A Tribute to Mac Swinford
BERNARD T. MOYNAHAN, JR.*

Judge Swinford was born in Cynthiana, Kentucky, on December 23, 1899. He received his elementary education in the public school system of Cynthiana and his advanced education at the University of Virginia Law School and received a Bachelor of Laws Degree in 1925. In 1926 he was elected to the Kentucky House of Representatives and served two terms. He practiced law in Cynthiana, Kentucky, from 1922 to 1933. In 1933 he was appointed United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky and held that position until he was elevated to the federal judiciary in 1937.

On August 21, 1937, he was appointed United States District Judge by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to fill the newly created “Roving Judgeship” for the Eastern and Western Districts of Kentucky. He served as Chief Judge of the Eastern District of Kentucky from 1963 until 1970. In 1965 he received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the Salmon P. Chase College of Law, of Cincinnati, Ohio. He was a member of the Kentucky Bar Association, then a voluntary organization, from the time he was admitted to practice and was a member of the American Bar Association for many years. He was also a member of the Judicial Conference of the United States from 1966 to 1969. Judge Swinford continued in active service as a United States District Judge for the Eastern and Western Districts of Kentucky until his death.

He died in Cincinnati, Ohio, on the evening of February 3, 1975, having just completed a protracted jury trial in Covington, Kentucky, which was scheduled to go to the jury the next morning. At the time of his death he held the second oldest commission in active service of any living member of the federal judiciary.

During almost 50 years of public life he demonstrated a remarkable combination of abilities. During 35 years of this time, I was afforded the rare opportunity to appear before him as a practicing attorney and a United States Attorney and was privileged to serve with him as a United States District Judge.

During this long period of association, I came to realize that he was a man of many talents. He was not only a legal scholar and a lawyer's judge, he was also a judge's judge. Beneath a stern exterior he had a great understanding and compassion for the frailties of human nature, which were frequently revealed to him in the courtroom.

He possessed to the "nth" degree that indefinable element known as "judicial temperament." He was patient to a fault with those who had a real cause, even though they were presenting it badly; however, he had absolutely no patience with sham or pretense.

To be present at one of his naturalization ceremonies was an ennobling experience. He never failed to convey, not only to the new citizens, but also to the native born, his great admiration for this country, its history and institutions, and above all, it's Constitution and Courts.

He traveled continually throughout Kentucky during his long tenure as District Judge and exhibited a vast knowledge of our people and of the history of the Commonwealth. Tall and erect in physical bearing, with a heavy shock of steel gray hair, he not only acted, but also looked like a judge; indeed he would have been a classic prototype for a judge in a Hollywood thriller.

In addition to his many other sterling qualities he was a great wit and raconteur. His ability in this regard is amply demonstrated in the book Kentucky Lawyer, which he authored several years ago, and by his reputation as a story teller.

He was a devoted father and family man and served for many years as an Elder in the Cynthiana Presbyterian Church.
He enjoyed being a United States District Judge and truly considered it the greatest office in the land.

He was a jurist of outstanding ability and of unquestioned integrity. His contribution to the federal judiciary and to the history of the Commonwealth will grow ever larger with the passage of time. It was one of life's great experiences to have known and to have been associated with him.
