reaching to the Vienna fall, a distance of 49½ miles, and presenting no let or hindrance to navigation, except the numerous land and timber slips from the banks. The average depth of water by the map above referred to, is 35 feet.

Vienna fall is eight feet and four tenths, and consists of an inclined plain, almost regular, 750 yards long, and is composed of shelly stone, between freestone and slate. This material may be prised up in great quantity upon the falls, and will do well for filling in the cribs of the dam, though not for masonry. A great abundance of heavy freestone is found, however, within 10 miles by water and 3 or 4 by land.

Upon the the smooth and beautiful foundation, which rises six feet in either bank, the board determined to commence the first improvement, Vienna presenting nine times out of ten the first obstacle to the navigation of Green river.

No question arose as to the propriety or necessity of building a dam and lock here. The distribution of fall below forbidding the idea of overcoming these great rapids by any work which could be prudently erected either at Winnegan's or Spott's fall. It was also found, by surveying the river above, that it was necessary to raise a column of water 6 feet deep on the head of this fall, instead of excavating a channel, in order to give sufficient depth of water on Houston's and Rough creek bars, the first only three and five eighths miles, and the latter eight and one eighth miles above Vienna. Add to this the fact before mentioned, that the superadded expense of $9,000, without endangering the works at Vienna, and greatly improving the value of the water power there, would best improve Hogg's fall, and save 12 to $15,000. Nun's ripple, also 20 miles above Hogg's fall, will, by this plan of improvement, be deepened between 3 and 4 feet, and as there is now at low stage about two feet of water there, it is highly probable that the river would be improved to the mouth of Muddy river by the dam at Vienna.

This board cannot, without swelling this report to an unreasonable length, say all that might be said in relation to this very interesting improvement. But they beg leave respectfully to call the attention of the legislature to the subject, by the following summary of views, which the most accurate investigation of the subject, and the most ardent desire for the substantial and permanent improvement of this uncommon river, have deeply impressed upon the convictions of this board.

By carrying into execution the plans now laid before you, for the improvement of this important channel of commerce, free access will be had at all seasons of the year, for boats drawing 5 feet water, to the first dam of 13 feet high; over this they will pass a stream affording about 30,000 cubic feet of water per minute. This water power so near the Ohio river, and in the midst of a fertile territory, must become of immense value, not only for the purposes of manufacturing grain and converting timber into lumber, but ultimately for many other important manufactures. It will probably be one of the finest sites for ship building on the western waters. The oaks on Green river, not being surpassed in quantity or quality by those of any other section in the United States.

The site at Spott's fall, it will be seen by reference to the map, seems to have been prepared by nature for the erection of the contemplated works. A natural canal passes round the southern end of the fall; across this, above and below the site of the lock, coffer dams may be built at an expense comparatively trivial, and when water is pumped out of the enclosed section, a dry foundation, upon a solid rock, requiring but little if any excavation, will be presented for the only lock on this river, which must be commenced under the level of the surface of the water. After the lock is built, the island may then be cut through and the dam connected with the lock.

By this dam it is intended to back the water a sufficient depth into the lock at Vienna falls, which will be previously built. As the water can, at any time suitable for the construction of such works, be drawn off through the lock at Vienna, each of the succeeding works above may be built on dry foundations, free from the expense and risk of coffer dams and the constant expense of bailing.

Four of these dams will occur on the proposed plan below the mouth of Barren; the first has been noticed, and the second at Vienna 57 miles above, next presents itself to our notice. The water power here is almost beyond any demand; the volume of water measured, at Houston's ripple above this, was 28,581 cubic feet per minute. Suffice it to say that machinery to an immense extent might be here run with but little interruption during the whole year.

This dam will be 12 feet high and it is believed from the best information that it will make Rough creek perpetually navigable to the town of Hartford.

The third dam and lock will be built either at the mouth of Muddy river, or at Nun's ripple three miles below, and will be from 35 to 40 miles above Vienna. Materials of the best kind for the work are near at hand, particularly free stone. Solid rock bottoms, and on one side rock banks, at both sites. This dam will back the water up Muddy river probably 15 miles, and overcome more than half the lift necessary to make a canal or slack water navigation to the town of Russellville.

The fourth dam will be located at, or just below the mouth of Barren river, and must affect both of those streams to the distance of 25 miles up Green river and 15 up Barren. The latter stream requiring an expenditure of not more than $30,000 to improve it to the town of Bowling-green.

The system of slack water navigation justly deserves the preference in the improvement of all streams, where the fall or other natural causes do not prevent its adoption.

In this stream, its decided superiority over every other plan is most obvious. At every point of location, the dams and locks will stand, where the breadth of the river is from 100 to 150 yards greater than its usual channel. The volume of water will consequently never be compressed within narrow and dangerous limits; and in every instance the lock can, with perfect safety, occupy a part of the bed of the stream, without excavation for either dams, locks, or abutments, except merely to level foundations.

The excellent bottoms and banks of this river admit the construction of dams capable of resisting any possible pressure. Its very moderate fall and consequent gentleness of current, increase the safety of the works.

But above all it requires but 3 locks and dams for steam boat navigation of 150 miles through a country possessing immense resources, which will be immediately developed by this improvement; possessing thousands of acres of land, which in its present insulated situation, can be bought for from 25 cents to $2 per acre, the best of which is capable of yielding the hand of industry as rich a reward as any soil in the state. While the poor and the rich are covered with forests of the finest timber, which seems inexhaustible.

Except at the locks there will be no detention, and the lowest tides will be the best for navigation, and boats may run up or down with the speed and safety afforded in the Ohio.

The water will be considerably increased in breadth, and innumerable snags in the upper section of the river, and many dangerous rocks and fish dams will be so far sunk below the surface as to be forever out of the way of boats.

It is also certain that between 60 and 80 miles of Pond river, Panther creek, Rough creek and Muddy river, will be made perpetually navigable for Keels or Canal boats.

We will now institute a comparison between the expense of of this improvement, according to the estimates of Messrs. Lacock and Stealy, (in which we have the utmost confidence,) and the cost of other artificial or improved natural channels of commerce and intercourse, in other parts of the Union.

1st. The great Erie canal, for tow boats of --- tons burthen; its length 363 miles, total cost, $10,000,000 00.

2d. Oswego canal, 38 miles long, half canal, the other half slack water navigation, 14 locks; total cost, 525,115 00.

3rd. Cayuga and Seneca canal, 20 miles long 11 locks of wood; total cost, 214,000 00.

4th. Lackawaxen canal, Pennsylvania, width at surface 32 feet, bottom 20 feet, depth 4 feet, united with the Delaware and Hudson canal, and 17 miles of Lackawaxen river, is 117 miles of navigation.

5th. Conastoga navigation, 18 miles long, all slack water, locks 100 feet by 22.

6th. Chesapeake and Delaware canal, 13 and five eighths miles long, locks 100 feet by 22; total cost, 2,200,000 00.
6th. Baltimore and Ohio rail road, average cost of a single track $15,500, per mile, of double track, $27,128 00, breadth of tract 4 feet 9¾ inches, 27,128 00

7th. Baltimore and Susquehanna rail road, 7 miles completed at an expense of $13,350 00 per mile, 13,350 00

7th. Maysville and Lexington Turnpike, average cost per mile $5,000 00, road way 60 feet wide, $5000 00

8th. Green river slack water navigation, from 125 to 150 yards broad, 150 miles long, 3 locks and dams, total cost will be about $100,000—average cost of each work, 33,333—locks 140 feet by 36; 733 33

Before closing this report, the board will further represent, that they would have laid before your honorable body, specifically the expense of improving Barren river to Bowling green, and Green river to Munfordsville, if data to form the estimates upon had been in their possession. But the survey of the United States' Engineers only extended up Green river to the mouth of Barren river, and up Barren river 9 miles above its mouth.

The war department, some time past, forwarded a map of this survey to the President of this board. This map, if the field notes could be procured, would, we have no doubt, put the board in possession of the most accurate knowledge of the river, to the point on Barren river, where the survey was discontinued.

In submitting the above views, they have already travelled without the purview of the law, but they have done it, believing that the legislature would be put in possession of facts which they might not otherwise acquire, and which we hope will induce them at once to lay a large portion of this improvement, if not all, under contract during the next season. By this course the competition would be much greater among Contractors, the contracts taken at lower rates, and the work not only be made unprecedentedly useful, but be made to yield a revenue, beside putting the state into possession of a water power at the various dams of great and increasing value.

On the third Monday in December last, and after the above part of their report was made out, the board, in pursuance of notices inserted in Louisville, Cincinnati, Beaver and Pittsburg papers, met at the Vienna falls, to let out the lock and dam at that place.

They had the pleasure of finding bidders enough upon the ground to produce competition; seven gentlemen being there from Pennsylvania, Virginia and Kentucky, prepared to make proposals for the work.

From some of these, information was derived which led the Commissioners to doubt the quality of the rock upon which we had relied previously for the masonry, and from further examination, immediately had, our doubts were greatly increased in relation to many heavy quarries in the immediate vicinity. The board determined to take bids for a wooden lock, as well as stone, not only for the purpose of having wider scope for future choice, but to produce more necessity on the part of the masons present to reduce the price of stone work to the most reasonable standard.

The bid of Mr. James Glenn, who has been engaged on the Frenchtown division of the Pennsylvania canal, was accepted, under the condition set forth in the contracts, copies of which are hereto annexed. This condition is, that a stone or wooden lock shall be built at the option of the Commissioners.

He engages by these contracts to build a dam and stone lock, with a view to improve Vienna falls alone, for about $30,000 00

For the same object, a dam and wooden lock will cost about 20,840 00

A dam and stone lock, as recommended by Messrs. Lacock and Stealy, for the improvement of both falls, Hogg's and Vienna, 42,000 00

To defray the expenses of surveying the falls, the board have drawn upon the Treasury for $660, about $30 of this remains in the hands of the treasurer of our board. For the manner in which this money has been disposed of, the board have in the hands of their clerk regular vouchers, and books in addition to these will be kept, from which the most satisfactory statements of the disbursements of the public money will be made out whenever the legislature shall think proper to call for them.

The board have engaged the services of Mr. William B. Foster, now principal assistant engineer on the Susquehanna canal, Pennsylvania. His salary will be $1000 per annum; he comes highly recommended from Gen. Lacock.

His business will be to examine and pass, or reject every material whether of stone, wood or iron, which is prepared for the work, and to superintend its construction throughout, upon scientific principles, and according to the most approved practice on the various public works with which he is intimately conversant.

He will purchase and bring out with him for the state, a leveling instrument, cost about $120; and this board respectfully represents to your consideration, the propriety of employing him at such intervals of leisure as may be presented from his duties at Vienna, (if any) in surveying that portion of Green river, not yet surveyed, and Barren river up to Bowlinggreen. Muddy river, Pond river and Rough creek, might also be surveyed to some distance above their mouths, and information be thereby obtained which this board believe to be of the deepest interest to the several sections of the country through which they pass.
We respectfully recommend to the legislature to provide, by law, for the condemning of banks, timber and quarries of rock, and for the sale of water power, which will be afforded at Vienna. If the field notes of the survey made by the United States' engineers, and the map and profile of the river could be procured from the war department, it would be very desirable; this would be promptly rendered, if, as we believe, the state of Kentucky defrayed the expense of said survey.

Although we greatly regret that the difficulty of getting hard stone near the falls has increased the price of masonry above the estimates of the Engineers, and will make a greater appropriation necessary than was expected, yet this board hesitates not to recommend to your honorable body to adopt the enlarged plan and the stone lock, and thus secure to this important improvement a degree of usefulness and durability, worthy of the age in which we live.

For the board,

JAMES R. SKILES, President.

The map of the falls and drawings of the works at Vienna, are submitted to the inspection of the Legislature.

To Gen. A. Lacock and M. R. Stealy, Esqrs.

GENTLEMEN—You having been appointed by an order of the Board, to make a survey and estimate of the principal falls of Green river with a view to the improvement of its navigation; to enable you to discharge the trust reposed in you, we furnish you with a copy of the law under which we derive our authority, which you will please consider as official instruction, and restraining your discretion in relation to the contemplated improvement.

Respectfully,

JAS. R. SKILES,
DILLIS DYER,
SIMPSON STOUT.

October 2, 1833.

To the Board of Commissioners for the improvement of the navigation of Green River.

GENTLEMEN:—The undersigned, on the 2d October, agreeable to instructions, commenced the survey and examination of the prinprincipal obstructions in Green river, namely: Hogg's falls, those at Vienna, and Winnegan's, with some intermediate ripples.

When at Winnegan's falls we, anxious to possess a perfect knowledge of the river with a view to its improvement, concluded to visit and level Spotts' fall 8 5–8 miles below, and the last on the stream.

Before, however, we proceed to give in detail our views of the best method of improving this beautiful stream, we hope it will not be thought amiss in us to express the surprise and gratification we felt when the unexpected discovery was made, that so much had already been done by the plastic hand of nature, in the formation of this region of country, and so little left for the efforts of human skill and industry to accomplish.

The country through which Green river passes in its serpentine course, from the junction of Big Barren river to the Ohio, a distance by the stream of 150 miles, appears to be based upon free stone rock, as far as it came under our notice, except at the mouth of Rough creek, where upon the margin of the stream lime stone appears in quantity. This substratum of rock has a general declination corresponding with the course of the river, but the surface of this inclined plain is broken by ridges or bars of the same rock, which throw themselves in a transverse or diagonal direction across the stream, and thus form natural dams or barriers to its current, leaving pools or basins between them of great depth, and many miles in length, in which, when the river is low, the water appears almost at rest.

Although a superficial observer might consider those obstructions to the river navigation a permanent evil, yet we entertain no doubt, that by the judicious application of a sum small in amount, when compared to the magnitude of the object to be attained, these falls may prove valuable auxiliaries to the permanent improvement of the stream as well as the most eligible sites for water power.

The important facts we have thus ventured to suggest or assume, will, we flatter ourselves, be confirmed by the result, should the experiment be fairly tested.

We shall next take into consideration the different plans that have been usually adopted for the improvement of similar streams.

I. By sluice navigation or deepening the natural channels, or cutting a new channel, so as to give a greater length to the inclined plain over which the water passes, and consequently increasing its depth as you retard its velocity.

This method, as a mean of improvement, will first present itself in a favorable light, to an observer who examines a single fall; and were there but one on Green river, such a work might give some promise of usefulness; but where, as in this case, there are a succession of falls, one above another, the adoption of this plan would be found worse than useless. To illustrate the fact, let us suppose a channel 100 feet wide and six feet the greatest depth cut through the bar at Vienna; it is easy to see that it would lower the surface of the pool above to nearly that extent, and transfer six feet of the fall at Vienna to Hogg’s falls above; and not only so, but this operation would reduce the depth of water on Houston’s ripple and the ripple at the mouth of Rough creek; so as to occasion these new created obstructions, a rock excavation of little less extent and equally expensive as that which had been encountered at Vienna; and when these new difficulties are overcome, and you arrive at Hogg’s falls, you there find, instead of the present fall of three and a half feet, you have added thereto six feet, the amount of the depression of the lower pool by deepening the channel at Vienna; and independent of these objections, which appear to us insuperable to a sluice navigation, the expense of these channels, if made sufficiently wide to admit the passage of steam-boats, would, in amount, far exceed what would be necessary to complete a perfect slack water navigation, upon the plan hereinafter recommended to the board.

It appears to us that the only plan by which the navigation can be improved by sluices on the rapids, is the miserable expedient of erecting wing dams, leading diagonally down the stream, so as to throw a gorge of water into a narrow channel. A miniature exhibition of such works may be seen at the numerous fish dams in our streams, and few there are, engaged in river navigation, who do not find these dams, at certain stages of the water, dangerous impediments, especially to down stream navigation; and in proportion to the height of those dams will the passage of boats be endangered, and the risk of the lives and property of those who navigate be increased. In fine, this mode of improvement has been extensively employed on the rivers in Pennsylvania, and subsequently abandoned as an useless expenditure of public money.

2. The second plan that presents itself for the improvement of Green river, is, by the erection of dams of a suitable height at the foot of the respective falls, and the excavation of a canal through the adjoining flats, and a guard lock at the entrance of the canal above, and an outlet or river lock into the pool below.

The objections to this mode of improvement, are first—increased expense incurred by the erection of so many dams, locks, &c.; secondly, the great loss of time to steam and other boats, consequent upon passing locks at such frequent and vexatious intervals.

3. The third mode, which we believe will obviate these objections, and which we beg leave earnestly and respectfully to recommend for your adoption, is slack water navigation; by which we have no doubt the improvements contemplated can be best effected, and of complete and permanent navigation afforded from the mouth as at Green river to Nun’s ripple, a distance of 107 miles, by the erect-tion of two dams and the same number of locks; and it gives us pleasure to state that stone, lime, and other suitable materials, of a good quality, may be had on the margin of the river, at a convenient distance, for the construction of the works.

The first dam should be about 13 feet high, and erected at the foot of Spott's falls, the lowest fall on the river, and within 8 5-8 miles of its mouth. This dam, when erected, will back the water a sufficient depth, not only over the rocky shoals at the mouth of Lick creek, but Winnegan's falls, and raise it several feet deep in the chamber of the lock at Vienna falls, where it is proposed to erect the next dam. This dam must be 12 feet high, with a lock of similar lift, and will back the water over Houston's and Rough creek ripples, and increase its depth about two feet on Nun's ripple, situated 107 miles above the mouth of Green river.

We would respectfully recommend to the board the construction of locks not less than 140 feet long and 36 feet wide, within the chambers. Locks of this size would admit the passage of steam boats of sufficient tonnage to accommodate the trade of the country, and transport to market the various productions of the extensive region embraced by the meanderings of this placid and beautiful river, and its many tributary streams, each presenting a natural canal, and calculated to be highly useful so soon as the drift wood and timber which embarrass their channels shall have been removed.

In the construction of locks, where stone of a suitable dimension and quality cannot be had, wooden locks have been substituted. Every part of such locks, however, as are not continually immersed in water, are subject to decay, and consequently want repairing, which will at such times interrupt the navigation, and vexatiously suspend the regular operations of commerce.

We would therefore recommend the erection of permanent stone locks, with a guard of the same material above the lift sufficiently high to protect the works against the floods of Green river, except as far as the rise of that stream may be influenced by the back water from the Ohio river, as in that case the works, should they be covered, would receive no injury from so gentle a current.

Crib dams, filled with stone found on the spot, are recommended. The sills of the dam must be fastened to the rock with a sufficient number of iron bolts, and where the timbers of the dam cross, and are let into each other, they must be secured by bolts or pins.

When the cribs of the dams are finished and filled with stone, they must be roofed over with plank or spars on both sides, and these planks or spars secured by large spikes or bolts to the timbers upon which they lie.

Wooden dams thus constructed upon the solid rock foundations of Green river, may be considered permanent, as sound timber
GREEN RIVER

Immersed in water is not subject to decay, and we apprehend that the quantity of water in Green river will be amply sufficient, not only to supply the locks and water works which may be erected, but to throw a column of sufficient depth over the dam to keep all the timbers in a state of constant saturation.

Upon the 8th inst. (October,) the water was represented to us to be at its lowest stage, and at that time was gauged by us at Houston's ripple, above the mouth of Pond River, and taking the average of several experiments, we found its discharge to be 28,581 cubic feet per minute.

The pool or reservoir of water, made by the dam at Spott's fall, will be about 58 miles in length, and its mean breadth about 400 feet, this will give the enormous amount of 123 millions of cubic feet of water in the first foot depth upon its surface. The same estimate will apply for the pool above the Vienna dam, being nearly of the same dimensions of the pool above Spott's falls.

From these data may be ascertained, with sufficient accuracy, the extent of water power which will be created, (and at points where it is already much needed,) by the erection of the proposed dam; suffice it to say, that the surplus water at the dams respectively, would, if sold by the State at a reasonable price, be, in our opinion, a complete indemnity for the expenses of their construction; and no doubt can exist that the improvement of the country, as it has done where similar works have been erected, will make this water power of immense and growing importance.

For a further and more detailed description of dams and locks, we refer the Board to the plans, specifications and estimates accompanying this report.

It is proper to remark that the undesigned, in the discharge of their duties, have had especial reference to the requisition of the law, furnished them by the board, and made part of their instructions. The leading object of the law appears to be the improvement of the navigation of Green river, by removing the obstructions presented by the Winnegan's, Vienna and Hogg's falls, which are considered the principal impediments.

By the erection of a dam and locks at Spott's fall, the obstruction at Winnegan's is completely removed, and not only so, but in like manner all other obstructions in the river from the mouth to the Vienna falls; and the same reasons will apply to the works proposed at Vienna, by which all obstructions in the river, of whatsoever kind, including Hogg's falls and a vast number of snags, will be overcome, from Vienna to Nun's ripple; and even that impediment, by an increased depth of water, will be much diminished.

And hence, it appears to us that the proposed plan of improvement, will be in strict accordance with the object and design of the Legislature, as expressed in the law of the last session.
That the sum of $20,000, appropriated by the first section of the act, was not considered adequate to the completion of the contemplated improvements is most obvious, from the first proviso to the second section. Inasmuch as this proviso gives the commissioners power to expend $25,000 upon the Vienna falls alone. And here it is proper to observe, that although our estimated expense of the works we recommended at Vienna, will exceed the expenditure of $25,000, which we believe is sufficient to overcome that single obstruction, the excess may be justly charged to Hogg's falls, the improvement of which will be greatly lessened by blending the expense, and erecting one great work to effect both objects. And this goes to fortify, were it necessary, what has already been advanced, that the plan of improvement recommended by us, will confine itself substantially and practically to the provisions of the law in question.

If, however, this view of the legal construction of the law should be questioned by the board, and a more limited and literal construction be adopted to meet the case, we have furnished them with an estimate of the expense of the works necessary to overcome the Vienna falls alone, without respect to the ripples and falls above, which it will be seen brings the expense within the $25,000, considered as a specific appropriation for that purpose.

But we cannot persuade ourselves that it was the design of the Legislature to prescribe the particular method by which the river might be improved, or the precise location of the locks and dams, nor is it fair to presume that the Legislature intended thus far to limit the discretion of the Board or their agents, and oblige them to construct works at each fall of the river, and thus, by multiplying the dams and locks, greatly increase the expenditure, and produce delays which always affect injuriously the operations of commerce.

The estimated expense of the improvement proposed has been predicated upon the price of labor, materials and supplies as they can be obtained in Western Pennsylvania, and if we have not been misinformed, they may all be had at as low a rate on Green river. If so, the necessary works at Spott's falls will cost, $35,311 17, and those at Vienna, $34,444 91; making the aggregate expenditure $69,756 08, to complete the navigation to Nun's ripple, 107 miles.

It is proper to observe that whether a dam be high or low, there will be an equal expenditure incurred, as it regards the works connected with it. If the dam be low the lock, guard, walls, gates, and the abutments of the dam, are required to be of sufficient height to protect the works from the floods of the river, and hence arises the necessity of limiting, as far as may be safe and practicable, the dams and locks to the least number possible; and from these facts it is clear that the expense of a dam at Vienna and another at Hogg's falls, with their necessary locks, will cost near $50,000, whereas an expenditure of about $9,000 in addition to the $25,000 at Vienna, will better remove both obstructions.

SPECIFICATION

Of a Lock for the Green river navigation.

The Chamber is to be 140 feet long and 36 feet wide in the clear; the extreme length of the walls, 191 feet.

The Lock pit is to be excavated 200 feet long and 45 feet wide, and to the depth of 5½ feet below the crest of the next lower dam on the river, or 5 feet below low water mark, for the outlet lock at Spotts' falls. At the recesses, the pit is to be excavated 18 inches lower, in order to sink the tops of the mitre sills to the above level. The rock which constitutes the foundation, is to be dressed off to an even, horizontal surface, upon which the masonry is to be commenced.

The walls are to be of the following dimensions and form, viz:

- From the upper side of the upper wing to upper recess, 10 feet,
- Length of upper recess, 25
- From upper hollow quoin to lower recess, 115
- Length of lower recess, 25
- From lower quoin to lower end of lock, 16

The wall, or side of the lock next the bank, is to have a wing at each end, extending at right angles to it, 20 feet back, and be built to the same height as the lock walls. The angles of intersection formed by the lock wall and wings, are to be rounded off to a quadrant, whose radius of curvature is to be 6 feet. The angles of the coping and recesses are to be rounded to a curve of 1½ radius.

Immediately below the upper hollow quoins, and above each of the recesses for the space of 6 feet, and from the lower hollow quoin to the foot of the lock, the top of the wall is to be 6 feet, and the remaining portion is to be 4 feet in thickness. The thickness of wall at bottom should be equal to its thickness at top, added to one fourth of its height, and be reduced by offsets or retreats on the back of the wall, made at heights of 3 or 4 feet, to suit the dimensions of the several courses of stone. The whole to be coped.
The chamber wall, or side of the lock next the river, is to consist of a solid wall or pier, of an uniform thickness throughout of 12 feet, except where it is diminished by the recesses—the whole surface to be coped. The lower end is to be a semicircle of 6 feet radius; the upper end to be a quadrant on the side next the lock, and square next the river, as represented on the accompanying plan.

The breast wall, which forms the upper portion of the lock, is to be of an uniform thickness of 5 feet; and be built to a height of 6 feet below the level of the comb of the adjoining dam.

Wells, or vertical apertures, 8 in number, for the windlass chains to pass through, are to be formed in constructing the walls, at points to be designated by the engineer.

The walls of the lock are to be built plumb, with an ashlar facing, backed up with rubble work. The ashlar, or face stone, for the chamber of the lock, is to have a neat draft of exactly one inch in width, run around the face; the inclosed space is then to be scabbled and picked fine, so as to present an uniformly irregular surface, projecting from 1-4 to 2-8 of an inch beyond the draft. They are to be accurately squared and jointed.

The stretchers are to be of the following dimensions, viz.:—They are to be three times as long as they are thick; and all sizes between 12 and 18 inches, inclusive, are to have 24 inch beds; and those between the sizes of 18 and 24 inches, are to have 26 inch beds.

The headers are, in all cases, to be three times as long as they are thick, except where the thickness of the wall does not require it; in which case they are to be as long as the wall is thick. Their width should always be at least equal to twice their thickness, and they should have full beds from front to rear.

The hollow quoin stretchers are not to be less than 5 feet long, and 4 feet wide—the headers not less than 4 feet long and 3 feet wide. The hollow quoin coping are to be 5 feet square.

The stone for the backing of the chamber wall next the river, are to have well hammer-dressed beds and joints, so as to form a face on the river side, and are to have the same proportions as the face stone of the lock. The rest of the backing stone are to be well shaped, and generally contain not less than 6 cubic feet. Two thicknesses will be allowed to constitute a course, at the option of the contractor, but not more; and in this case, the stone are to be well dressed, so as to make good joints with each other and the adjoining stones.

The coping stone for the walls, are to be uniformly 18 inches thick, not less than 4 feet long and 3 feet wide. Those for the upper ends of the recesses and hollow quoins are to be 5 feet long and 4 feet wide. Their upper and inner surfaces are to be cut in the same manner as the face of the ashlar before described.

As a general rule in the face work, one header may be laid to two stretchers. The headers to be laid immediately over the middle of the stretchers.

In the backing, a header is to be laid between every two headers in the face, and betwixt these, stones are to be laid, so as to fill up the space and give the wall its proper thickness.

The joints and beds of the face stone are to be laid in lime mortar, (the joints to be between 1-4 and 3-16 of an inch in width;) the remaining portion of the wall to be filled with grout, composed of two parts of clean sand and one of quick lime recently burnt and kept unslacked until just before it shall be used. The walls are to be grouted every course as the work progresses.

The mitre sills for the lock gates to close against, are to be supported by lock sills, which are to lie across the lock below them, and by tongues which are to connect with them at their junction, and extend to the lock sills below them. The mitre sills are to be 4 in number; 2 for each set of gates, 18 inches square, 23 feet long; they are to be mitred together at their ends, so as to make the containing angle 109 deg. 28 minutes: at this point of contact, a dovetail notch is to be cut to receive the upper part of the tongue; this notch is to be 9 inches deep, 18 inches wide at its upper end, and 12 inches wide at its lower end. The upstream side of each sill is to be jointed very straight, so as to make a tight joint with the lower ribs of the lock gates where they close together.

The lock sills are to be 2 in number, 18 inches square, 36½ feet long. They are to lie with their upstream sides, 3 inches below a line which passing across the lock, would just touch the lower curve surface of the hollow quoins.

The tongues are to be 2 in number, 18 inches square, 13 feet long, exclusive of a tenon at each of their lower ends, which is to extend 8 inches into the lock sill. Their upper ends to be framed, dovetailing so as to fit into the notches cut for them in the mitre sills.

The whole of the sills should be fitted close to the rock, and secured to their places by 1½ inch bolts, with fox wedges passing through them, and into the rock 18 inches.

The frame of the lock gate is to consist of heel and toe-posts and ribs:

The heel-posts are to be 4 in number, 16 by 18, and equal in length to the height of the lock wall: they are to be rounded on one side, so as to fit into the hollow quoins.

The toe-posts are to be of the same number and dimensions. They are to be cut to a mitre, so as to fit together when the gates are closed.

The ribs are to be placed about 2 feet apart in the clear, 8 inches by 14 at the ends, and 8 by 16 in the middle, except the upper and lower ribs, which are to be 2 inches wide, so as to admit of a mitre for the planking. They are to connect with the heel and toe-posts by a mortice and tenon.
The gates are to be covered with 2 inch plank, well jointed, and spiked on, leaving an aperture between the lower ribs for the paddle gates. The upper gates are to be covered on both sides.

To secure and strengthen the frame of the lock gates, it will be necessary to have irons in the shape of T's and L's to connect the ribs to the heel and toe-posts, viz: Two L's on each of the upper and lower ribs, and two T's on each of the intermediate ribs. They are to be let into the timbers, and held to their places by bolts passing through their limbs and through the ribs and posts, and secured by nuts and screws. The T's and L's are to be on the lower side of the gates, and the bolts driven in from the upper side.

The heel posts at the bottom, are to rest upon a cast iron socket and gudgeon; at the top they are to be hung by a strap of iron, passing round and connected with wrought iron clamps let into the coping.

Two wheel and pinion windlasses will be required for each gate: one to open, the other to close it. A chain is to be attached to one end of the windlass, pass down through an aperture formed in the chamber wall for that purpose, pass under a sheef or pulley inserted in the wall near its foundation; and the other end of the chain is to be attached to the gate near its point. The two windlasses which operate on the same gates, are to be placed diagonally opposite to each other, as represented in the plan.

Cast iron segments are to be laid in the recess chambers, upon which a roller, inserted in the under side of the lower rib, revolves.

Two rows of sheet piling are to extend from the near side of the Chamber wall, about 20 feet into the bank, and extend in height, from the surface of the rock to the level of the coping: each row of piling is to consist of two layers of 2 inch plank. A stratum of gravel about 4 feet thick, is to surround each row of sheet piling.

There are to be two of King & Livingston's patent paddle gates in each lock gate; making 8 for the whole lock.

SPECIFICATION

Of a Dam on the Green river navigation.

The dam is to be a timber crib dam filled in with stone, with abutments of rubble masonry.

The abutment on the northern side of the stream is to be 40 feet in length, and about 25 feet in height, with wings projecting into the bank at either end. It is to be built plumb on the face, be 4 feet thick on top, and batter 3 inches to a foot on the rear, and be
GREEN RIVER.

The lock wall is to be surmounted by coping equal in dimensions to the top of the wall, and not less than 12 inches thick. The back of the lock wall forms the abutment on the southern side as represented in the plan.

The stones for the face wall are to be well hammer-dressed, and not less than 9 inches thick, 3 feet long, and 2 feet wide; the larger stones are to conform to the same proportions. The headers and stretchers are to be equal in number. The stone for the backing are to be large, and carefully laid up, so as to connect with the face work and bind the whole together. The wall is to be grouted every 12 or 18 inches in height. The grout is to be composed of one part of quick lime, recently burnt, to two parts of clean sand.

The crib is to be composed of breast timbers, back timbers, longitudinal ties, cross ties, and comb timbers. The upper side of the dam is to slope in the proportion of 3 to 1, and the breast, or lower side, 1 to 1; and the width of the comb on top, 2 feet. The comb timbers are to be squared, 12 inches by 15. All the other timbers of the dam may be hewed on 2 sides, and are to be equal to 12 inch square timber in size. Each range of longitudinal and cross timbers are to form 18 inches in height.

The first breast timber is to be imbedded in the rock; the second is to be laid above the first, receding 1½ feet, and so on to the comb; each timber receding 1½ feet, so as to form the slope of the dam. Each of these timbers is to be notched so as to receive the ends of the cross ties, and be chamfered on the upper side, so as to form an even bearing for the spars to be placed upon them.

The back timbers are to be laid in a similar manner to breast timbers, except that each recedes 4½ feet from that next below it. The lower timber is to be imbedded in the rock.

The longitudinal ties are to be placed parallel, and equidistant with the breast timbers in each tier of the crib. They are also to be notched, so as to frame the cross ties into them. The two lower ties are to be imbedded in the rock.

The cross ties are to be notched where they cross the longitudinal ties, dovetailed at the ends so as to frame into the breast and back timbers. No cross tie shall be spliced. They are to be placed about 15 feet apart.

The comb timbers form the apex of the dam, and are to lie close together on the upper cross ties.

At the points of intersection of the timbers, they are to be pinned together with 2 inch pins 16 inches long. The timbers imbedded in the rock, should be secured to their places by 14 inch square bolts, about 30 inches long, with fox wedges.

The upper slope side of the dam is to be covered with 4 inch oak plank, spiked or pinned to the timbers, on which they rest. The lower side, or breast, is to be covered with spars 8 inches thick, hewn on two sides, so as to fit close together, and long enough to extend from the comb of the dam to the rock. They are to be secured to the breast timbers by bolts or pins.

The cribs are to be filled with stone carefully packed. A sufficient quantity of gravel to make the dam tight is to be deposited on the upper slope.

A pier head is to be constructed at the southern end of the dam, and connected with it. It is to be 100 feet in length above the comb of the dam, 15 feet wide, and extend as high as the lock coping; its upper end is to slope as 2 to 1. The pier is to be timber crib work, framed and filled in, in a similar manner to the dam; and the top and upper slope are to be covered with timbers laid close together. In the construction of the pier head, a row of sheet piling is to extend from the lock wall, through the pier, and connect with the sheeting of the dam, so as to prevent the escape of the water through the pier into the body of the dam.

A bill of materials for a Lock at Vienna falls, equal to 7 feet lift, and 8 feet guard, 21 feet high, with a view to the improvement of those falls alone.

SPECIFICATION

Of a wooden Lock with stone filling, for the Green River navigation.

The lock pit is to be excavated to the whole size of the foundation of the lock; in other respects, to be exactly as in the specification for the cut stone lock. Upon the smooth bottom of this pit, a floor of hewn timber is to be laid transversely, 6 inches thick, square hewn edges, and forty five feet long; so that the ends may extend under the lock walls 4½ feet.

The walls are to be of the following dimensions and form, viz:

- From the upper side of the upper wing to the upper recess, 10 feet.
- Length of the upper recess, 25
- From the upper hollow quoin to lower recess, 115
- Length of lower recess, 25
- From lower quoin to lower end of lock, 16

Extreme length of lock, 191 feet.

The wall, or side of the lock next the bank, is to have a wing at each end, extending 20 feet back, at right angles with the wall, and into the bank; to be built to the same height as the lock walls.

At the angles of intersection, formed by the lock walls and wings, the face of the lock walls shall be flaired at an angle of 30 degrees, 6 feet from the intersection.

The wall is to be 8 feet thick throughout, and the wings are to be framed up in connexion with it. The lock wall and wings to be covered with timber six inches thick, and not more than ten inches broad; to be spiked down to the timbers of the wall and wings. The wings are to be six feet thick throughout.

The chamber wall, or side of the lock next the river, is to be built of the same dimensions exactly with the walls of the stone lock in the foregoing specifications, exclusive of the projections.
which form the recesses for the gates, and must be interlocked with the pier head as they are built up; (for Pier head, see specifications of dam and pier head for stone lock.)

Wells, or vertical apertures, 8 in number, for the windlass chains, are to be framed up as the walls are built, at points to be designated by the engineer.

The hollow quoins and recesses are to be constructed in the most approved manner, and under the directions of the resident engineer. The mitre sill and other timbers of the lock, are to be the same as in the specifications of the stone lock. A description of the gates, windlass chains, sheaves, &c. will be found in the foregoing specification of stone lock.

All the longitudinal timbers of the lock wall and wings, are to be 12 inches square; and the face of back timbers or longitudinal ties, and the end cross ties, are to be counter-hewed, so as to fit down with good joints, close upon each other. The cross ties are to be 12 inches square, and are to be let in at every fifteen feet apart upon each tier of timbers, with a dovetail notch at the intersection, and well spiked down.

The chamber of the lock, and the upper side of the wings, are to be lined with 2 inch plank placed vertically, and doubled so as to break joints; both courses to be well jointed.

The lock is to be built with white oak timbers, and, except the cross ties, must not be less than 30 feet long; the cribs are to be filled with stone, and puddled or grouted every 2 feet, with gravel and clay—2 measures of gravel to 1 of clay.

The space between the upper and lower wing of the land side of the lock, and space above the upper wing, is to be regularly and closely rammed as the wall is built; filling of good clay, and to be raised to the height of the wall and wing.

The breast wall across the upper end of the lock, is to be built 8 feet broad, and studded with 2 inch oak plank, doubled on the upper and lower side; and the cribs filled with stone, and puddled with sand and gravel, and covered with timbers extending across the lock, 45 feet long and 8 inches thick each, and built into the lock; the edges well jointed, and bolted down to the wall.

The contractors are desired to put in bids for the construction of a wooden lock of the following dimensions, to-wit:

The chamber of the lock to be 140 by 36 feet in the clear; the length of each wall or wing of the lock, to be 191 feet; the breadth of each wall or wing, to be 12 feet from out to out; the height of each wall or wing, to be 27 feet. The sides of the walls or wings facing the chamber of the lock, are to be constructed of timbers faced on three sides, (square,) 18 or 21 inches broad, and 12 inches thick at least; 30 feet in length. The sides of the walls, back from the lock chamber, are to be constructed of timbers not less than 12 inches square, to be faced on the upper and lower sides. The cross ties are to be 12 feet in length, faced on two sides, and 12 inches thick from face to face. A cross tie is to be inserted in the wall, between every 14 and 15 feet, in the length of the wall, and upon each tier of the timbers. The timbers of the walls are to be put up in such manner, that the cracks or spaces between the timbers, shall be as small as practicable; and the cross ties are to be let into the timbers of the wall, so as to make the cracks as small as practicable, and still to preserve strength in the construction. The inner sides of the lock walls are to be lined with 2 inch plank, jointed and put on double, and well spiked on the timbers of the wall. The lower plank are to be at least 18 feet long, from the bottom of the lock chamber up the sides of the wall. The timbers of the walls are to be spiked down, and confined to the rock at the bottom of the lock, in the same manner that the foundation timbers of the wall are to be put in, according to the report of the engineers. The other timbers of the walls are to be spiked and tied together by iron bars, in such manner as the superintending engineer may direct.

From each end of the wall, on the south side of the lock, there are to be walls running at right angles into the bank, for the distance of 20 feet, so as to form an abutment. These walls are to be of the same height, the same width, and built with timbers of the same dimensions, and in the same manner with the lock walls; and the upper side of the upper 20 feet wall is to be sheeted in the same manner as the chamber of the lock.

The breast wall of the lock chamber will be 36 feet in length, 6 feet wide, and 36 feet high, from the bottom; and is to be spiked or grouted on the upper side, so as to be made as nearly impervious by water as practicable. The side timbers of the breast wall are to be faced on two sides; to be at least 12 inches every way, if squared, and to be built up and tied with cross ties, like the side walls of the lock. The inner side of the breast wall is to be sheeted like the lock chamber; and the cavity of the breast wall is to be filled with gravel, and the top covered with timbers 6 inches thick, well spiked on. The cavities of the lock walls, and the abutment walls are to be filled in with rock, well packed. The hollow quoins and recesses are to be formed and constructed in such manner as the superintending engineer may direct. All timber and plank to be of oak.

The sides of the walls fronting to the lock chamber, if put up with timbers 2 feet wide by 1 thick, will require 20,628 cubic feet of timber; the two back walls put up with timbers large enough to square 1 foot, will require only as much as one of the front walls, to wit: 10,314 cubic feet; making altogether, for lock walls, 30,942, at 8 cts. per foot, $2,475 36
The cross ties of the lock walls will require 9,072 cubic feet; which, at 8 cents, will be 725 76.

Each abutment wing will require 1,050 cubic feet, or, together, 2,160; and 1296 for cross ties: in all, 3,456; at 8 cents, 276 48.

For the breast wall of the lock, including lateral and cross timbers, 410 cubic feet will be required, at 8 cents, 32 80.

There will be in the cavities of both lock walls, taken together, 3,102 square yards to be filled in with rock, at 37 1/4 cents per yard on the ground, 1,275 75.

There will be 378 square yards of filling in the abutment wing, and 30 in the breast dam: 308, at 37 1/4, 153 00.

It will require 21,168 feet of 2 inch plank, to double sheet the lock wall, and single sheet the upper abutment wall, at 2 1/4 cts per foot, 529 20.

It will require 216 surface feet of timber, 6 inches thick, to cover the breast dam, say at 8 cents, 17 28.

I suppose that the iron required about the lock, will be 6 tons at 180 dollars per ton, 1,080 00.

I suppose that the estimate made by the engineers, for timber and plank for gates, windlass and appendages, workmanship for gates, paddle gates, segments, sockets and gudgeons, are nearly correct; and therefore I adopt them, and they amount altogether to the sum of 2,111 65.

The total cost of a wooden lock substituted for the stone work will be 8,687 28, or 9,000; including extra work in forming the recesses and hollow quoins. The lock gates and their work, for the prices of which I have referred to the estimates of the engineers, are to be constructed in the manner specified by them.

The abutment on the northern side, which, according to the report and specifications of the engineers, was to be constructed with rock and rubble masonry, will have to be given up, and wood submitted in its place; but the change would be more favorable to the contractor who undertakes the job, and need not be made the subject of another estimate. I therefore put down the dam and pierhead to be constructed according to the specifications of the engineers, with the exception of the necessary change of the northern abutment from rock to wood walls, filled in with rock, spiled, grouted, &c. at the price fixed by them, 9,618 26.

ARTICLE OF AGREEMENT,

Entered into, this 18th day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, by and between the Commonwealth of Kentucky, by James R. Skiles, Henry Shanks, Stephen Ashby, Simpson Stout, and Dillis Dyer, of the one part, State Commissioners for the improvement of Green river, and James Glenn of the other part; WITNESSETH—

That the said James Glenn does promise and agree to furnish all the materials; which shall be in such quantity and of such a quality as shall be approved by the engineer on said river, and perform all the labor necessary to construct and finish, in every respect, in the most substantial and workmanlike manner, a lock, viz: number 2, at the falls of Vienna, according to the proposed plan of improving the navigation of Green river by Messrs. Lacock and Stealy, engineers.

The construction of said lock shall be in every respect according to the specifications hereunto annexed, which are to be considered as a part of this contract. And the work shall be inspected from time to time, by the said superintendent, or the engineer for the time being, or any assistant engineer who may be employed on said river; and if, at any time, any mechanic or workman employed on said work, shall be found unfaithful, or believed to be so by either the superintendent or engineers, then and in that case, the said superintendent or engineers shall have power to direct that any such person be forthwith dismissed, and no longer employed on any part of the work.

And the said James Glenn does further promise and agree, from time to time, during the progress of the work, to conform to such deviations and alterations from the present location of said lock or plan of construction, as the said engineer may direct. And if any variation or alteration required by the principal engineer, should be considered by him, unfavorable to the interest of said contractor, or on the other hand, should diminish the amount of labor or expense required by the plan and specifications, then, and in either case, such additions shall be made to, or reductions from the sum hereafter mentioned to be paid, as the engineer shall deem just and equitable.

And it is mutually agreed that the decision of the engineer shall be final and conclusive, in any dispute which may arise between the said parties; and that the said contract, or any part of it, will not be re-let or transferrable to any other person or persons whatever; and also, that said Glenn will personally superintend the work during its progress.

And it is further agreed between the parties, that at least once a month an account shall be given to the engineer, in writing, of the measures that have been taken, or the contracts that have been made for procuring materials for the lock; and also, who has been employed as principal or master masons or carpenters, for the construction.

It is further agreed between the parties, that the work shall be commenced within thirty days from this date, and the materials for the construction of the work shall be delivered at such times and places as may be directed by the engineer. But if said Glenn shall neglect to do so, or if at any period hereafter, said Glenn shall, in the opinion of the superintendent or engineer, refuse or neglect to prosecute this contract, with a force proportioned to the quantity of work to be done, and the period within which it is to be completed, or shall sub-contract or re-let this contract or any part thereof, except for the furnishing materials, or shall not give personal superintendence to the work, the said superintendent or engineer shall have power, with the consent of the commissioners, to determine that this contract has been abandoned; and such determination shall put an end to this contract, and exonerate the Commonwealth from every obligation thence arising; and the superintendent may immediately proceed to dispose thereof, in the same manner as if it had never existed.

It is further agreed, that to avoid disputes, as well as interruption and hindrance to the regular and peaceable progress of the different parts of the work, and to prevent unnecessary injury to the right and property of the neighbors in the vicinity of the work, the superintendent, engineer, or assistant engineer will dismiss from service, every quarrelsome, disorderly person, and such as shall be addicted to habits of intemperance, or who shall wantonly commit any unnecessary trespass, either upon the person, land or property of citizens, living, travelling, or working upon, or near the said work, or be guilty of any other offensive misconduct; and the said contractor shall dismiss all similar persons employed at said work, whenever thereto directed by the said superintendent, engineer, or assistant engineer.

For building and completing lock number 2, and finding all the materials, if according to wooden specification, per foot lift, nine hundred and ninety dollars. But if of stone, per perch of 25 cubic feet, six dollars and seventy-five cents. For common excavation twenty-five cents per cubic yard. For solid rock excavation, one dollar per cubic yard. Embankment, twenty five cents per cubic yard. Puddle, fifty cents per cubic yard. The stone or wooden lock to be built at the option of the commissioners.

It is further agreed by the parties, that any items of work that may necessarily occur in constructing said lock, or in providing materials for the same, or in excavating foundations, not specified in this contract, nor mentioned in the specifications beforementioned, shall be estimated by the engineer, and paid for accordingly, except that no allowance shall be made for bailing water.

The payments to be made in the following manner:

Upon the delivery of the materials at the place or places assigned, the engineer shall estimate the value of the same, and upon his certificate being presented to the commissioners, the amount thereof shall be paid, deducting therefrom fifteen per cent; and on or about the fifteenth day of each succeeding month, within the limits of this contract, an estimate shall be made of the quantity of work done, certificate granted, and payment in like proportion made thereon. The fifteen per cent. directed to be retained, to be withheld until the contract is completed, unless the board of commissioners shall direct the same, or any part thereof, to be sooner paid.

And further, at the expiration of the stipulated period for the completion of this contract, if the whole work shall be finished to the satisfaction of the commissioners, the said engineer shall estimate it, and within twenty days after the presentation of his certificate, under his hand, to the commissioners, the balance which may remain in his hands shall all be paid, except five per centum on the whole amount of this contract; which five per centum shall be retained and kept back, in order to insure the faithful performance of this contract in every part, until the water shall be let into, and pass through the said lock, of the intended depth, and the said lock proved by water, to be well and faithfully executed, and every part done complete and perfect; and whatever expense shall accrue, or in any way arise, by unfaithfulness or want of skill in the execution of said work, shall, if paid, be deducted from the said five per cent. and the balance, if any, shall then be paid over to the said contractor, and a final settlement and adjustment made, and certificate made by the engineer, of the fulfilment of this contract. Provided, however, that the said superintendent shall be bound to let in the water to prove the said work, within one year from the completion of said lock.

It is understood that if the commissioners should conclude that the rock on which the dam is to be founded, is not of a suitable material to go into the dam and wood lock, as expressed by Messrs. Lacock and Stealy, that the said Glenn is to be allowed, according to the acting engineer's estimate, for any additional expense.

And the said James Glenn promises and agrees to finish and deliver up this contract, on or before the first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four.
ARTICLE OF AGREEMENT,

Entered into, this 18th day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, by and between the Commonwealth of Kentucky, by James R. Skiles, Henry Shanks, Stephen Ashby, Simpson Stout, and Dillis Dyer, of the one part, State Commissioners for the improvement of Green river, and James Glenn of the other part: WITNESSETH—

That the said James Glenn does promise and agree to furnish all the materials; which shall be in such quantity and of such a quality as shall be approved by the engineer on said river, and perform all the labor necessary to construct and finish, in every respect, in the most substantial and workmanlike manner, a dam over the Green river at the Vienna falls, with the pier head and abutment, as described in drawings and specifications, drawn by Messrs. Lacock and Stealy, for said falls; being dam number 2, of 10 feet height.

The construction of said dam shall be in every respect according to the specifications hereunto annexed, which are to be considered as a part of this contract. And the work shall be inspected from time to time, by the said superintendent, or the engineer for the time being, or any assistant engineer who may be employed on said river; and if, at any time, any mechanic or workman employed on said work, shall be found unfaithful, or believed to be so by either the commissioners or engineer, then, and in that case, the said engineer shall have power to direct that any such person be forthwith dismissed, and no longer employed on any part of the work.

And the said James Glenn does further promise and agree, from time to time, during the progress of the work, to conform to such deviations and alterations from the present plan of construction, of said dam, as the said engineer may direct. And if any variation or alteration required by the engineer, should be considered by him, unfavorable to the interest of said contractor, or on the other hand, should diminish the amount of labor or expense required by the plan and specifications, then, and in either case, such additions shall be made to, or reductions from the sum hereafter mentioned to be paid, as the engineer shall deem just and equitable. And it is mutually agreed that the decision of the engineer shall be final and conclusive, in any dispute which may arise between the said parties; and that the said contract, nor any part of it, will not be re-let or transferred to any other person or persons whatever; and also, that he will personally superintend the work during its progress.

And it is further agreed between the parties, that at least once a month an account shall be given to the engineer, in writing, of the measures that have been taken, or the contracts that have been made for procuring materials for the said dam; and also who has been employed as principal or master masons, or carpenters for the construction.

It is further agreed between the parties, that the work shall be commenced within thirty days from this date; and the materials for the construction of the work shall be delivered at such times and places as may be directed by the engineer. But if he shall neglect to do so, or if at any period hereafter, he shall, in the opinion of the commissioners or engineer, refuse or neglect to prosecute this contract with a force proportioned to the quantity of work to be done, and the period within which it is to be completed, or shall sub-contract or re-let this contract or any part thereof, except for the furnishing materials, or shall not give personal superintendence to the work, the said engineer shall have power, with the consent of one of the river commissioners, to determine that this contract has been abandoned; and such a determination shall put an end to this contract, and exonerate the commonwealth from every obligation thence arising; and the commissioners may immediately proceed to dispose thereof, in the same manner as if it had never existed.

It is further agreed, that to avoid disputes, as well as interruption and hindrance to the regular and peaceable progress of the different parts of the work, and to prevent unnecessary injury to the rights and property of the neighborhood, in the vicinity of the work, the superintendent, engineer, or assistant engineer will dismiss from service, every quarrelsome, disorderly person, and such as shall be addicted to habits of intemperance, or who shall wantonly commit any unnecessary trespass, either upon the person, land, or property of citizens, living, travelling, or working upon, or near the said work, or be guilty of any other misconduct; and the said contractor shall dismiss all similar persons employed at said work, whenever thereto directed by the said superintendent, engineer, or assistant engineer. It is understood that if the commissioners should conclude that the rock on which the dam is founded, is not of a suitable material to go into the dam and wooden lock, as expressed by Messrs. Lacock and Stealy, that the said Glenn is to be allowed, according to the acting engineer's estimate, for any expense that he may be at. And that the said James Glenn is to be paid for completing this contract, as follows:

For the dam, and finding all materials, including pier head, per lineal foot, from lock to abutment, twelve dollars. For embankment, twenty-five cents. For excavating the foundation of the dam, per cubic yard, solid rock, seventy-five cents. For excavating the foundation of the abutments, per cubic yard, twenty cents. For building the abutment, per perch of twenty five cubic feet, rubble work, three dollars and ninety cents.

It is further agreed by the parties, that if any items of work that may necessarily occur in constructing said dam, or in providing materials for the same, or in excavating foundations, not specified in this contract, nor mentioned in the specifications before mentioned, shall be estimated by the engineer, and paid for accordingly; except that no allowance shall be made for bailing water.

The payments to be made in the following manner: upon the delivery of the materials at the place assigned, the engineer shall estimate the value of the same, and upon his certificate being presented to the superintendant, the amount thereof shall be paid, deducting therefrom fifteen per cent. And on or about the fifteenth day of each succeeding month, within the limits of this contract, an estimate shall be made of the quantity of work done, certificate granted, and payment in like proportion made thereunto. The fifteen per cent. directed to be retained, to be withheld until the contract is completed, unless the board of commissioners shall direct the same, or any part thereof, to be sooner paid. And further, at the expiration of the period stipulated for the completion of this contract, and the said dam has been tested by water, if the whole work shall be finished to the satisfaction of the superintend, the said engineer shall estimate it, and within twenty days after the presentation of his certificate, under his hand, to the superintendant, the balance which may remain due, shall be paid.

And the said James Glenn hereby binds himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, in the penal sum of , to finish and deliver up the said dam on or before the first day of December, 1834—to finish and deliver up this contract on or before the first day of December, 1834.

In witness whereof, the said parties have herunto set their hands and seals, the day and year first above mentioned.

REPORT of the Commissioners appointed to settle with the Agent and Keeper of the Penitentiary.

FRANKFORT, JANUARY 3, 1834.

DEAR SIR—You will please lay before the Senate the enclosed statement of the situation of the Penitentiary.

And oblige

Yours, very respectfully,

JOHN GLOVER,
BEN. R. POLLARD,
Commissioners.

The Hon. RICHARD B. NEW,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

In conformity to an act of the General Assembly, passed at the last session of the Legislature, appointing us commissioners to settle and adjust the accounts of the Keeper of the Penitentiary, we submit the following report:

The books of the institution have been carefully examined, and the balances ascertained up to the 31st day of December, 1833, inclusive, from which it appears, there remains due to the institution from individuals, on accounts, the sum of $23,135 28

Notes in sum, 600 64
From the State for articles furnished by the Keeper to the building commissioners of the State House, 12,625 47
For erecting and completing 34 new cells, as directed by act of Assembly, approved 29th Jan. 1829, 2,116 80
For raising the outer wall of the Penitentiary six feet higher, and covering the same with loose stone, 1,546 81
For advances made by the Keeper to convicts on their discharge, after serving their term of imprisonment, 1,133 12
From Joel Scott, for the amount of his account, 17,011 52
From the State for articles furnished for the repairs of the Government House, 523 75

$68,451 50
\[

\text{Raw materials on hand,} \\
\text{From which deduct the debts owing by the institution,} \\
\text{Also for debts supposed to be bad and doubtful,} \\ \text{Total amount of profits,} \end{array}

In addition to the above sum, there has been expended in retaking convicts escaped from imprisonment, in rewards and other expenses, the sum of $1,744.56. Whether this sum should be charged to the State, to the Penitentiary, or to the Keeper, or made a joint loss, is a matter respectfully submitted.

We think it probable that the institution is indebted to an amount beyond the sum here reported, as ascertained from the books; many articles have been received by the Keeper, as he informs us, unaccompanied by a bill, consequently they have not been placed to the credit of the person from whom they were purchased, and in such cases it has not been in our power to ascertain the true situation of the accounts, but have reported them as exhibited by the books.

In making the foregoing estimate, we have devoted much time and attention to the books and accounts of the institution, still, we do not exhibit this with entire confidence of its correctness; the difficulty in taking a correct and complete inventory, while a considerable portion of the materials are in the hands of the workmen in an unfinished condition, must be obvious to all; we, however, are of opinion, that the articles as estimated raw, as well as manufactured, will insure a sale without loss to the institution.

In ascertaining the profits of the institution, we have been compelled to resort to other data than that contained in the general account of the institution, which ought to have shown the true situation of it at any time, if the books had been properly opened and kept; and we are of the opinion that if this had been correctly done, the general account would have exhibited a result not very different from the foregoing; but instead of that, it falls short at least thirty thousand dollars.

In making the foregoing remarks, we wish not to be understood as intending to impugn the motives of the officers whose duties placed them in charge of the books: We believe they have all been actuated from an ardent desire to promote the interest and prosperity of the institution.

We are decidedly of the opinion that the Penitentiary is at this time in a prosperous condition; the keeper appears to be well qualified and to possess a peculiar tact for the management of such an institution. The prompt and energetic course pursued in the internal regulations of the prison, warrants an opinion favorable to its future success.

All of which is respectfully submitted by

JOHN GLOVER,
BENJ. R. POLLARD,
Commissioners.

Bank of Kentucky, January 1st, 1834.

SIR,—I have the honor of transmitting to you for the information of the House of Representatives, a general statement of the condition of this institution on the 31st ultimo, inclusive.

The entire amount of capital stock now held in the institution is composed of 17,148 shares, amounting nominally to the sum of 341,704 dollars, of which the State of Kentucky is the owner of 5,967 shares, amounting to 119,340 dollars, and corporate and individual stockholders own 11,181 shares, amounting to 222,364 dollars.

It will be perceived on a comparison of the present with previous reports from this institution, that in stating the number of shares and amount of capital stock, the discrimination heretofore made between full or complete shares and residuary stock is discontinued, because the inequality of shares which produced that distinction has ceased to exist: all the stockholders having received, or being entitled to receive, eighty per cent. or 80 dollars on each share of their stock. Within the current year, ending the 31st ultimo, the institution has, by means of negotiations and compromises with individuals for doubtful and bad debts, and for the sale of real estate, effected a redemption of 1,428 shares of its capital stock, amounting nominally to the sum of 28,560 dollars. Within the same period of time, it has redeemed of its notes then in circulation 578 dollars 75 cents by payment in silver, which have been subsequently cancelled and burnt in the presence of the Auditor and Treasurer, in conformity with statutory provisions, and reduces the entire amount of notes now in circulation to 31,543 dollars 39 cents; not ten per cent. of the amount it is confidently believed will ever be presented for payment, which will produce a nett gain to the Bank of about 30,000 dollars. The very slow progress made by the institution in the redemption of its notes, furnishes conclusive proof that but a very small proportion of the amount reported to be in circulation can be held by either corporations or individuals, and that consequently, the balance must be lost or destroyed. The Bank has now been redeeming its notes with specie for four years, and there being no possible inducement to the holders of its paper, if any, to retain it longer on hand, the board of directors have, with a view to facilitate closing of the Bank, caused an order to be entered up fixing on the first day of July, 1835, as the period of limitation for the presentment of such paper as is now reported to be in circulation, which if not presented within the time specified, is to be considered as forfeited to the corporation. Notice to this effect has been given by the cashier through the public newspapers of this state.

On reference to the general statement submitted, it will be seen that the "current profits" of the institution for the year ending the 31st ult. amounted to the sum of 10,758 dollars 95 cents, and the "current expenses" for the same period, amounted to the sum of 4,812 dollars 56 cents, leaving an excess of nett gain to the institution on the operations of the last year, the sum of 5,946 dollars 39 cents, which has been carried to the general account of "surplus profits." It will be seen by a comparison of the present with my last annual report, that there has been a great diminution in the "current profits" of the institution, while there is not, nor can there be, under the present system, a corresponding diminution in the "current expenses." The board of directors have, by a rigid system of economy and by all the just and proper means within their control, diminished the expenses of the institution as far as was consistent with its interest and safety, even to the discontinuing its only agent; leaving the entire and yet wide spread business of the institution to be conducted by its President, Cashier and Clerk. It is gratifying, however, to be able to state, that the "current expenses" of the institution will, at no time within the period of its charter, equal the "current profits."

In conformity with a resolution of the board of directors adopted in May last, requesting the president to draft an address to the stockholders, setting forth the principles on which a portion of the funds of the Bank should be distributed amongst the retaining and residuary stockholders, and submit the same for consideration at their next meeting, the following report, [a copy of which is herewith enclosed marked A.], was submitted by him, considered and unanimously adopted by the board.

On the adoption of the report and accompanying resolution, the board of directors ordered a distribution of 49,828 dollars 96 cents of the “surplus profits” of the institution to be made amongst the retaining and residuary stockholders, payable on the first day of July following, two-thirds of which was directed to be paid in silver or notes of the Bank of the United States, and one-third in notes of the Bank of the Commonwealth of Kentucky; and the Cashier was instructed to assign to each stockholder the just proportion of said sum of 49,828 dollars 96 cents agreeably to the principles contained in the report and accompanying resolution before alluded to, which assignment or apportionment of interest produced the following results.

On a comparison of the above table, prepared by the Cashier with much skill and ability, with a report made to the Senate by the President of this institution on the 10th December, 1832, it will be seen that the principle adopted by the board of directors in the distribution made and paid to the stockholders in July last, is in strict conformity to those laid down in the report submitted to the Senate; and they have high gratification in stating that, so far as they are advised, the principle on which the distribution has been made meets the general approbation of the stockholders.

The state's proportion of the sum distributed in July last amounted to 23,868 dollars, being 4 dollars on each share, of which the sum of 15,912 dollars was paid to the Treasurer in money, and 7,956 dollars in notes of the Bank of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

In referring back to the table of distribution, it will be seen that those stockholders who made a partial surrender of their stock prior to the first of January, 1825, received no portion of the amount distributed in July last, nor will they be entitled to receive any portion of the funds of the institution according to those principles, until those stockholders, who have not made a partial surrender of their stock, shall have received 2 dollars 50 cents more on each share. Hence, by this discrimination in favor of retained stock, so just and reasonable, and not liable, in the estimation of the board of directors, to any sound objection, the state of Kentucky will receive $38,808 dollars 62 cents more than if such discrimination had not been made.

It is confidently believed, that the means of the institution are now so far within its control, that a further distribution will be made and paid to the stockholders on or before the first day of April next, of an amount sufficient to place every grade of stock on a perfect equality.

The period allowed by law for a termination of the affairs of this institution, is not now distant, and it cannot be desirable to the stockholders, that the time should be prolonged; but under the present limitations and restrictions imposed by law, that object cannot be effected within the time presented, or within any definite period; for, so long as there remains a debt due the institution, it cannot be finally closed.

In my report to the legislature of 1831, as well as in that for the year 1832, I respectfully presented the subject to their consideration, and asked that such additional powers be granted to the President and Directors as would enable them, by a sale and transfer of the doubtful and bad debts, to close the concerns of the institution within the period of its charter, an object which must now be as desirable to the legislature, (the representative of the state interest,) as it is to the individual stockholders, or those who control its management; but the legislature, in its wisdom, not having thought proper to act on the subject, I am compelled by a high sense of duty and an earnest desire to see the Bank brought to a speedy termination, most respectfully to renew the subject for their consideration. It is perfectly within the knowledge of the officers of the institution, that the naked proposition submitted to the legislature for authority to sell and transfer the doubtful and bad debts of individuals from whom nothing could be obtained by the process of law, and from whom no proposition for a commutation of their debts could be obtained, induced some of them to come forward and make liberal propositions, comparatively, fearing no doubt that the authority would be given and their debts might be purchased by an individual who would harrass and embarrass them in all their operations through life, unless the debt so purchased was settled. If then the mere fact of presenting the subject to the consideration of the legislature should be attended with such signal results, what might not be expected from that class of debtors were the powers asked by the President and Directors granted them. Had they the undoubted right and legal authority to sell and transfer the doubtful and bad debts due the institution, its business could easily be closed within the time prescribed by law. All the good debts due the institution can easily be collected within the period of its charter; so can the remnant of the real estate which it owns be sold or otherwise disposed of within the same period of time; but the doubtful and bad debts hang like an incubus on the institution. It is therefore most respectfully submitted to the consideration of the legislature, whether they will authorize the President and Directors of the Bank of Kentucky to sell at public auction, or otherwise, the doubtful and bad debts due the institution, giving and granting to the purchaser the same rights and remedies which the Bank now has either in law or equity to enforce their collection.

It is confidently believed, that under a power thus given, with such limitations and restrictions, as the legislature may think just and proper to impose, a very large sum may be realized, which never will be obtained otherwise, because that class of individual debtors know, that when the corporation ceases to exist, there is no authority for prosecuting them any further; that suits must be dismissed, claims abandoned, and that they are absolved from all legal responsibility.

It may not be improper, and it certainly is intended to be respectful to the legislature, to suggest, in some degree, a detail of the plan of operations intended under the power which is asked, and the manner in which that power will be exercised: It consists mainly in this, that the doubtful and bad debts, which originated at the principal office of the Bank, or any one of its late offices of discount and deposit, shall be advertised for three months before the day of sale at the place where such debt originated, giving the parties names who are bound for the debt, the amount, &c. and credit, if any. This would enable the friends of an unfortunate debtor to buy up his paper at a greater or less discount, thereby relieving him of his embarrassment, and, in many instances, restore a valuable citizen to his family and society, who otherwise might linger out a painful existence in poverty and wretchedness.

It is further respectfully suggested to the consideration of the legislature, that as the Bank of Kentucky will soon cease to want a banking house or office, whether it would not be good policy in the state, to become the owner of the present banking house of the Bank of Kentucky, which would afford a safe place of deposit for the funds of the Treasurer, and a convenient office for the transaction of his official duties, even if it were not wanting for any other purpose. The state is the owner of a large portion of the stock in the Bank of Kentucky, and the corporation would cheerfully exchange the property for such a portion of that stock as might be mutually agreed on.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully,

P. DUDLEY, President.

At a Meeting of the Board of Directors for the Bank of Kentucky, May 17, 1833.

Present—Peter Dudley, President; John Brown, Jacob Swigert, Charles S. Morehead and James Shannon, Directors.

In conformity to the resolution of the Board at their last meeting, the President submitted the following address to the Stockholders.

The period has now arrived in the operations of this institution, when it becomes the duty of the President and Directors to determine on and make known the principle by which they will be governed in the distribution of the balance of the funds of the institution amongst its Stockholders; but before they declare this principle, it is deemed just and proper, that the Stockholders shall be put in possession of all the information necessary for a correct understanding of the subject. To do this, a concise history of the operations of the institution from the passage of the law repealing its charter to the present time, is indispensably necessary.

By an act of the Legislature of this State, approved 5th December, 1832, the charter of the Bank of Kentucky was repealed, and by the third section of said act it was provided: "That the President and Directors of said Bank shall receive Stock in discharge of debts due said institution, at such discounts as to them shall seem just and reasonable, making due allowance for bad debts and losses, which it is probable said Bank may sustain." In conformity with this provision of the act, which made it imperative on the President and Directors to receive stock in discharge of debts due the institution, they proceeded to make the necessary estimates of "bad debts and losses" of the Bank, with a view of determining at what rate stock, originally $100 per share, should be received in payment; and on the 19th December, 1832, adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, that surrenders of stock, in payment of debts, be allowed at the rate of $80 the share, the party surrendering, retaining upon the balance of said stock the right to a rateable proportion of such surplus as upon a final settlement may be on hand." They also, by resolution, prescribed the form of a certificate to be given the surrendering stockholders, for a "residuary interest of one-fifth in each share," thus surrendered, "which interest will be entitled, on a final settlement of the concerns of the Bank, to such share of the distributable funds as may appear to be its fair proportion."

On the same day, the President and Directors adopted another resolution directing "one fifth of the semi-annual profits, after deducting all the expenses, to be carried to the surplus fund, and that the residue of profits constitute a divisible fund amongst the retaining stockholders." Under this new organisation, rendered necessary in conformity with the act referred to, the operations of the institution commenced in December, 1822, by a suspension of dividends of profits, the reception of stock in payment of debts at the rate of $80 per share, varying in the amount at which it was received in payment of debts at the different periods of surrendering, deducting therefrom the distributions which had been made and paid over, and the distributions of its capital stock by regular installments up to 1st. of March, 1832, at which period each and every stockholder, whether he surrendered or retained his stock, had received, or was entitled to receive, eighty per cent. or $80 on each share.

It is thus shown how, and in what manner, the stockholders have received, or are entitled to receive, eighty per cent. or $80 on each share of their capital stock, and as a considerable fund has accumulated in the hands of the Cashier to be distributed, it becomes highly proper and expedient to determine what apportionment shall be made of those means, so as to dispense justice to the retaining and residuary stockholders, by a due respect to the rights derived under the charter as originally framed and subsequently modified. Had not the original integral composition of the shares of stock been destroyed by the act of December 5, 1822, and the corporate regulations growing out of that act, no anomalous or fractional interest of shares would have been created, and the settlement of the affairs of the institution would have been simple and plain. The laws of co-partnership, upon the ordinary principles of distribution, would then entitle each share to an equal dividend. Does then this modification of original stock interests dictate of itself any other rule of apportionment or distribution? or is there any thing in the terms of the corporation laws or regulations indicating a different principle of settlement? The law simply compels the reception of stock in payment of debts at such discount as may be thought reasonable and just, making due allowance for bad debts and losses, entitling the balance to a due proportion of the surplus means of the Bank. According then to the law, no other change is made in the relative position of the stockholders to each other or to the Bank, than the mere process of reducing the shares surrendered from $100 to $20 each. The principles and rules which pre-existed for defining and adjusting the rights of partners in a common or joint concern are left undisturbed by this arrangement; it is the proportions alone of interest which are varied. The principles upon which that interest is constituted, remain untouched, and in settling the amount to be paid to the retaining and to the residuary stockholders, the same general principles of division must be recurred to, that would have governed had none of the shares undergone this change. It is conclusive from the general and indefinite terms used in the law for expressing this contingent right of the residuary shares to such portion of the surplus as may appear to be justly due, "that the adjustment of the matter was intended to be left to the then existing and well settled law of co-partnerships. The Bank regulations appear to be framed in the same sense and spirit. For one-fifth of the annual profits, after deducting the expenses, were ordered “to be carried to the surplus fund, and the residue of profits were to constitute a divisible fund among the retaining stockholders.” These Bank regulations are not only valuable as they define and settle, to the extent of their powers, the relative rights of the retaining and the residuary stockholders, but also furnish a contemporaneous understanding and exposition of the law by those who were bound to interpret and act upon it. It is however suggested, notwithstanding the injunctions of the law and those of the corporation, that to allow the retaining stockholders no greater premium or interest for the use of their capital than the diminished nett profits of the institution, is incompatible with justice; that the residuary stockholders, who, by a partial surrender of their stock to the Bank in payment of debts, realized 80 per cent. on their stock, should be charged on the books of the Bank with lawful interest on the amount surrendered until a final distribution or settlement takes place, and that the retaining stockholders be charged in like manner on all distributions they have received, or that legal or some other rate of interest, commensurate to a fair compensation for the use of capital, be allowed to the retaining stockholders before a common and equal distribution shall be made of the means of the Bank. This position is sustained by the argument that the debts extinguished by stock carried legal interest, and that the productive funds or profits of the institution were curtailed by this mode of payment. This claim, although the retaining stockholders have suffered much hardship, is not well based either in data or argument.

The diminution of profits arises, not so much from this operation of receiving stock in payment of debts, as from the cessation of banking accommodations in the form of discounts or loans, and of winding up the institution, which was commenced by the same law that dictated those stock arrangements. That mandate was imperative, both from general principles of legislation and of chartered provisions, and was not to be disobeyed under heavy forfeitures and total ruin to the corporation. Nor is it certain that the profits would have exceeded their present ratio, had not one dollar of stock been received in payment of debts. The Legislature had the rightful power of fixing the time for closing the career of the Bank by chartered stipulations. In fact, it had in that compact retained to itself exclusive powers for controlling and regulating its affairs, and one of the conditions of the renewed charter was the power reserved of withdrawing corporate privileges at discretion. The extinction of a larger amount of debt than was effected by stock agency, might have been legitimately prescribed by the same power through some other mode of payment. If such had been the case, the annual profits of the Bank might have fallen short of what they have done, inconsiderable as they are; yet the retaining stockholders could have claimed no more than a fair share of those profits, let them have been ever so much, under what our laws recognize as a fair percentage for the use of money. The residuary stockholders were, on no general principles of just stipulations of the law of 1822, repealing the charter or of the Bank regulations, bound to guarantee to the retaining stockholders a greater sum of profits than that realized by the institution; they surrendered on no such stipulation or agreement. All required of them was to leave twenty per cent. of their stock as a guarantee to the retaining stockholders, to insure eighty per cent. on their stock. The Bank regulations prescribed a mode, and provided a fund, by which the disparities arising under the stock arrangements, would be adjusted.

Who can say how much debt has been saved to the institution by the intervention of these stock operations? The times were difficult and embarrassing; the country was deeply involved in debt; the currency was limited; the debtors were involved; what loss might have been sustained by exacting payment in a medium difficult, if not impracticable, to be coerced from debtors, is almost impossible to divine. To compel the residuary stockholders to guarantee to the retaining stockholders legal interest upon 50 per cent. of their capital would be a proceeding contrary to the principles of co-partnerships—the obligations of the charter—and would amount to the extinction of that stock itself. Besides, are there no concessions made by the residuary stockholders? and are there no indemnities given by them to the retaining stockholders, for the liberty of surrendering their stock in payment of debts? Do not the retaining stockholders derive from this very act the exclusive right of managing the concerns of the Bank, unrestrained by the wishes, opinions or influence of the residuary stockholders? Who can deny, that the closing of the Bank has been greatly accelerated by these stock operations, and does not that fact constitute some inducement? How much too are these views strengthened by the sources from which this privilege emanated, springing from the Legislature, the lawgivers of the land, organized to promote the general good, extending its care to every interest, whether personal or corporate, endowed with full powers and authority, acting in relation to the subject of its own creation, owning and controlling, on behalf of the Commonwealth, a larger portion of its stock, and surrendering no portion of that stock; under such circumstances, such a body must be supposed to have exercised all its wisdom and all its rectitude for the common good.

In conclusion, I have to say that, from my construction of the law, the resolution of the President and Directors who were acting under that law at the time of its enactment, and the common principles of just distribution, whether individual or corporate partnership concerns, there is but one plain, just and obvious principle to govern in apportioning the remaining funds of the institution amongst the different grades of stockholders, and that principle is to take the amount of interest, discounts, &c. constituting profits, and to deduct therefrom the expenses of the institution from the date of the last dividend of profits to the period of the first distribution of the capital stock, and assign those profits to the retaining and residuary stockholders pro rata, or in equal proportions, agreeably to the amount of stock held by them respectively, and in like manner, at the period of each distribution of the capital stock make the same assignment of the profits, which have accrued within these periods, to the stockholders in proportion to the amount held by them respectively.

The foregoing report having been read, was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the Cashier be instructed to pay to the Stockholders, from and after the first day of July next, the sum of $49,828.50 cents; two-thirds thereof in silver or notes of the Bank of the United States, and one-third in notes of the Bank of the Commonwealth; and that in assigning the amount to be paid to the retaining and residuary Stockholders, he shall be governed by the following principle, to-wit: Take the amount of interest, discount, &c. constituting profits, and deduct therefrom the expenses of the institution from the date of the last dividend of profits to the period of the first distribution of the capital stock, and assign those profits to the retaining and residuary Stockholders pro rata, or in equal proportions, agreeably to the amount of stock held by them respectively, and in like manner, at the period of each distribution of the capital stock make the same assignment of the profits, which have accrued within these periods, to the stockholders in proportion to the amount held by them respectively.

Report of the Agent and Keeper of the Kentucky Penitentiary.

To the Honorable,

The Legislature of Kentucky:

The time has again arrived when it is made my duty, by law, and my privilege by a merciful Providence, to make to you another annual report, shewing you the condition of the institution, which, by the Legislature of Kentucky, has been committed to my care and management.

As to its financial concerns, I will refer you for information to the report of the commissioners, appointed by the last Legislature, to examine the institution and report its condition up to the first day of January, 1834. Those gentlemen have had access to the books, and have performed an arduous task, which, I hope, will be satisfactory to you, as far as relates to them and to myself.

As regards the health of the prisoners, it was good from the time of the last report until the commencement of the Cholera, which took place in June last, and caused us nearly to suspend business in the prison for about ninety days; during which time, we lost fourteen convicts of Cholera. All of the convicts, except two, were sick of the disease, and nearly all of them had from two to five relapses. I thought it advisable to employ six guards during the prevalence of that disease, and with that view, I had six at its commencement, four of whom took the disease, as did myself and son, leaving only Mr. H. I. Anderson, the assistant, to attend to the business, aided by such young men as could be obtained, it being difficult to procure any. Personally attended to the sick, neglecting every other business, for about five weeks (prescribing and administering with my own hands, aided by all the assistance I could obtain from Doctors Sharp and Roberts,) until I was myself attacked by the disease. I recovered and relapsed frequently, until his Excellency was kind enough to advise me to leave the place and retire to the country, which I did for about two weeks. His Excellency was also kind enough to procure Mr. Jno. J. Vest to assist Mr. Anderson during my absence. While upon this subject, permit me to impress upon you the necessity of an hospital, for so great was our distress for the want of one, that I am obliged, in justice to myself, to say to you, that a sum could scarcely be named, sufficient to compensate men to risk their lives in nursing the sick, in that awful disease, as we and the attending physicians had to do. We had two escapes from the prison, growing directly out of the want of an hospital, for we were compelled to leave the cell doors open to give air to the sick and the dying, at which time one of the convalescent prisoners let out of his cell the prisoner who opened the cell doors for those who escaped. The expenses of re-taking them was six hundred and seventy-three dollars, which sum would have built a hospital.
Since the disease left us the prisoners have been very healthy, and all things are now in a prosperous condition. Our manufactures have been in fair demand and sales have been brisk.

We have received thirty-five prisoners since my last report. Seventeen have been discharged by the expiration of sentence and thirteen have been pardoned.

It is due to his Excellency to say, that the number of pardons was increased on account of the prevalence of the cholera, several being pardoned as a reward for their attention in nursing the sick, and some to enable themselves to recover from the disease. We have now seventy-one prisoners, having had fewer than formerly, the whole year.

In his Excellency's message to your honorable body, he stated to you that some improvement in the buildings is necessary, and refers to an exhibit of a plan for the improvement, which I might suggest to you. Impressed with the propriety of changing the internal buildings, I suggested to him my ideas of a plan for a workshop and discipline, proper for our prison; and a rough draught of which, I have made, which, if your honorable body would wish to see it, shall be laid before you, with my views and explanation thereof.

I suggested to the last Legislature, in my report to them, a desire to retire from the superintendancy of the prison, stating, as my reason, a failing of my physical strength; and I would now beg leave to renew that request, as the labor incident to the office is more than I feel able to perform, and I believe that duty to myself and family, calls upon me to retire to an easier situation, and if, in your opinion, I have been faithful in the discharge of my duty, I beg of you, as an acknowledgement thereof, to grant me permission to retire on the first day of March next.

If I have been unfaithful, you will of course let me off—so that I may make my calculations that you will grant me my request; and in so doing, you have my pledge, at all times to render any assistance in my power, either to your body or to my successor. Believing you will permit me to retire, I must inform you, that circumstances required me to purchase of Gen. Hardin his stable and lot, which cost me $650. I also purchased the house in which I now live, which cost me $2750, it being the only way in which I could get possession of it, and it was the only house suitable for the residence of the keeper. I purchased it the more willingly, because the above named property suited the keeper, and would always have to be occupied by him; and I believed the Legislature would willingly purchase them for that use; and I would now respectfully offer the property at the same prices at which I purchased it, or at valuation if you prefer, in part payment of your share of the profits of the institution.

Upon referring to the report of the Commissioners appointed to examine the accounts of the institution, you will observe that they complain of the manner in which the books have been kept. I beg leave to remind you that the clerk was placed in office by the appointment of the Governor, and was sworn to keep the accounts of the institution, and was intended to be a check upon the keeper; and as it was the wish of the Legislature, I have always given up solely to the clerks the keeping of the accounts, (whose integrity I have, and do believe is unques tionable.) Some large mistakes have been made in the first part of the accounts, which can, and ought to be corrected—the greatest mistake is made against myself—to which subject I wish to call your early attention, and it can be more easily explained to you through a committee of your honorable body, which I hope to have the pleasure of meeting as soon and as frequently as may meet their convenience.

In conclusion, permit me to invite you to visit me by committee, and individually, and as frequently as may be convenient; and as you are nearly all strangers to me, I solicit the favor of you to make yourselves known to me when you visit the institution, in order that I may give you that attention to which you are entitled, and such information as you may desire in relation to the institution. All of which is very respectfully submitted by your obedient servant,

BANK OF LOUISVILLE.

REPORT from the Bank of Louisville, shewing the situation of that institution on the 1st day of November, 1833, and 1st day of January, 1834.

Bank of Louisville, January 2, 1834.

Of the State of Kentucky:

Sir—The ninth section of the Charter of this institution, requires that there shall be transmitted to you, to be laid before the Legislature during the first week of its session, an accurate and just statement of the condition of the Bank as it existed on the first day of the preceding month.

In compliance with the requirements of the Charter, such a statement is herewith respectfully submitted.

The annual meeting of the Legislature having been postponed, (by an act passed subsequent, in point of time, to this act of incorporation,) from the first Monday in December to the last day of December, thereby making it nearly a month longer than was originally intended, between the period of making out the statement and submitting it to the legislature, and presuming that a statement of its concerns brought down to a later period, would be more satisfactory to that body, I have also presented a statement of the condition of the Bank as it existed on the first instant. The Charter also requires that the Auditor shall cause the same to be published at the expense of the Bank, in a public newspaper printed at the Seat of Government, and one printed in Louisville.

I am, very respectfully, your ob't. serv't

A. THRUSTON, Cashier.

Ninth annual report of the President and Directors of the Louisville and Portland Canal Company.

By the requirements of the Charter and By-Laws of the Company, the Board present to the Stockholders, a statement of their proceedings for the past year:

Partially to carry into effect the provisions of the Act of Assembly of the 12th December, 1831, authorising the Company to increase their Capital Stock to an amount sufficient to cover the actual expenditures for the completion of the Canal, and the interest on the money expended, up to the time of opening the Canal, and to sell as many Shares of Stock at $100 each, as would accomplish that object, the board did on the 3rd of June last, make a dividend of $30 per Share on 4,665 Shares, and of $20 per share on 1,335 Shares, for interest, and the tolls before that time received and expended in completing the Canal; and also a further appropriation of $5,700 for unliquidated claims—all which amounted to the sum of $172,360, payable in the new stock of the company to the holders of Stock, of which sum, $101,500 has been liquidated by delivering to Stockholders 1615 Shares of new stock, and the sum of $10,850 remains to the credit of Stockholders, for which shares will be issued when demanded. The loan made by the Company, redeemable in 1837, may at the option of the lenders, be also claimed in the Stock of the Company—and by the provisions of said act of assembly, may with its accruing interest, be also converted into stock, which with the stock already created, will make the number of Shares 9,450, forming a capital of $945,000.

By the following account of receipts and expenditures of the Company, it will be seen, that the unliquidated debt of last year has been paid, and that the Company now owe, exclusive of the loan, about $2,700 in unsettled balances. They have received for Stone sold, and other small receipts, the sum of $1,138 55; and there remains due for Stone, about $1,500, and for Iron still on hand, about $1,500. The Stone on the bank of the Canal, by being gradually disposed of, will produce an annual income of about $2000 for many years.

The General Account of the Company for the year is as follows:

The expenditures of the past year, have been large, in consequence of the necessity of perfecting many parts of the Canal, which being of a permanent character, are not to be considered as pertaining to the annual charges on the work. A Draw Bridge has been erected over the Guard Lock, which could not be dispensed with, it being required for the accommodation of the public, as connecting the villages of Portland and Shippingport. A Dredging Machine has been constructed, and is found to be effectual in removing the mud bars, deposited by the periodical freshets of the river at both ends of the Canal. The cast iron segments on which the Lock Gates were moved, and the rollers running on them, were found to be of an improper construction, and much expense has been incurred in replacing them by others, which experience has shown, are more suited to the desired object. The wall at the upper end of the Canal, has been extended the past season, by a lateral projection of about 150 feet, the current is turned off, so as to prevent the entrance of drift wood, in all stages of water, below the top of the wall, and the river seldom rises above that height. Among the items of expense will be found the sum of $845 32, for repairs of lock walls, &c. and the sum of $714-18, for guarding and lighting the Canal. It will be recollected, that in January last, the board offered a reward of $1000 for the detection of the persons who did on the 23rd of that month, with the most evil intent, attempt to blow up the Locks of the Canal with gunpowder, in which attempt they but partially succeeded, owing, as was supposed, to a heavy rain then falling, the blast did not take effect, still the injury was considerable, and the whole appearance very alarming—the villains repeated their attempts by preparations to blow up the Stone Bridge, and by sinking boats loaded with coal, at the entrance of the Canal, to remove which, was attended with much trouble and expense. All efforts to discover the perpetrators of these acts of villainy were fruitless, except that the board were convinced that they emanated from worthless and irresponsible persons. Since the discovery of these designs, a nightly watch has been kept on the whole line of the Canal, and lamps have been erected, and are kept lighted on the Locks. An Act of Assembly has been passed, making such outrages felony, which, with the vigilance kept up by the Company, it is but fair to presume, will prevent a repetition of such base proceedings. Many of the stones piled on the sides of the Canal and all other obstructions have been removed during the past year, so as to render the Canal a safe and easy navigation to all boats navigating the Western waters, with few exceptions.

The result of the business of the past year, as shewn by the subjoined list of Boats that have passed through the Canal, must be highly satisfactory to the Stockholders, and more than equals the most sanguine expectations of the original undertakers of this great National object. The unprecedented growth and prosperity of the commerce of the Ohio, will cause a corresponding increase in the income of the Canal. By a comparison of the receipts of tolls of the last quarter of the year 1833, with that of the corresponding quarter of 1832, under similar circumstances in the stage of the river, the increase is more than three fold.

By the balance of cash in the Treasury, it will be seen, that a Dividend of six per centum on the original Stock of the Company can be made, and the board recommend to the Stockholders, that a dividend of that amount be declared and paid out to the Stockholders, on demand.

SIMEON S. GOODWIN,
JOHN HULME,
JAMES MARSHALL.
