CONTRIBUTORS' NOTES

Thomas D. Clark, Distinguished Professor of the University of Kentucky, served as Chairman of its Department of History for twenty-four years prior to his retirement in 1968. He is the author of more than thirty books, including Pills, Petticoats, and Plows: The Southern Country Store (Bobbs-Merrill, 1944), Frontier America (Scribner, 1959), Kentucky: Land of Contrast (Harper & Row, 1968), and A Century of Banking in the Bluegrass (John Bradford Press, 1983).

Samuel L. Clemens (1835-1910) published The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn and many other books under the pseudonym Mark Twain. In 1907 he received the degree of Doctor of Literature from Oxford University.

John Dreyfus has written extensively on typography and printing, recently in A History of the Nonesuch Press (Nonesuch, 1981) and Aspects of French Eighteenth Century Typography (Roxburghe Club, 1982). Long associated with Cambridge University Press, as Assistant University Printer and later as Typographical Adviser, he numbers among his many book projects the design of the library edition of The New English Bible.

Robert Siegle teaches in the Department of English at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. He has essays appearing in current issues of Contemporary Literature, Conradiana, Essays in Literature, and College English, and has just completed a book on narrative theory.

J. A. Thompson is Professor of History and Chairman of the Department of History at the University of Kentucky. He is the editor of The Collapse of the British Liberal Party (Heath, 1969) and the author of The Modern British Monarchy (St. Martin's Press, 1971).
