

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

An in vitro assessment of liposomal topotecan simulating metronomic chemotherapy in combination with radiation in tumor-endothelial spheroids

Amar Jyoti¹, Kyle D Fugit¹, Pallavi Sethi¹, Ronald C. McGarry², Bradley D. Anderson¹, Meenakshi Upreti^{1*}.

¹Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY; ²Department of Radiation Medicine, University of Kentucky Chandler Hospital, Lexington, KY

Corresponding Author: Meenakshi Upreti

555, Biopharmaceutical Complex

College of Pharmacy, University of Kentucky,

789 S. Limestone Street,

Lexington, KY 40536-0596, USA

Tel.: +1 859-218-1041

E-mail address: m.upreti@uky.edu

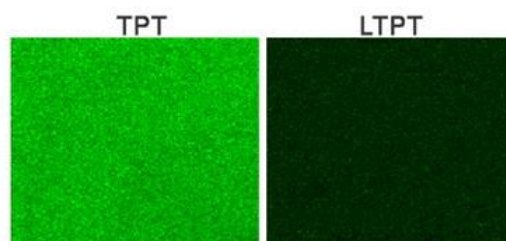

Fig-S1. Confocal images showing the intensities of TPT fluorescence ($5 \mu\text{M}$) when TPT either present as free or entrapped within liposomes (LTPT) at physiological pH7.4. Entrapped TPT exhibits extremely low fluorescence compared to free TPT in the TES culture medium.