THE NEW DEAN OF THE LAW COLLEGE.

The Kentucky Law Journal takes pleasure in announcing the appointment of Charles Joseph Turck as dean of the Law College of the University of Kentucky. Dean Turck comes with a fine record for energy and ability. The students at Vanderbilt give him a good reputation as a teacher of law, and according to the Nashville Tennessean "Professor Turck has been a power for good in Nashville, being one of those unusual schoolmen who extend their influence to the whole community by taking an active part in welfare and political campaigns." In addition to this the students thought enough of him to attend his Sunday school class two hundred strong. It takes a pretty good man to get two hundred university students into any kind of church organization.

He has begun his work at the University of Kentucky with enthusiasm. Improvements are already made or in the process of being made at his instance.

The following reprint from the directory of professors in schools which are members of the American Association of Law Schools gives his personal history:
