CONTRIBUTORS

Eric Atherton is a teaching fellow at the University of Missouri-Columbia. His interests include American literature, histories, myths and legends of frontier settlement, early periodical literature, and the nineteenth-century novel.

Kit Firth Cress received a B.S. from the University of Pittsburgh in 1941, and an M.A. in history from Ohio State University in 1985. During World War Two she served as an officer in the U.S. Navy.

Robin Riley Fast teaches American literature at Emerson College, and has published essays on Emily Dickinson, Walt Whitman, Pat Mora, Patricia Hampl, and Elizabeth Bishop. Presently she is engaged in the study of Native American poetry.

John Fawell is Assistant Professor at Boston University’s College of General Studies, and has published on film and literature in such journals as Literature/Film Quarterly, French Review, Dalhousie Review, Midwest Review, and The University of Dayton Review.

Joseph H. Gardner is Professor of English at the University of Kentucky. In addition to his book, Dickens in America: Twain, Howells, James and Norris, he has published essays on T.H. Huxley, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Aubrey Beardsley, George Cruikshank, and other Victorians.

Elisabeth Panttaja teaches writing at Tufts University. She has published articles on fairytale heroines and recently completed a book on seduction and the heroine in American literature.

Ron Pen is Assistant Professor of Music and Associate Director of the School of Music at the University of Kentucky. His publications include the 1992 book Introduction to Music and articles in Music Quarterly and American Music. He is currently completing a biography of John Jacob Niles.

David A. Spaeth, Professor of Architecture at the University of Kentucky, has written extensively on modern architecture and its protagonists: he has published annotated bibliographies on the work of Ludwig Mies van der Rohe and Ludwig Karl Hilberseimer, as well as an examination of the life and work of Mies van der Rohe, which has been translated into several languages. In 1986 he edited Howard Dearnstine’s memoir Inside the Bauhaus. In 1992 The Kentucky Review featured his article on the architecture of the Tennessee Valley Authority projects.
