

4-15-2005

When I Grow Up

James Wren

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.13023/disclosure.14.17>

Follow this and additional works at: <https://uknowledge.uky.edu/disclosure>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License.

Recommended Citation

Wren, James (2005) "When I Grow Up," disClosure: A Journal of Social Theory. Vol. 14 , Article 17.

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.13023/disclosure.14.17>

Available at: <https://uknowledge.uky.edu/disclosure/vol14/iss1/17>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by disClosure: A Journal of Social Theory. Questions about the journal can be sent to disclosurejournal@gmail.com

James Wren
When I Grow Up

12 November, 1952

at six years old
already lord, laid alongside a few of the finer arts crying myself fast asleep from an adjoining room my mother held back tears enough for us all as she blanketed two younger siblings tight against the chills of a cold hard
world
and the unrepentant words of sinecure fathers
shadows of men
men
 --pint-sized boys made for no exception, according to the rule book-- had to be just that,
men
real men

against such ends and odds I would venture forward, forewarned, on occasion and into the darkness and share,
"When I grow up,"
whispered between sobs,
"I'm gonna be an angel."
. . . . and somehow amidst the blur of tear-filled nights

When I Grow Up

caustic days
I pull myself up
into personal freedom knowing I'll grant my own wish in that adjoining room with a secondhand pair of wings singed dark and deep as any moonless night already spent mine would be

manly loveless and lovely
feather-light