2-2003

Robert A. Aken
University of Kentucky, robaken@uky.edu

Click here to let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: https://uknowledge.uky.edu/libraries_facpub

Part of the Collection Development and Management Commons, and the Film and Media Studies Commons

Repository Citation
https://uknowledge.uky.edu/libraries_facpub/112

This Review is brought to you for free and open access by the University of Kentucky Libraries at UKnowledge. It has been accepted for inclusion in Library Faculty and Staff Publications by an authorized administrator of UKnowledge. For more information, please contact UKnowledge@lsv.uky.edu.

Notes/Citation Information
Published in CHOICE, v. 40, no. 6, 40-3115.

Reprinted with permission from CHOICE http://www.cro3.org, copyright by the American Library Association.

Digital Object Identifier (DOI)
http://dx.doi.org/10.5860/CHOICE.40-3115

This review is available at UKnowledge: https://uknowledge.uky.edu/libraries_facpub/112

Erickson, an AMG All-Movie Guide [http://www.allmovie.com/] editor and author of several popular culture works, including Syndicated Television (CH, Mar'90; revised 2002) and Television Cartoon Shows (CH, Apr'96), has revised Baseball in the Movies (CH, Oct'92), adding 29 films (for a total of 111 films) and revising several other entries. The alphabetically listed entries provide detailed background, including production information, and critical analysis of US "fictional" films, making his filmography more useful for reference than either Rob Edelman's Great Baseball Films: From Right Off the Bat to a League of their Own (1994) or Howard Good's Diamonds in the Dark (1997). Harvey Marc Zucker and Lawrence Babich provide good coverage of baseball films in Sports Films (1987), but their entries are much briefer, and their work has not been updated. Erickson's entries run from one page (e.g., Better Times) to 11 (e.g., For the Love of the Game). He also provides useful illustrations, and the index is excellent, with more than 7,000 references to named persons, films, and teams. Valuable for comprehensive baseball and film collections.

—R. A. Aken, University of Kentucky

Copyright 2003 American Library Association