disClosure

a journal of social theory

issue no. 9

manholes

forthcoming in

spring 2000

The upcoming issue will explore questions of masculinity, maleness, the male body, and the implications of these kinds of inquiries for gender studies more broadly. The title of the issue can alone suggest a wide array of points of entry, from questions of (w)holeness, labor, sexuality to alternative (masculinist) rationalities and phallic orderings. We have invited contributions from an array of theoretical perspectives on wide-ranging substantive issues including but not limited to psychoanalysis, feminism, poststructuralism, critical theory, marxism, post-colonialism, and queer theory.

Advance orders for issue #9 are available for $6 to individuals or $20 to institutions by sending request, mailing address, and payment to:
