Dear Mr. Sundberg:

Please find enclosed a check in the amount of $177.11. This payment covers expenses ($171.00 for airfare and $6.11 for a telephone call) incurred on February 10 and 11 with respect to your participation as the banquet speaker at the convention of the Southeastern Chapter of the American Association of Law Libraries. I will be speaking directly with Howard Johnson's in regard to the $4.34 charge for room tax.

On behalf of the chapter I wish to express our appreciation for the fine banquet speech. We appreciate the time and effort that you put into preparing the talk for our group.

Sincerely,

Ed Edmonds

Gentlemen:

I enclose my check for $6.11 to defray the cost of a long distance telephone call made during my recent stay at your motel. I do not understand the charge of $4.34 involving room and tax. My arrangement with the Southeastern Chapter American Association of Law Libraries was that the cost of my room and room tax was to be defrayed by that organization.

Accordingly, if there is any additional charge for the room, you should address those charges to that organization.

Sincerely,

Alan C. Sundberg
