At Long Last the Rain

GTimothy Gordon

DOI: https://doi.org/10.13023/disclosure.13.10

Follow this and additional works at: https://uknowledge.uky.edu/disclosure

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License.

Recommended Citation
DOI: https://doi.org/10.13023/disclosure.13.10
Available at: https://uknowledge.uky.edu/disclosure/vol13/iss1/10

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by disClosure: A Journal of Social Theory. Questions about the journal can be sent to disclosurejournal@gmail.com
At Long Last the Rain

At long last the rain over T'ai-chung City.
Would the grey greyness never end?
Would what white fog does to us at dusk
When we come home from taking the fields,
Alleys and arcane lanes of Pachinko parlors and sweetshops,
Filled with the smoky iron of lotus and coarse oolong tea,
Summoned afar to suburbs like spirits from abroad,
Wrapped in iceblue slickers, moist with the first wet winter frost,
Unlocking our blue doors, enshle us men and women,
Clearing the City of selling, buying, and bought?